The conference will open Friday evening and continue through Sunday noon. Included on the program of speakers and discussion leaders are Wilmer J. Kitchen, secretary of the Student Christian Movement of New England, of Boston; Lawrence Durgin, pastor of the Congregational Church in Cornish, N. H.; and Ernest Johnson, well-known negro tenor of Boston.

The theme of the conference will be "Christianity in Thought and Action in 1941." Discussion groups will consider pertinent problems of our complex modern civilization and the potency of religion in the present world-situation. Members of the faculty and administration are looking forward to this opportunity to discuss these problems with their students. They will be joined by the local pastors and groups of interested young people from their respective churches.

A detailed program will follow in Tuesday's CYNIC.

Vermont Co-eds Enroll In Red Cross Courses

U. V. M. girls have shown their willingness to contribute to our national defense by enrolling in the Red Cross courses in first aid and home nursing.

Twenty-five girls will take a new course in home nursing at the Mary Fletcher Hospital starting Wednesday. Mrs. Alma B. Van Pelt and Miss Mae B. Spaulding, who are instructors of the nurses at the hospital, will conduct the classes. The course will include twenty lessons held on Wednesdays and Fridays at the hospital at 4.10 p.m.

Since the first course in first aid last fall, there has been an enthusiasm shown beyond expectation. At present there are forty women enrolled in the two first aid courses given by Dr. A. C. Mackay and Dr. A. Gladstone.

Four Candidates to Run in King and Queen Election

Student Body To Cast Their Votes On Feb. 20 For Monarchs Who Will Reign At Kake Walk

Election promises, conferences among campaign managers, wild publicity stunts, radio speeches, and an abundance of propaganda and other means of swaying the voter will feature the period from now until the Thursday preceding the Masquerade. For it is on Thursday, the 20th, that the student body of the University of Vermont will vote for a King and Queen for that classic and classy affair of Kake Walk.

To date only four students have announced their candidacy for King and Queen. The students who have thrown their hats in the ring are:

For King—
Fred Logan '42
Francis Nye '41

For Queen—
Jeanne Woolley '42
Elizabeth "Bibi" Deming '43

The managers for the aspiring candidates are as follows:

Jeanne Woolley's managers are: Joanna Metcalf '42, Harriet Dustan '42 and Julia Fletcher '44.

"Bibi" Deming's managers are: Janet Rust '43 and Margaret Drum '41.

Francis Nye's manager is Ransom Slack '41.

More Candidates Expected

Any other person who wishes to run for King or Queen of Kake Walk should notify R. G. Healy '41.

The King and Queen chosen by the student body on Thursday, February 20, will be crowned by Johnnie Messner, clarinet-playing maestro whose band will play at the gala Masquerade.

What promises to be the most spectacular campaign in Kake Walk history will feature radio speeches by the candidates Wednesday, February 19, over Station WCAX. Also a mass meeting of students before which the platforms of the candidates will be presented is being planned.

Last year's King and Queen were Mark O'Toole '42 and Sally Rome '42. The King was elected in the traditional manner on the basis of the campaign. Directors this year have expressed the hope that both the King and Queen will be chosen on the basis of the campaign and not on "good looks" alone.

Campaigns to be Basis of Choice

The royal pair will be chosen by a ballot of the whole student body on the basis of their campaigns. Last year's King, Monarch O'Toole, was nominated on a platform featuring:

1. A studies committee of all students under warning.
2. Loans issued to students at a negative rate of interest.
3. Late nights out every night except Sunday and then till 1.00 o'clock.
4. A guarantee to each and every girl—a handsome and intelligent escort to Kake Walk.
5. A dating bureau free.
6. Cigarette girls by Petty patrolling the Coffee Corner.
7. Automatic slide rules for all engineers.
8. A ski tow from the Sugar House to Converse Hall in operation at all times.

This year's candidates have not announced their platforms yet; but after due consultation with campaign managers, technical and economic experts, and others, they will release their platforms to the CYNIC and the student body.

University Supports Greek War Relief

Students To Aid By Purchasing Relief Pins

Faculty and students at the University of Vermont are contributing their part in the current Chittenden County drive in support of the Greek War Relief Fund.

A committee consisting of Prof. Paul D. Evans, George V. Kidder, Roland F. Doane and Leon W. Dean is in charge of the University organization conducting the campaign. Other faculty members are also assisting. All colleges of the University are contributing to the effort to help the city and county raise their allotted quota of the national fund.

An opportunity will also be given to University students to help support the campaign. In this connection plans are being made for the sale of Greek War Relief pins on the campus.

University students are now rallying to many relief activities connected with the war. Organized knitting is going forward in dormitories, sorority houses, private houses and even classrooms. Other groups are doing bandage rolling. First aid classes are filled to overflowing.

Dean Simpson to Speak at City Hall

Mary Jean Simpson, dean of women here at the University of Vermont, and Capt. A. J. Barone, public relations officer at Fort Ethan Allen, are to be the speakers at the Burlington Community Forum at the City Hall Auditorium on Monday, February 10, at 8.00 p.m. Their topic will be "Youth Today—Bread, Butter and Belief" as announced by program chairman Prof. Andrew E. Nuquist.

By virtue of their positions, both speakers are working actively with youth today, both will be able to bring to the audience a real and vital picture of youth and its problems. Professor Dykhuizen will preside at the forum, and discussion by the general public in the audience will be encouraged. This is a good opportunity for students to hear someone else talk about their troubles and problems.

Dr. Ayres To Read "I Knew Lincoln"

In honor of Lincoln's birthday, Dr. Samuel Ayres will read Ida Tarbell's "I Knew Lincoln" at the Methodist College Group meeting Sunday night. Any who have not heard Doctor Ayres should not miss his sympathetic reading of this masterpiece, and those who have heard him will wish to do so again.

CYNIC STAFF—Please leave your second semester hour plans in the office.

Pilgrim Fellowship To Hear About Indian Youth

The guest speaker at the Pilgrim Fellowship meeting to be held next Sunday, February 9, will be Rev. Rudolph Hertz of Eagle Butte, N. D. Reverend Hertz, who has worked extensively with Indians and knows their dialects, will speak on "The American Indian Youth of 1941."

A discussion will follow and refreshments will be served. Everyone is cordially invited to attend this meeting, which will begin at 7.30 in the parish house of the First Church.

EDITORIALS

Wouldn't YOU Like to be King for Two Days?

Only two men and two women have announced their candidacy for the coveted honor of reigning as King and Queen over the gay Kake Walk festivities. What's the matter with the students at Vermont? Where's your spirit? More than four students out of 1,400 should throw their hats into the ring.

The honor of being chosen as Vermont's royalty is a thing for which there should be keen competition. As everyone knows, the larger the field of candidates running in any election, the greater the fight! We urge that students think seriously about this situation and enter more pretenders to this throne.

To reign over Vermont's biggest and best social event of the year is one of the highest honors that a student can obtain. Therefore, because of its importance, we urge you of the student body to enter any candidates whom you honestly believe would make good reigning monarchs for your week-end.

The candidates in the coming campaign should make every effort to be fair and above board. Attacks on each other may lend zest to the competition but there should be a limit to the mud-slinging. It's not mud-slinging that gets the votes on Election Day but clever and well-planned campaigns.

No candidates will open an advertising campaign in the CYNIC before others do and we will give an equal amount of space to each contestant. The principle of impartiality will be maintained throughout the campaign.

Voting for the King and Queen will take place on Thursday, February 20. If this election is to be a really fair contest every eligible person should cast his vote and there should be absolute fairness in the fallotting.

You don't have to be rich, famous, or handsome to run for King or Queen of Kake Walk and if you've ever had any aspirations to the presidency, why don't you see how many of U. V. M.'s fourteen hundred votes you can capture?

Have Our Dramatic Organizations Gone With the Wind?

Referring to the brickbat that our columnist recently threw at the dramatic organizations on this campus, we reopen the issue of the lack of productions at U. V. M. In previous years Vermont has had its share of good dramas with an annual fall three-act play and one-act competitive plays. These performances offered a chance for Vermont's aspiring young hopefuls to express themselves on the stage. A former hopeful, in fact, who gained much of her training at Vermont has played in a successful Broadway production during the past year. A large number of students at Vermont always attended the college plays and would welcome the chance to see some student productions again.

It's too late to do anything about the plays that should have been presented last fall, but we hope that the officers of the two dramatical organizations will attempt to make up for these omissions this season.

Brickbats And Bouquets

By ROGER B. HUNTING

Having survived the rush of mid-years, your author is back again to dole out a fresh supply of brickbats. It is of great interest to note that today I will be able to award the first bona fide bouquet that any member of the faculty has earned. Brickbats for administration and faculty are easy to find, it is only the bouquets which come hard. So, an epoch-making event.

A BOUQUET, a large one of orchids, to Professor Moody of the "zoo" department for having given the fairest, most sportsmanlike performance at exam time which we have ever been privileged to see. It restores our faith in mankind in general and the professors at the University of Vermont in particular. For those who hadn't heard of Professor Moody's astounding and touching exhibition of what a liberal and intelligent man can do to make a college a more adult institution than a high school, I will run over the high points of the affair.

Professor Moody entered the gymnasium with his examination papers for his comparative anatomy class and passed them out. Each paper had a personal note at the top which said:

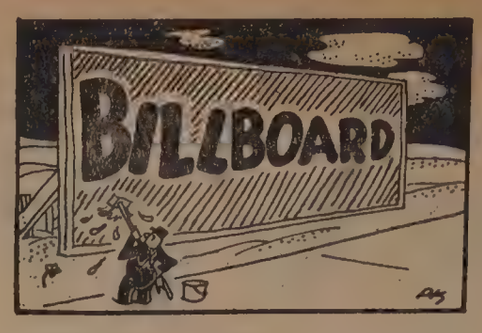
"Mr. X: Your average for the year thus far is 76.6%. If you wish to take the exam you may do so. If not, you may sign your name on the paper and get a 78 in the course."

The comparative anatomy class sat stunned for a moment, then rose as one man and walked out.

Why cannot this example be more frequently followed, especially in courses where frequent quizzes and hour exams make a student's semester average a fairly accurate judge of his knowledge? It immediately puts the student on his own judgment as to whether he is satisfied with his work to the date of the exam. It would make for better work during the semester and would relieve many a harassed student at mid-years.

Again, a bouquet to Professor Moody, a clear-sighted educator if ever there was one.

A BRICKBAT to the administration of the school which is responsible for the fact that not only do we receive no reading period before exams, but that we must forfeit the one-half day holiday on Saturday which we normally receive, to go through a tedious and often entirely useless process of enrollment. Let those who desire to change courses enroll, but why force others who have no changes to go through the bother, too, especially so close after exams when many do not even know whether they are still in school or not. M. I. T. has one week's vacation after exams so that marks may be completed, students may rest up and things generally gotten in order for the last semester.



Are one or two extra days of school so important to us that we must rush directly from examination table to the enrolling officer? I think not. Let's have a little thought put in on this matter and perhaps a change to give the students a slight break.

A BOUQUET to the Kake Walk directors for their efficient work in organizing the affair this year, earlier than ever before which gives all concerned more time to get ready to put on a top-notch performance. This bouquet may be shared by the honor societies and other workers who have turned out splendidly to fold and address some 10,000 circulars to be sent to parents and alumni.

A BRICKBAT to those who don't seriously fill in the questionnaires which the Faculty-Student Council has distributed. They are not meant as a personal probe into student life, but as an aid in a general survey of student activities and ways in which they may be improved. Accept them in the spirit in which they are given.

BUT A BRICKBAT to the Faculty-Student Council for making their questionnaires so long and complex for the "filler inner." And a sort of warning to be very careful of how the material found in them is used. Students are notoriously in opposition to regulation in any branch of their activities, so let's not try to achieve too much from some of the statistics which may be found.

Well, I'll see you next week, and here's a final big bouquet to the faculty and administration for every time they stretch a point and keep a border-line case of flunking out in school. Let's give breaks —they cost us nothing.

Knoxville, Tenn. (ACP).—Scores of colleges have been observing Sadie Hawkins day, but the University of Tennessee claims to have the original.

Al Capp, creator of Sadie Hawkins, Li'l Abner and other characters of Dog Patch fame, and the United Features Syndicate, have given Tennessee sole claim to the title of "Sadie Hawkins Days Originators" on college campuses.

As a feature of the recent observance at Tennessee, the campus poolroom was open only to women one afternoon.

On the Ice

This business of writing in the future about something already past is silly to say the least. What we need is less of these Thursday night games. Let's talk about intramurals and such. If you haven't been out to the rink yet, you should pay it a visit. There's something doing there every minute. Besides being used by the student body for plain and fancy skating, the rink features in fraternity hockey competitions and races. Just last week a regular schedule of individual races was run off. Some of the boys even bring their figure skates. Great fun if you can keep your toes from freezing and your feet reasonably close together and headed the same way. The rink really offers every student a chance to get outdoors and engage in a little healthy exercise. Why not try it some day? And, of course, if it's amateur skiing you're after, Centennial is a fair practice ground. 'Ware the brook.

Coming Event

Speaking of winter reminds us that the I. S. U. meet is only a few weeks away. Frankly, we're all steamed up about it. Many of the teams participating will feature outstanding stars. Middlebury's hopes rest with the Gale brothers, a very formidable duo. Merrill Barber is the chief Norwich threat. Of course, if MacLane and Meservey of Dartmouth compete, they will make the going even tougher because these two Indians are among the outstanding ski stars in the East. Even this early, the entry card promises a fine array of talent and the meet should really flash some thrilling competition.

We do wish a little more publicity would be given this sporting event. Recently a schedule of important ski meets was listed in the New York Times but we failed to see any mention of the I. S. U. get-together. Certainly it deserves mention. After all, the Dartmouth Carnival isn't the only winter sports event in the East. Why not a little more active advertising?

The Kake Walk

We're wondering if "walkin' fo' de kake" shouldn't be rated as a sport. Very few athletes train harder or practice more than the participants in this event. And the actual competitions are about as grueling as a six-day bike race. Why not make it an official sport, then we could have play-by-play or step-by-step accounts that would bring the reader out of his chair—dancing?

Cats Seek Important Victory from Cadets

To Oppose Horsemen At Northfield Monday

The Cats will be aiming for their third straight win when they tangle with the Cadet quintet Monday night at Northfield. The sloppy ball handling evidenced by the Horsemen in their last tilt with the Cats presages bright hopes for Vermont in the race for Vermont collegiate honors. However, Major Don McCallister of Norwich has two aces in the forms of Bob Dean and Johnny Jones, a freshman sensation who has rung up 22 points in the St. Mike's tilt, leading his team to the most startling upset in several years of state play, and tying Vermont for first place.

The Cats will probably feature the man for man defense which so successfully stymied the Horsemen in their last encounter, and fast floor work and ball handling may also be expected.

For the Cadets, Jones and Durkee will handle the forward spots, while Giant Joe McCloskey, a menace to the Cats on the hardwood as well as the gridiron, will play center. Dean and Captain Hughes will fill the guard positions. Backing up these regulars will be a host of experienced reserves who have seen much seasoning in past games.

Vermont will probably use the same line-up which has clicked so well in the past two tourneys, with Capt. Paul Corley and Dick Healy in the front court, Hank Beauchemin at center, and Don Maley and Frankie Taylor at guards.

Collins Exhibits Excellent Time in X-Country Trials

Ski Team Enters Dartmouth And Middlebury Carnivals

The ski squad under the careful guidance of Coach Ev Bailey has been conditioning itself for some big meets to be held in the near future. The boys should be in excellent physical condition and should profit by the experience garnered from the Downhill Championship Meet at the Nose Dive last Sunday. Monday afternoon Coach Bailey held cross-country time trials. Capt. Dave Collins was first as usual with "Goody" Goodell a good second. Dave's time was really outstanding as he covered two loops of the plotted course. It is difficult to compare the respective times of the participants because some only went one loop and darkness closed in before the completion of the workout.

Downhill: Dave Collins, Brud Sutton, Art Patterson and Bud Pierce.

Slalom: Dave Collins, Sutton, Patterson and Pierce.

Cross-country: Collins, Goodell, Bob Goss and Pierce.

Jumping: Collins, Goodell, Sabe Rising and Goss.

Combined Downhill and Slalom: Collins, Sutton, Patterson and Pierce.

Combined Cross-country and Jumping: Collins, Goss, Goodell and Pierce.

The entries in the Middlebury Meet may differ from those of the Dartmouth Carnival if some member of the squad shows sufficient improvement to warrant a starting call. The work of Don Marburg in the slalom has pleased Coach Bailey. C. P. Smith, III, who is a new candidate for the team, has quite a reputation as a jumper and is also a very good cross-country man. Coach Bailey hopes to develop him into a varsity standout.

The team will leave Thursday morning for Hanover in order to arrive in ample time to practice a bit. If this proves impossible the squad will stop at Norwich Thursday afternoon and work out briefly there. Friday the cross-country and downhill will be run off at Dartmouth and Saturday is the time scheduled for the slalom and the jumping.

The U. V. M. skiers' activity will not end at the Dartmouth Carnival, for on Sunday the team will be entered in the downhill and slalom races at Suicide Six in Woodstock in competition for the Fisk Trophy. The boys will return Sunday evening.

In preparation for all these meets the boys will go to Underhill Tuesday afternoon for jumping practice, will work out lightly on the cross-country Wednesday, and will set sail for Dartmouth the following morning. Good luck, fellows!

Seven Co-eds Receive Basketball Membership

The combined team of Roberts House, Crowe's and Grassmount was victorious over Robinson Hall in a game played on Tuesday for the basketball tournament. The game was an exciting one, with the close score of 15-10.

Writers Planning U. V. M. Pageant Production

At the mid-winter meeting of the League of Vermont Writers at Southwick on Saturday, February 15, at 1.30 p.m. there will be a discussion on plans for presenting a sesquicentennial pageant. Mrs. Dallas F. Pollard of Burlington will be in charge of the special group on pageant production.

Spaulding Is Threat To Kitten's Record

Saturday night, February 8, the Kittens travel to Barre to be entertained by the Spaulding Crimson Tide.

Spaulding is valiantly trying to keep out of the cellar slot of the Northern Interscholastic League, now occupied by the Green and Gold of St. Albans.

Thus far, the Kittens are experiencing, what any sports writer would consider, a very successful season. Sparked by their mainstay, Larry Killick, whose timely passing and eagle eye shooting have been instrumental in the previous wins, the frosh basketeers should find no difficulty in adding another game to the right hand column of ye olde black book.

Overconfidence does not pay, either does crime! Despite the fact that the Barre boys haven't been fairing so well in the Northern League, they nevertheless, have latent basketball powers, which might materialize in the Kitten encounter. With Setein, stellar right guard, and Collins, high scoring forward, as the main cards of the Spaulding machine, the Crimson men will undoubtedly plug to the finish.

The probable lineups:

SPAULDING	VERMONT FROSH
Ayers, l.g.	l.g., Didinsky
Setein, r.g.	r.g., Manheim-Kempter
Bassett, c.	c., Orbin-Desso
Ziter-Riddle-Barini, l.f.	l.f., Goodrich
Collins-Aja-George, r.f.	r.f., Killick

Intramurals In Full Swing

In one of the pre-midyear interfraternity games Phi Delta Theta defeated S A E 33-27. Led by Logan who scored 12 points the Phi Delts had little difficulty in holding their lead in the first half. However, S A E made its bid in the third and fourth periods and though seriously hampered by lack of time, they made a game attempt to even up the score. The Phi Delt team consisted of Logan, Mayforth, Cronin, Daniels, and Spasyk with Pache, Carpenter and Mott the substitutes. S A E started Utley, Kennedy, Massero, Salmon and Shaw. Keough and Strachon subbed.

Sigma Nu trounced the faculty 25-8 in another of the intramural basketball tourneys with E. Reid, Neil, Wright, Sawyer and Bloomer playing for Sigma Nu. The faculty squad, composed of Leeder, Glosboy, Weitz, Levine and Dodd virtually outclassed by the Sigma Nu quartet made a vain attempt to stall the Sigma Nu drive. Subs were Long, Flemming and J. Reid for Sigma Nu and Irwin for the faculty.

A T O edged out T E P 24-21 in a contest which was continually on the fire. The A T O's started Koladza, Bicoulis, Dorian, Noyes and Warden, while Bloom, Shuman, Kunken, Weg and Davidoff started for T E P. Goldberg, Sedlis, Savin and Itzkowitz were T E P subs.

Hockey Schedule Announced

With basketball fast approaching its finish, Kappa Sigma, with four victories and no defeats, is presently leading league A, and the Independents, with one less victory but no defeats, top league B. The Kappa Sigs have one more game to play with the Phi Sigs before concluding their season. A loss will insure them a tie for first place, since their nearest competitor, the Phi Delts, have three triumphs and one defeat.

The Independents will oppose a strong A T O aggregation in their final contest. A T O has a record of three and one, and they can very easily prolong the season by beating the Independents, thus forcing a play-off to decide the league championship, providing the Independents win four straight.

A two out of three game series will decide the basketball champion.

The intramural hockey schedule has been posted by the athletic department. Eight teams are represented and they are divided into two leagues, the A and B. The A league is composed of Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and the Independents; the B league comprises Sigma Nu, Tau Epsilon Phi, Sigma Phi and Delta Psi.

The winner of each league will meet in a two-out-of-three play-off for the championship. If by chance the play-off cannot be held, the team scoring the most goals shall automatically garner the championship. Failure to play at the designated time will result in a forfeit.

Sigma Nu maintains a two-point advantage over A T O and thereby holds first place in bowling. With 40½ points to their credit the leaders are none too secure, since they have played two more contests than their rival. Delta Psi is in third place with 32 points, and T E P holds fourth place, having 30⅔ points.

Catamounts Score Decisive Victory Over Holy Cross

Corley Leads Scorers With 15 Points In Convincing 47-35 Win

Once again the U. V. M. cagers proved that they turned over a new leaf in the basketball wars and will be a serious contender for the state crown by overwhelming an itinerant Holy Cross quintet last night at the Memorial Auditorium before a disappointing gathering of about 1,300 by a score of 47 to 35.

The Green and Gold combined a steady man-to-man defense with a tricky offense, including an effective fast break, to net their fourth victory of the current campaign. Only stellar work by the Cross guards, Ruggiero and Scondras, kept the score down.

After three minutes of play Hamilton of Holy Cross broke the ice with a layup under the hoop. Taylor sunk a foul, but Connelly looped a set shot from the side. A Corley step shot, a twin counter and a foul by Doherty put the Cats in front to a lead they never relinquished. In the first half Vermont's passing was rather ragged, while Holy Cross whipped the ball around but were slow to take advantage of their opportunities.

The second half was more or less a repetition of the first with Vermont slowly pulling away. Coach Evans substituted freely and the second team finished up the ball game.

The outstanding man on the floor was Capt. Paul Corley of the Catamounts, who not only kept the spectators wide-eyed with an assortment of difficult shots as he dropped in 15 points but also was accredited with several assists. "Bones" Hamilton of the Cross was their leader with 13 points. He was also a key man in the recovering off both the offensive and defensive backboards. "Red" White did an outstanding job in holding the Crusader forward, Connelley, scoreless in the last half after he had dropped in 9 points in the first period.

Students Quizzed About Activities

Questionnaire To Show Needs of University

Having expressed high hopes for the success of the recently circulated student questionnaire, Dean of Women Mary Jean Simpson yesterday requested the cooperation of the student body in filling out and returning the questionnaire on or before February 10. Dean Simpson further stated that the questionnaire has been issued by the Faculty-Student Council, which is anxious to propose any changes that the tabulation of questionnaire returns shows are wanted and needed by the student body, and added that no answers given in the questionnaire will be used for any purpose other than to get a cross-section of student body opinion. It is, therefore, important that every student returns the questionnaire so that it is evident that the results represent student opinion.

Typical of questions appearing in the questionnaire are: "How do you spend your leisure time?" "How many hours a day do you study?" "How many hours a week do you spend in curricular and extra-curricular activities?" "What additional facilities do you think that the University ought to provide?"

Questionnaires are to be returned to the dean's office not later than February 10. Students are urged to cooperate with the council and to fill in accurate and complete answers, so that the results may be used to their best advantage.

Cynic Resumes Tues. Evening Broadcasts

Ronald Slayton Gives Talk on Art in Vermont

The CYNIC resumed its Tuesday evening broadcasts February 4 when Myer J. Levin '41 welcomed the radio audience with the familiar strain of "Cotton Babes." Guest speaker of the evening was Ronald Slayton, prominent Vermont artist who gave a very informative talk on "Hope for Art in Vermont." Mr. Slayton, a humorist in his own right, cited the advantages and disadvantages to the struggling Vermont artist. He pointed out that there were very few art patrons in Vermont due to the limited budget of the typical Vermonter. Hopes for the Vermont artist are many as stated by artist Slayton: The Vermont Artists' Guild of Manchester, The Arts and Crafts Association, the Little Theatre Movement of Weston and East Middlebury, and others. In closing he pointed out that the bill now pending in the State Legislature calling for the organization and financing of an Arts and Crafts Commission is one of Vermont's biggest hopes for Vermont art and art educators.

Ruth Hopkins '41, as Exchange editor of the CYNIC reaped a large bundle of information from the exchange and told the listening audience what other colleges were doing. R. P. Kenney '41, as a member of the committee in charge of Kake Walk in inviting the public to participate in the Kake Walk festivities, gave a concise and vivid account of the significance and tradition of Kake Walk.

As part of the program recordings of Johnny Messner's music were played; Jeanne D'Arcy performed the vocal.

V. C. A. to Sponsor 3-Day Conference

A. F. Amee to Direct Proceedings This Week

Widespread interest is being shown in the campus-wide student religious conference which the Vermont Christian Association is sponsoring this coming week-end. Nearly fifty special invitations have been mailed in an effort to bring students, faculty and pastors of the local churches together in a discussion of the problems of our present-day needs in relation to the permanent values of our Christian heritage.

In an interview with a CYNIC reporter, Alfred F. Amee '43, director of the conference, said in part, "Today we are facing a great need for Christian living. The horrors of war, again let loose in the world, are testing and challenging the faith of every individual. Without the deeper religious experiences of matured knowledge, it is all too easy to give way to the forces which destroy the teachings of Christ.

"Conscious of this need for a deeper spiritual life and for a revival of religious faith, the Vermont Christian Association is sponsoring this coming week-end its first annual Student Religious Conference. It is an attempt to stimulate true Christian living and a more active participation in chapel and vesper services on the part of both students and faculty of the University."

Ernest Johnson to Sing

The theme of the conference will be "Christianity in Thought and Action in 1941." This perennial question has a new urgency against the background of "this present moment of chaos and crumbling standards of value." It is a time when we search anew for those things that are indestructible—a time of need for men "dedicated to judging time by eternity and to living by what they regard as the fundamental and the permanent in the midst of change."

The conference program will move from an opening analysis of the forces which seem to be molding the present world scene to a statement of the meaning of Christianity and an effort to determine the demands it places upon us for being and doing.

The opening session will be held Friday evening at eight o'clock at Southwick Memorial. On the evening's program will be Wilmer J. Kitchen of Boston, secretary of the Student Christian Movement of New England, speaking on "Christianity in Thought" and (to be announced), discussing "Christianity in Action." Ernest Johnson of Boston, well-known negro tenor, will sing, accompanied by Mrs. Youngert.

Outing Club to Show Ski Pictures Thursday

The Outing Club is offering another group of ski pictures to be shown Thursday night at Southwick at 7.30. Two very outstanding movies have been obtained, "Skiing With Hannes Schneider" and "Ski Revels." Since skiing has been so very popular on the campus and the big I. S. U. meet is less than two weeks away, a large crowd is expected. Come and bring your friends. The admission is twenty-five cents.

Butch Challenges Frats in Walkin' fo' de Kake

Frosh Debaters To See Action Thursday

Varsity Will Play Host to A. I. C.

As the second semester opens, freshman debating also gets under way. The squad's first engagement of the year will take place against the Randolph High School team Thursday evening, February 13, at 7.30, in the Art Library of the Fleming Museum. R. Norton '44, G. Goldsmith '44 and J. P. Felopulos '44 will uphold the affirmative of the question "Resolved: that the nations of the Western Hemisphere form a permanent union." On February 17, another affirmative team on the same question will go to Montpelier to debate against the high school team there. Those taking part from U. V. M. will be: Margaret Lillie '44, Carolyn Brown '44 and Barbara Zimmerman '44. Both affirmative and negative teams chosen from the freshman squad will journey to Middlebury February 24 to debate on the same topic against Middlebury High. On March 7, team members encounter St. Johnsbury High in another set of double debates. The question will be "Resolved: that the power of the federal government be increased." The University will send both an affirmative and a negative contingent.

The U. V. M. varsity team will meet the American International College debaters from Springfield, Mass., here on February 18. D. Zwick '43 and B. Glass '43 will uphold the affirmative of the subject "Resolved: that the nations of the Western Hemisphere form a permanent union." At Middlebury College on February 19, the annual Vermont-Middlebury prize debate will be held. Members of the squad, most of whom are members of Tau Kappa Alpha, national forensic society, expect to be in top form for this important contest. The teams have made a splendid record so far this year losing only one decision debate.

Cynic Radio Program Features Prof. Prentice

The next CYNIC radio broadcast will be held Tuesday, February 11, at 8.30 p.m. The main speaker is Prof. H. A. Prentice of the physical education department. His subject is "The Health of Our Youth in the National Defense Program."

Three others are to be included on the program. Bill Pye '41 will give a review of the latest Kake Walk plans, Huddee Zwick '43 will present a survey of the campus news, and A. F. Amee '43 will give an announcement regarding the conference to be sponsored by the Vermont Christian Association. These meetings are to be held February 14, 15 and 16 and will consist of speakers and discussion groups.

Jitter Bugs Enjoy Joe College Dance

To the lilting strains of the Catamounts, Betty and Joe College enjoyed themselves immensely last Saturday evening in the University gym. Everyone came in his most comfortable clothes—the sloppiest naturally, and spent the evening in happy relaxation after the past few hectic weeks.

One of the highlights of the evening was the beautiful voice of Doris Doerfler '44, who sang several selections which were very acceptable to the merry-makers present. A second big feature was the jitterbug contest in which Evelyn Gallagher '44 and R. Hamilton '43 literally jumped to fame as winners, with Joyce Bone '42 and Bud Perkins '44 a close second.

Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Pond, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Marvin, Dean Simpson and Mr. G. L. Millikan chaperoned this informal dance which was the first of its kind to be staged on the U. V. M. campus. The dance was a strictly "Dutch treat" affair in which "Betty" shared twenty-five cents of the expense with "Joe."

Fifteen cents of each quarter contributed went to the fund for Britain sponsored by the new War Relief Committee of the University.

Anselmo to Play With University Orchestra Tonight

Pappoutsakis to Have Assistance of Three Student Conductors

Tonight the University Orchestra makes its initial appearance of the year at Southwick under the direction of Mr. Pappoutsakis. Presenting an entire symphony for the first time, the orchestra of twenty members will present a varied program assisted by the University Glee Clubs.

Mr. Anselmo, violin soloist, promises to be the main drawing card. Many will be interested in the work of the student conductors. But of main interest to the music-going public is the first public appearance of Mr. Pappoutsakis at Vermont. A man of great experience, he should be able to present a concert worth writing home about.

About the student conductors it should be mentioned that they are studying orchestration and conducting under Mr. Pappoutsakis. Louis Pichierri '41, conductor of the prize-winning Sigma Alpha Epsilon chorus in the interfraternity sing for the past few years, needs no introduction. Paul Poulin '41, who did such an excellent piece of work in last year's Brahms' "Requiem," will be in charge of the Women's Glee Clubs. Eleanor Lewis '41, a newcomer this year, is a graduate of Curtis Institute of Music of Philadelphia and is studying music education here.

It is interesting to note that several members of the orchestra are also members of the Vermont Symphony Orchestra.

The Glee Club, which is to sing this evening, is the same group which will go to Durham, N. H., next spring.

The program is announced as follows:

I. Symphony No. 2 in D Major..Haydn

The Registrar Gives a Frank Explanation to Vermont Students—

Rumors about the condition of the University have been flying fast and furious around the campus. Most of them are either absolutely false or based merely on conjecture. Mr. Kehoe, the registrar of the University, has clarified the situation by releasing the following information to the student body:

"The situation is not serious enough to do the University any harm in itself. The only danger is in the untimely publicity which is being given to it. If the students and the public would wait until the trustees have taken definite action, they would be satisfied with clear and complete facts. Until then, there can be no basis of fact in reported changes.

"The trustees are naturally considering ways and means both of curtailing expenditures and of increasing income. They have not as yet decided upon any increase in tuition, nor upon any reduction in salaries. They are planning to reconsider the whole structure of scholarships, but obviously this will not affect the endowed scholarships or any from sources other than the University itself. As to the closing of the Fleming Museum, this is not likely although it is quite possible that its program may have to be curtailed.

"At present, business is going on as usual. The only economy effected so far is in the maintenance of buildings; no contracts are being changed, but only emergency repairs are being made and few are necessary.

"There is no reason for our scholastic rating to suffer. No courses will be omitted; teaching and research will go on as usual. There is no reason to fear a high percentage of changes in the faculty during any one year. This is, after all, the most important thing in an educational institution. Other activities—athletics, organizations, and so on—are mostly student-supported through the Student Activity Fee and dues, and so should not be affected at all.

"Finally, it should be stated again that there is absolutely no implication of dishonesty on the part of any person concerned. Careful accounts are kept always, and are audited each year. Any person could go over them and find nothing amiss. The present problem has arisen simply through the fact of the budget for the present fiscal year having been accepted with an unbalancing figure. This was feasible because of the money which President Bailey would probably have brought in as gifts, judging from past years. In the present period when we lack a leader and for a year or two while a new president is becoming accustomed to our situation, such gifts cannot be expected.

"Everyone should realize that the University of Vermont is an institution which is large enough, old enough, and has high enough standards to weather a minor crisis. The confidence and consideration of students and others is asked while the trustees are confronting this new problem."

"Vermont Party" Backs F. Nye for King of Kake Walk

Fellow students, we, the Vermont Party, give you for our candidate for Kake Walk King, Francis Nye. It is an honor and our privilege to give you a true University of Vermont man. When we say "University of Vermont man" we mean that he is neither a fraternity man nor an Independent; he is a University man, a man of all the campus. His interests do not lie in some fraternity, giving his everything to that fraternity, but his whole spirit is given to the University, and when we say "University" we mean you and you and you.

Ask anybody; they'll say, "Sure, Fran's a swell guy; he's everybody's friend," and that's a fact. He has had a rough time in obtaining a college education, working it down as it comes along, but if anyone (anyone, mind you) needs a helping hand, he's always there, willingly and smilingly, a true friend in time of need.

Whatever he attempts he is looked to as a leader, a leader in his class, socially and scholastically. Who is better fit to be our King of Kake Walk? The Vermont campus, the students as a whole, desire a King who is their representative. That can be found in "Frannie" Nye.

We present the Vermont's platform to their party, the students.

1. Any co-ed's intuition knows Nye will cut tuition.
2. Establish a permanent north wind to keep the offensive odor coming from the farm headed in the opposite direction.
3. An elevated board walk will be established between the Old Mill and all dormitories and outlying buildings to keep the co-eds' feet dry.
4. More co-educational courses for the Engineers and Aggies so they will have more social contacts.
5. A special taxi for "Butch" and his invited guests.
6. There will be a smoking lounge in all buildings for co-eds.
7. There will be a new beach wagon given to each fraternity and sorority for the exclusive use of the members.
8. An elevator will be established in both the Old Mill and Science Hall for those students who have classes on the fourth floor.
9. A chair lift will be established between the Sugar House and the campus.
10. A new football stadium with heated, windproof stands will be erected.
11. A special set of transparent books for "Whitey's" use in the library.
12. Centennial Field will be moved to the back campus with open gates for convenience.
13. Moonlight saving time with the first breath of spring, and free parking after sundown on the back campus.
14. Mid-year and final exams will be limited to name, address and grade desired, only.
15. There will be a penny-a-week plan for Phi Bete keys.
16. Tuition with interest will be returned with each diploma so that everybody can get an honest start in life.
17. There will be no first period classes.
18. A date bureau will be established for bashful boys.
19. There will be ample size athletic scholarships to put U. V. M. on the map.
20. We will have Glenn Miller for all razz-dazzes at the present prices!

With these points in mind, we are confident that you will support your party, "The Vermont Party."

Campus Comment

Converse Hall, Feb. 8, 1941.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Yesterday a CYNIC reporter called to see if the members of Converse Hall were going to enter the ice sculpturing contest. We were undecided at the time but after considering and rejecting many suggestions, decided that a model of Betty Grable would be quite apropos. Due to an "Argentine Night" which came at the completion of our "Artistic Masterpiece," we are left without an entry.

Even with this serious setback, we still have hopes of competing in the contest and will welcome with open arms any ideas similar to our original.

Obediently yours,

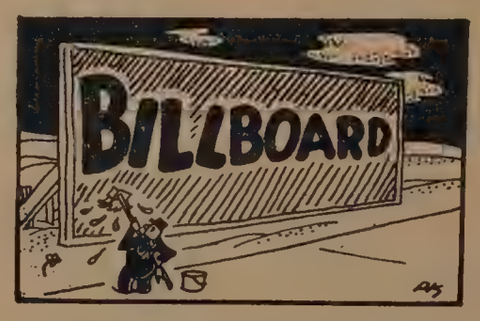
THE MEMBERS OF CONVERSE HALL.

Kake Walk Has 'Beat the Band' With Its Choice of Orchestras

Speaking of Kake Walk, Masquerade and Johnnie Messner (and who isn't nowadays?), let's take a look at the long line of professional bands and orchestras that have graced U. V. M.'s campus in past years. In the first place that long line is a good deal shorter than anticipated for the tradition of the Masquerade Ball is a comparatively recent one, having been begun in 1934.

In that year no professional band made its appearance, but the Barbary Coast Band of Dartmouth College offered its services and was evidently a great success. In the following year the Masquerade featured a Battle of Music between Sid Carsley of Vermont and the Black Panthers of Middlebury. And in 1936 the Kake Walk directors let loose with a splurge and secured Jan Campbell and his orchestra. From then on until 1941 the CYNIC write-ups of each year's band had one thing in common. They all advertised the current orchestra as being "the finest band to appear here in all time." And, in fact, the directors have consistently outdone themselves in getting the best for their money.

Jan Campbell's band of 1936 was known as the Dean of College Band Leaders and was described as specializing in that "snappy, swinging type of rhythm that is all the rage today."



In 1937 it was Charley Barnet and his orchestra, "a figurehead in the list of modern band leaders" as the CYNIC called him and a disciple of Benny Goodman.

Another exponent of the Benny Goodman type of swing music officiated at the 1938 Masquerade in the form of the Hudson-Delange orchestra, rated at that time with Clyde McCoy and Horace Heidt. If you remember that far back, Will Hudson arranged "White Heat" and "The Organ Grinder's Swing," while Eddie Delange was the lyricist of "Moonglow," "Tormented" and "Solitude."

But the outstanding piece of experience choosing came in 1939 when the directors, together with Middlebury, secured the services of Glenn Miller and Marion Hutton, "a sensational swing artist whose singing is receiving the plaudits of orchestra audiences with increasing regularity." Although Miller was described as an "up-and-coming big name," not even the foresighted directors could have seen that within a year he would have swung his way to the top.

Last year it was Tommy Reynolds who crowned the victorious king and, together with vocalist Patsy Parker, contributed to the Kake Walk festivities. Reynolds, a rising clarinet player, fashioned his band after the smooth Artie Shaw style and was predicted as having as great a future as 1939's Glenn Miller.

This year Johnnie Messner and his orchestra will be at the controls on Friday night and without a doubt will keep up the high standards set by the orchestra in former years.

If Votes She Could Glean, Jeanne Would Be Queen

Today while Kake Walk's the main attraction
I'm verbally asking for a little action.
I ask you for care in making your choice
Please lend me your ear before lending your voice
In choosing a Queen to rule over you
Students, professors, and cotton babes, too.
Cleopatra had charm, was a nifty, a beauty;
But while barging around she neglected her duty.
Fair Helen of Troy passed up a good deal
To show all the world Achilles' a heel.
The English loved Lizzie as she loved her men
But she shattered Lord Essex with the stroke of a pen.
Empires have been since the world was begun
And the fairest of maids for Kake Walk have run.
Of all the dynasties from here to Ming-Chu
I would greatly prefer to rule over you.
If you elect me then none can complain
Come to our Kake Walk and let Woolley reign.
A little more action, a little less talk.
Toss your vote to make Woolley Queen of the Walk.

JEANNE WOOLLEY '42,
Candidate for Queen.

Sports Cast

Music and Stepshots

Mid-years seem to have left the Cats intact. Apparently they intend to stay in the winning column. But a little more smoothness would not be amiss. Against Holy Cross the quintet was effective but ragged. The passing was pretty erratic. Holy Cross on the other hand handled the ball well but what happened to the ball when heaved at the basket is another story. The inability of the visitors to capitalize on scoring chances helped the Cats no end. Only the outstanding play of Scondras, Ruggiero and Connelly kept the Holy Cross outfit in the game. In the second half with the Cats getting better and better, the Purple just faded out. Corley was plenty hot as he demonstrated that only one hand need be used on scoring plays. It was a satisfactory evening but a little intensive drill seems called for to iron out some of the wrinkles acquired during the mid-year layoff.

The band was there doing its darndest. Overtures, marches, and "Cotton Babes" were the order of the evening. Someone suggested advertising games from hereon as double features—concert plus basketball. Not such a bad idea. It might solve the attendance problem.

Scoring Marathon

According to the papers St. Michael's and Norwich have turned radical and thrown restraint to the winds in their mania for scoring. We trust that 78-58 marathon the other night has emptied both quintets of scoring enthusiasm. The Cats would then have a clear road to the title. Barring an unlooked for loss to the Cadets, the Cats are well on their way with only the dangerous Ryan men standing in the path of progress. The final meeting should result in plenty of strenuous ball-playing. The Cats have come a long way since early in the season and we're betting they won't be such easy marks when the Purple hoopsters start firing again.

Odds and Ends

Says Sabe Abell and he ought to know—this talk of cancelling the baseball trip is merely rumor.

Our pick for the school-boy hoop champion—Cathedral High School. The parochial boys are plenty hot. Their ace forward, Evelti, threatens to set up a better record than his last year's record-breaking performance. Strongest foe—Burlington—has as yet not shown power sufficient to nose out the Green and White.

Let's hope the I. S. U. meet has better luck with the weather than the Dartmouth Carnival. By the way you'll be seeing Merrill Barber of Norwich and others who are topnotchers on the carnival competition at the meet.

And that seems to be all the news we can scare up.

Frosh Set To Meet Strong V.J.C. Team

Hope To Avenge Only Defeat Of The Season

Only two games remain before the Vermont freshman basketball squad closes a season which has thus far been one of the most successful in years. Because of its stunning victory over Spaulding during the week-end the team will be in the best of spirits when it faces Vermont Junior College on Thursday.

V. J. C. is one of the few teams which can claim a win over the U. V. M. freshmen, but the Kittens are determined to avenge that setback by garnering a smashing victory. It will be recalled that the V. J. C. win was of the "skin-of-the-teeth" variety, for U. V. M., after having held a substantial lead throughout most of the game, folded up in the closing minutes and lost by one point. Despite the defeat, the Kittens seemed to have by far the superior team.

Since that game the freshmen have improved greatly and have taken highly-touted opposition into camp. It will be surprising if U. V. M., led by sharp-shooter Larry Killick, should lose, especially since the Kittens will be playing on their home court.

Kittens Overcome Spaulding Team

The Vermont freshmen stepped out of their class again last Saturday night when they tackled the Crimson Tide of Spaulding High, but still managed to eke out a narrow 48-28 win. It was the first ball game for the Kittens in three weeks.

Coach Sherry Fogg shifted his men around so that the whole squad saw very nearly equal action. The game was featured by poor ball handling and inaccurate shooting on the part of the freshmen, while Spaulding was held in check by the fine work of Bennett and Manheim. Reno Conti proved to be a thorn in the side of his old Alma Mater as he played a heady floor game and set up numerous freshman baskets.

Catamounts Edge Out Horsemen In 45-43 Win

Healy Leads Team To Victory And Puts Vermont Ahead In State Series

Don Maley's follow shot of a long heave by Frank Taylor in the last second of play at the Norwich Armory Monday night brought the University of Vermont a 45 to 43 victory over the Norwich Horsemen and first place in the standing in the State series race.

Vermont led 22 to 16 at half time, but was trailing by two points halfway through the second 20 minutes of play. From this point on the game was a see-saw battle with the lead changing hands frequently.

An obligato note in Vermont's victory symphony was the 17-point scoring spree of Dick Healy. Always a good floor man but never an exceptional scorer, Healy exhibited a complete reversal of form in leading the Catamounts to victory. The other Vermont points were evenly divided among the remaining Green and Gold wearers.

Jones, Dean and McCloskey scored 36 points of the Norwich total with 14, 11 and 11 counters, respectively. Norwich's ability to capitalize on their foul shooting because of Vermont's roughness nearly brought victory to them. The Horsemen scored 11 points via the free throws.

Men's Intramural

Hockey

In the inaugural game of interfraternity hockey Kappa Sigma proved itself to be the team to beat when they whitewashed a formidable Phi Delta Theta combination 6-2. Although the score gives the Kappa Sigs a decided advantage, the Phi Delts displayed a strong offense and quite a few times they broke away in a three-man attack only to lose the puck because of a pass mishap. The winners played more conservatively but demonstrated a fast and powerful attack. Al Senuta was outstanding for the victors, while Charley Shortle performed admirably for the losers.

The scheduled Sigma Nu and Delta Psi encounter has been postponed, likewise the Tau Epsilon Phi and Sigma Phi contest because of the weather.

Bowling

The Independents and Sigma Phi bowling teams procured shutouts over their opponents, Kappa Sigma and Faculty, respectively, 7-0. A weak Lambda Iota quintet took the measure of T E P 5-2, winning by one pin. A T O muffed a fine opportunity to garner the lead from Sigma Nu when it was upset by Phi Sigma Delta 6-1.

A survey of the standings shows Sigma Nu still on top with 40½ points in nine matches. A T O retains second place with 39½ points in only eight matches. The Phi Sigma Delta upset may prove to be a serious handicap to the A T O.

Sigma Phi slips into the third spot as a result of its decisive win over the Faculty. The Sigs have 36 points but have played ten contests. The dark horse of the league, if any, should certainly be the Independents, who in six matches have 30 points to their credit. The future will tell whether the Independents can keep up their pace, for they have two "double-headers" in a row. Phi Sigma Delta occupies fifth place with 33½ points in eleven contests. Phi Sigma Delta has completed its schedule and it is unlikely that it will hold this position long with T E P and Delta Psi right on its heels.

The five remaining teams in order of rank are as follows:

6. T E P ..... 32⅔ pts., 8 matches
7. Delta Psi ..... 32 pts., 9 matches
8. S A E ..... 25 pts., 7 matches
9. Faculty ..... 18 pts., 8 matches
10. Lambda Iota ..... 11½ pts., 9 matches
11. Kappa Sigma .... 9 pts., 9 matches

U. V. M. Has Collection Of Plants Made By Ethan Allen's Wife

One hundred twenty-five years ago, a mother set for her fourteen-year-old daughter the task of collecting local plants and making a herbarium. Today, this herbarium is in the possession of the University of Vermont. And with it, too, is a collection of mounted plants prepared by this mother with a view of keeping her pupil at work by force of example. Doubly interesting are these collections when we find that they were made by Mrs. Jabez Penniman who had been Mrs. Ethan Allen, and her daughter Adelia Penniman.

Students of Vermont history remember the story of the marriage of General Ethan Allen at the age of forty-seven to the young widow of twenty-four, Mrs. Frances Buchanan. After the General's death, five years after their marriage, Mrs. Allen returned to her former home in Westminster. In 1793 she married Jabez Penniman and they settled at Winooski Park in Colchester in the old homestead opposite St. Michael's College on the top of the hill. Here on February 9, 1801, was born the youngest of Mrs. Penniman's children, Adelia Augusta Penniman. Adelia later became the wife of Robert Moody, a native of Ireland, who was one of Burlington's earliest physicians.

These herbaria, presented to the University by Adelia's granddaughter, Elizabeth I. Howe of Stamford, Conn., were made when Adelia was about fourteen. Mrs. Penniman was noted for her interest in botany and had many rare plants in her house and garden. Together mother and daughter roamed the fields and meadows surrounding Colchester and Burlington and collected a total of about 140 plants. Each made her own booklet, consisting of double sheets of white paper, approximately seven and one-half by thirteen inches, tied at the back with silk ribbon. The specimens were secured to the sheets with the utmost neatness. Some plants are now broken, and here and there are merely stems. While all are faded, the colors of red and yellow are easily recognized.

Excluding duplicates, there are about 75 to 100 different specimens in the two collections and most are labeled in faded ink in delicate script. Most of the specimens are correctly named and labeled as to class, order, botanical name and common name and a few are not named.

The romantic touch in Adelia's herbarium is the use of the language of flowers—the meaning of the flower according to the charming sentimentality of the day. Thus, we find Sage followed by the words, "Woman's province is home." False Lupine tells us that it means "Indignation"; and Wild Honeysuckle is labeled, "I strive with grief."

Mrs. Penniman's plants are mostly of the home variety, such as catnip, cucumber, fringe-tree and so forth, while Adelia's are, for the most part, wild plants.

The mystery surrounding these collections concerns the source of the labels used in classifying the plants. Studying Vermont flora at such an early period, one did not find textbooks to consult in the matter of class names, order, botanical names and even common names. Going back over the botanical history of the state, we find that the books which they might possibly have consulted included ones by Pursh, Michaux, and Linnaeus.

Frederick Pursh of Austria, who came to America in 1799 and remained until 1811, visited Vermont in 1807. His text, "Flora Americae Septentrionalis," in two volumes, published in London in 1814, would hardly have reached the hands of Mrs. Penniman and her daughter in 1815 and the descriptions of the species in this book are all in Latin.

They may have used Michaux's "Flora Boreali-Americana," published in Paris in 1803. Andre Michaux was sent by France to Vermont in June, 1792, and he traveled through the Champlain Valley and prepared a list of about 175 plants which he observed.

Or, it might have been Linnaeus's "Species Plantarum." While Linnaeus did not visit Vermont himself, his famous pupil, Peter Kalm, was sent here in 1748 by the Royal Academy of Sweden, charged with the task of exploring this country botanically. He spent several weeks in the Champlain Valley and became interested in the Laurels. Linnaeus dedicated the genus Kalmia to the honor of his pupil who had studied it in what is now Vermont.

These herbaria by Mrs. Penniman and Adelia are the oldest in the collection at the University of Vermont. It is also possible that these plants are the oldest Vermont specimens extant in this country with the exception of the Pursh collection which is now in the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Science.

While the University has larger and more important collections of plants, these two yellowed booklets mean very much to Vermonters and the University for they draw them closer to one of the state's greatest heroes, Ethan Allen.

Steam Automobiles Used A Century Ago

Ann Arbor, Mich. (ACP)—Except for an act of the English parliament, the automobile might have been developed fifty years earlier than it was, records in the University of Michigan transportation library disclosed recently. Old books and prints in the library indicate that from 1825 to 1840 there were over seventy steam buses in regular commercial use in England.

These steam automobiles had been so much improved by around 1840 that stage-coach owners and innkeepers, fearing the competition, brought pressure upon parliament, which taxed the steam cars out of existence. These buses ran with surprisingly little mechanical trouble and at speeds exceeding twenty miles an hour. As far as is known, there were no fatalities and very few accidents.

President Killick Is Amiable at His Press Conference

Just before Christmas vacation (if you can remember back that far) the class of '44 elected its officers. As a result of that election Lawrence Findley Killick, Jr., was chosen to guide the destiny of his class in the capacity of president. Believing that the readers of the CYNIC would be interested in a few pertinent facts about a future "Big Man On Campus" your reporter hastened to request a few minutes of his time. "Sure," said an obliging voice over the phone, "shall I wear a gardenia so you'll know me?" The next day the voice, accompanied by 5' 11" of young manhood with a bright blue flannel shirt (no gardenia) and a crew cut arrived for the cross examination.

We started the ball rolling with a few vital statistics. Larry it seems is a local boy, "and please don't write that yokel boy," he requested, having been born and bred in Burlington. After graduating from Burlington High in the class of '39 he spent a year picking up additional crumbs of learning at Kimball Union. Since joining the ranks of '44 at Vermont he has distinguished himself in several ways. Besides being president of his class, Larry is, we gather from reading the sports page, the shining light of Coach Sherry Fogg's Frosh quintet. He also scrubs the CYNIC and has recently become a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

To Enter Journalist Ranks

When asked what sort of thing he wanted to do after leaving college, he admitted that journalism appealed to him the most. Upon asking if he had had any experience in this field we were rather overwhelmed to discover that he was the editor of his high school paper and editor of the Kimball Union Year Book. After finding out that his father is a sports reporter on the Free Press, we decided his ability was hereditary (in spite of what the psych. book says).

"What do you think of conscription? Would you go cheerfully if your number were called?" were the next questons fired at our hapless subject. "I think it's a very good idea. Sure I'd go cheerfully. Only instead of going into the regular army I'd like to go to some place like Randolph Field and take up aviation."

Next we maliciously asked, "Who do you think is going to win the war?" and sat back and watched our victim squirm. Finally he uttered these words of wisdom. "Well, I've been losing a lot of sleep over that lately, but I don't know. Just write down something and it will be as good as anything I could say."

Likes Figures, Not Math

"What do you think of girls in general?" This one seemed to make him squirm also, but we finally gathered from his somewhat incoherent remarks that he approved of them and that he definitely believed co-ed institutions are the best.

The first ice having been broken the conversation now took on a lighter tone and we discussed everything from music (he prefers Tommy Dorsey's orchestra and does not go for classical music as a rule) to food of which his favorites are steak and cherry pie. His favorite song of the moment is "Frenesi." His favorite actress is Bette Davis. Among this likes are dancing. His dislikes include Math.

His one and only hobby seems to be athletics, particularly basketball and swimming. "You know, though," he said with a rueful grin, "although I've lived in Vermont all my life I can't ski or skate."

At this point in the interview duty called, and, bidding your reporter a somewhat hasty good-by, he was off for a couple of hours of communion with a basketball.

Cold Weather Aids The Coffee Corner

The University Stores' eating places, the Coffee Corner, Sandwich Cellar, and Converse Kitchen, are most popular in cold, slippery, and stormy weather. Then the students and faculty realize what an accommodation they are and are very glad to fill up on the good food which is offered at these places. The main dishes, such as soups, salads, meats and vegetables, sell more promptly, and all pastries, such as cookies, cakes, and pies, are gone usually before the noon whistle. By the way, all these pastries are homemade, being baked in our kitchen at Converse.

On other days the favorites at our eating places are coffee, coca-cola, and hot chocolate. The regular, cinnamon, and chocolate doughnuts, which are also made at Converse, are very popular as well as those enormous raised and glazed doughnuts which are a Gelineau product.

It is a natural that with so many ways for students' money to be spent that the five cent sandwiches, peanut butter leading, should be the most popular food.

The eating places were installed because so many students came for classes, particularly military, without their breakfasts and tried to subsist on candy bars. By opening all these restaurants forty-five minutes before the first class we have offered the students a place to eat right and at the proper time. Sensible students have made the most of this opportunity as will be shown by the crowds at the counter in the early morning. As only Converse Kitchen has the facilities for more elaborate meals we cannot expect to take the place of a regular boarding house, but have tried to more than meet the needs of the students on location.

Dartmouth College Has Active Defense Group

Hanover, N. H. (IP).—Defense activities at Dartmouth College will not become "an agency for faculty witch-hunting," Pres. Ernest Martin Hopkins has assured the college faculty through the American Defense Dartmouth Group. This statement was made in a letter to the faculty chairman of the Defense Group shortly after the new college year began.

"My conception of the Committee," he stated, "is that it is established and should exist as an independent sovereignty and that it should operate as seems most intelligent and most desirable for full protection of Dartmouth's status as a liberal college. . . . As constituted, it could not become an agency for faculty witch-hunting. It should be a self-governing and self-directing agency for making democracy a colorful and positive thing rather than a pallid and dilettante pose."

News Summary

Bucharest, Mon., Feb. 10—Great Britain broke off diplomatic relations today with Rumania, into which Germany has poured hundreds of thousands of soldiers, and arranged to turn over her Rumanian interests to United States care. (The British Minister to Bulgaria recently notified the Bulgarian government, according to diplomatic sources in Sofia, that Bulgarian military targets would be bombed by the RAF if a way were opened through Bulgaria for German troops to get at Greece or Turkey.) The Bucharest paper, Curentul, said that nightly blackouts of Bucharest will continue permanently because "there is danger of air attacks."

Washington, Mon., Feb. 10—Terming the Lend-Lease legislation "downright Fascist," Joseph Curran, CIO official, testified today that the bill would put the United States in war and give the President power to regulate labor and destroy trade unions. Meanwhile Senator Austin (R. Vt.) counselled the Republican Party today against "blind opposition" to the legislation.

Rome, Mon., Feb. 10—At least seventy-two persons were killed and 226 injured in the British naval bombardment of Genoa, northwestern Italian port, at dawn yesterday, the Italian high command reported today.

The T E P's, under the direction I. Goodman '41, have an idea whic sounds very good. They are going to t to make a cameo of Ira Allen.

Great Enthusiasm Expressed

Most of the sororities will formulat plans for their ice sculpture on Monda night. Gail F. Klinger '42 and Myra D Gray '44 are in charge of the Tri Del sculpture. Cathryn Van R. Grier '4 heads the Theta undertaking. At presen the pledges are planning the Alpha Ch sculpture.

So far, only three dormitories hav shown an inclination to enter the contest At Allen House, Janet Dike '43 is i charge; at Sanders, Frances A. Roger '41; and at Slade, G. Louise Mann '41 Other dormitories will probably enter th contest later.

Converse, not to be outdone, promises "the most beautiful thing on campus." According to Anonymous, they will construct a large deer (something on the scale of the Dartmouth skier, no doubt) to represent "the stags of Converse."

Seriously, though, the fraternities, sororities and dormitories are showing great enthusiasm for this ice sculpturing contest and the innovation promises to make for a Kake Walk bigger and better than ever before.

Y. C. A. to Sponsor Christian Meeting This Week-end

Ernest Johnson and Wilmer J. Kitchen to Assist at Meetings

Plans are completed for the First Annual Student Religious Conference which the Vermont Christian Association is sponsoring this week-end under the direction of A. F. Amee '43. This conference is the first of its kind ever to be held on the Vermont campus and is an attempt to stimulate and enrich the religious life of the students and faculty of the University. It is open to all denominations and special effort is being made to encourage their participation. Tonight will be free night out for those girls on the campus who attend tonight's program at Southwick.

Nearly a hundred special invitations have been mailed; news of the conference is being followed in the Free Press and Daily News; and the CYNIC radio program featured a conference pep talk over WCAX Tuesday evening. An unusually large number of members of the faculty and administration have already signified their interest and plans to take an active part in the week-end's program.

Ernest Johnson of Boston, well-known Negro tenor, arrived last night; and guest speakers from Massachusetts and New Hampshire are expected today.

The Vermont Christian Association is rendering an invaluable service to the University in sponsoring this conference. Much time and effort has been spent by the director and his committee to make it a success. All that is needed now is strong backing by the students and faculty. And if they are really desirous of living creatively and for purposeful ends and are interested in broadening their outlook on life, toward true Christian living, they will, through this conference, live Christianity in thought and in action in '41.

The program will consist of three parts:

Friday evening, 8.00 o'clock, Southwick.
"Christianity in Thought."
Wilmer J. Kitchen, Boston, Secretary of Student Christian Movement of New England.
"Christianity in Action."
Rt. Rev. Vedder Van Dyck, Burlington, Bishop of the Vermont Episcopal Diocese.
Music.
Ernest Johnson, Boston.
Mrs. Youngert, accompanist.
Open discussion.
Saturday afternoon, 2.30 o'clock, auditorium of the Fleming Museum.
Informal mass meeting (30 minutes).

Valentine Dance Tomorrow Night

Good clothes will replace old, on Saturday, February 15, at Southwick when the Health Council's annual poverty dance becomes a Valentine Dance. Due to the numerous other costume dances in February, the Council decided against the Sadie Hawkins Dance originally planned.

There will be dancing from 8.30 to 12 o'clock to the music of Red Dower's five-piece orchestra. Sarah Wilson '42 who is in charge, promises a good time for all.

The chaperones will be Professor and Mrs. Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Perry. Marjorie Abell '43 and Jane Lyons '41 are planning the decorations and Hester Carver '41 and Madge Duba '41 the refreshments.

Tickets at the price of 99 cents a couple are being sold by all members of the Health Council.

Campaigns For Kake Walk Show

Plans Being Made For Mass Meeting

The annual campaign for the honor of reigning as King and Queen at the 1941 Kake Walk is now well under way. As we go to press eight students have announced their candidacy for King and Queen. The would-be kings and queens are as follows: Jeanne Woolley '42, Bibi Deming '43, Dawn Nichols '41 and a newcomer to the race, Hilda Paquette '42, for queen, while T. K. Malone, Jr., '41, F. P. Logan '42, J. D. Sawyer '42 and F. W. Nye '41 will contend for the coveted honor of king. The King and Queen will be chosen by the student body on Thursday, February 20. From now until that fateful day a battle royal in the form of catchy slogans, clever platforms and speeches, and wild publicity stunts will be waged by the various candidates. Their majesties, whoever they turn out to be, will be crowned by band leader Johnny Messner on the evening of February 21 at the annual Masquerade Ball.

Thus far the campaigns are still in the poster stage. Gaudy signs on every wall inform the student that "I'd walk a mile for that Deming smile" or subtly insinuate that he should vote for Nichols by showing a dawn among a shower of nickels. Lapels this season are sporting cardboard lambs labeled 100% woolley, as is also a pair of red woolen underwear suspended from the ceiling of the Coffee Corner. More spectacular publicity stunts may be expected shortly. A mass meeting of students to whom the platforms of the various candidates will be presented is being planned for Saturday morning, February 15. R. G. Healy '41 is in charge As yet a few of the candidates have not fastened every plank to their platforms but they are hard at work consulting with their managers and it is expected that results will be forthcoming soon. On February 19 Station WCAX will feature radio speeches by the potential kings and queens.

Two More Aspirants Join King and Queen Contest

Hilda Paquette '42 will run for Kake Walk Queen. Her managers will be Beryl Gardner '43 and Jean Stewart '41.

J. D. "Dave" Sawyer '41 has announced his candidacy for Kake Walk King. His manager is N. D. Tucker '42.

Methodist College Group

"The Burma Road" will be the subject of a talk by the Reverend Sisson at the Methodist College Group meeting Sunday night. The talk will begin promptly at 7.30, so members are urged to come early.

NOTICE

At a meeting of the Interfraternity Council, Tuesday evening, February 11, it was unanimously voted that the Interfraternity Sing should be restricted to Greek-letter fraternities who are members of the Interfraternity Council.

R. P. KENNEY,
President.

Many College Teams to Compete in I. S. U. Meet

Large Number of Ski Enthusiasts Expected To Attend Well-organized Program of Events

Kake Walk has always been the most looked-forward-to week-end on U. V. M.'s social calendar, but never more so than this year, when, on February 21 and 22, Vermont will sponsor one of the largest Intercollegiate Ski Union meets, with women representatives from ten colleges and men skiers from eight schools. Not only U. V. M. students, but ski enthusiasts from many other colleges will be enthusiastically anticipating this holiday which will be crowded with various ski events.

Connecticut College for Women, St. Lawrence, Cornell, Syracuse, Skidmore, New Hampshire, Middlebury, McGill, Wellesley and Radcliffe are planning to send three women each to compete, while eight men, a coach and a manager will be sent by Harvard, Dartmouth, Norwich, New Hampshire, Middlebury, Maine, Amherst and Syracuse. The participants are expected to arrive Thursday, as the first men's event is scheduled for Thursday afternoon. The men skiers will reside and eat at Converse over the week-end, while Slade, Redstone and Robinson will provide facilities for the women. The University town girls are to be thanked for their cooperation in inviting residents of the three dormitories to their homes during the week-end and thereby providing not only rooms but means for their guests.

Under the able and enthusiastic leadership of Dorothea Smith '41, who is in charge of the meet and who, incidentally, is responsible for organizing and advancing the women's ski team, the committees have been working hard to make Vermont's first big skiing meet a success. A full and interesting program has been arranged, and with the luck of pleasant weather and good skiing conditions, the meet will not only be one of the best in this part of the country, but become a permanent feature of Kake Walk weekend.

Program Crowded with Events

The program is as follows:

Thursday. Arrival of men in morning will be hailed with a welcome at the gym, with Staff and Sandal and Key and Serpent receiving. The participants will register, pay fees, receive tags and instructions. One member of the two junior honorary societies will be assigned each team as a host.

Lunch will be at 11.30 at Converse.

Campaign To Be Held February 18-19

The U. V. M. War Relief Committee through its chairmen, Margaret Crowley '41 and Jean Evans '41, announces that Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, February 18 and 19, have been set aside for the benefit of war relief in Greece.

On those days the committee and its helpers will be in the Old Mill and in some of the other college buildings with a supply of attractive buttons. Some of these show the famous evezones who have done such heroic work in first holding, then driving back the Fascist invaders. If time permits, it is hoped to have some of the relief workers in Greek costume.

The committee feels that it is of great importance for the students of the University to be associated, if only in a small way, with those who are defending liberty everywhere in the world. The little nation of Greeks had the superb courage and resolution to stand up to an aggressor six times its size and incomparably better armed. Its success, gained by the united and extraordinarily valiant efforts of every part of the population, demonstrates again what a resolute people can do in defense of their freedom against almost overwhelming odds. But that success has been won at the cost of huge sacrifices and bitter suffering. The Fascists, now aided by Nazi aviation, finding themselves unable to penetrate the Greek front, have been reduced to bombing the cities and communications in the rear. Great destruction and destitution has resulted. Worse still is in prospect as the Nazi machine prepares to move in its turn against those small but gallant people. They need every kind of medical supply as well as clothing, shoes, blankets, etc. The students of the University can justly feel proud to help a people who have given such a moving example of courage and stamina.

Dean Simpson Is Enthusiastic

Dean of Women Mary Jean Simpson, enthusiastic about the Student Religious Conference which the Vermont Christian Association is sponsoring this week-end, in an attempt to stimulate greater participation in chapel and vesper services has addressed the following statement to the students:

"It is an axiom that 'man does not live by bread alone.' That truth has been repeated so often that its force may very well be lost, especially upon a generation which has been obliged to center most of its effort upon the practical problem of getting a start in a peculiarly difficult world.

"It is nevertheless true that cultivation of the spirit as well as the mind and the hand is necessary for all of us, and never more so than in a world threatened by violence where fear lurks in the mind even though there are as yet no bombs falling on the rooftops and no Gestapo lurking in the dark.

"At heart we are all a bit uneasy, not altogether because of the fear that the violence of total war may spread or that we may be involved in it, though that is not impossible, but more because we all share in a feeling of guilt for the suffering and horror that is rampant throughout the world.

Kake Walk Stunts Well Under Way

As Kake Walk draws daily nearer the finishing touches are being added to the fraternity stunts. Out of the ten fraternities and Independents who are eligible to compete four have already been eliminated and one more will be eliminated at the dress rehearsal Monday evening at 8.30 at the Memorial Auditorium.

Each group submitted a complete plot in detail together with a complete statement of all proposed properties and lighting with an explanation of their use to a committee before February 6, and no changes in the original stunt as written will be allowed without approval of the committee.

The five fraternities selected will be reimbursed up to an amount of $30 for expense of properties and any other expense incident to the perfection of the stunt. The fraternity having the winning stunt will receive an additional prize of $50.

Since this is the University's Sesquicentennial year it is expected the stunts will have an anniversary savor which will add zest and fervor to the occasion.

"Man Does Not Live By Bread Alone"

Significant this evening will be the opening of the Student Religious Conference which will mark the first conference ever to be sponsored by the Vermont Christian Association. The conference directors have been fortunate in securing two excellent speakers, Mr. W. J. Kitchen of Boston and Rev. Lawrence Durgin of Cornish, N. H. Both these men have talked with a large number of American youth and their addresses and discussion promise to be most helpful.

Religion is a vital force in American life about which many college students are neglectful, indifferent or cynical. Students are inclined to forget the active, moving and inspiring part that Christianity must play in American society. The horrible, shattering European war has shaken the faith of many young Americans. They read of bombings, deaths and destruction and gradually they come to realize the relative unimportance and instability of one's material possessions which can be destroyed by a single bomb.

Churches are human institutions set up by men centuries ago as a medium through which they might strengthen each other by worshiping God in a faith common to Christians throughout the civilized world. That same Christian faith is just as powerful, just as meaningful, just as inspiring, and just as true as it was two thousand years ago.

One writer recently wrote, "What I like most about going to church is that it turns one's attention, willy-nilly, to higher things for at least a little while each week. Man does not live by bread alone; he requires some cultivation of the spirit. Even when I have wandered into a church where the minister is dull, the music bad, the interior ugly, I have been compelled by my very presence there to think about things loftier than my daily affairs. That, I know, has been good for me."

"In a world haunted by violence, churches do their human best to represent the spirit. The nations where the churches flourish are the democracies, where the spirit of man is free. How can we defeat the destructive dynamics of Nazism and Communism unless we employ the constructive dynamics of the spirit?"

The Greeks Need Help, Too!

World War II has been filled with surprises of which perhaps the most admirable and astounding has been the heroic and brilliant fighting of the comparatively small Greek forces against the army of Benito Mussolini. Confident of an easy victory, the Italian forces were driven back by the Greek army in some of the most heroic and amazing military action of modern times.

It is for these heroic Greeks that the U. V. M. War Relief Committee is sponsoring a drive for Greek aid on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Greek war relief buttons priced at fifteen cents will be sold to the students. All the money received from the sale of these buttons will be given to the local Greek aid group who will send the money abroad.

We've remembered the British and aided them. Why not help the heroic Greeks by buying a button next week?

Kake Walk Tradition Started in 1893

The annual production of Kake Walk has tread a colorful although not the easiest path. The first unorganized "Cake Walk" of forty years ago was the result of a military ball which never materialized. In December, 1893, Captain Tutherby of the military department tried to stage a "flevered" military ball. In spite of all Captain Tutherby's efforts, however, the plans for the ball were never carried out. Greatly disappointed, a group of students led by Frederick T. Sharpe '95 decided to put on their own affair in the loft of the Old Mill. They posted signs inviting everyone to "Cake Walk," the first entertainment of its kind to be produced at the University.

The next year the students decided to hold their "Cake Walk" again. This time a keg of beer was brought to the Old Mill loft to add to the celebration. The next morning when some of the beer dripped down into the old chapel below the doom of the next year's "Cake Walk" was sealed.

In 1896 the ban of the faculty was lifted and a public and more formal Kake Walk was held. From that time until 1904 Kake Walks were held in the State Armory. During the years from 1904 to 1938 the University gymnasium was used for Kake Walks.

With the growing popularity of Kake Walks the gymnasium became too small to accommodate its large audiences. Consequently in 1939 Kake Walk returned to the city and was held for the first time in Memorial Auditorium.

It is very probable that the need of the none too flourishing athletic department kept Kake Walk alive; for in its early years all the proceeds of Kake Walk were turned over to the athletic fund.

As the career of Kake Walk progressed more clever and startling stunts were added. Cups in addition to cakes were given to the winners. Now after forty-three years of Kake Walk new features are still introduced.

Thus the forty-fourth Kake Walk, with the importance of the sesquicentennial celebration added to its tradition and romance, promises to be greater than all its predecessors.

I. R. C. Council to Meet This Afternoon

The Council of the International Relations Club will hold a meeting Friday afternoon, February 14. The president, Margaret Drum '41, together with the faculty advisor, G. L. Millikan, the vice-president, T. F. Crimmin '41, the secretary, A. H. Bottomly '42, and the treasurer J. M. Evans '41, will work out a plan of activities for the second semester.

Brickbats And Bouquets

By ROGER B. HUNTING

A Bouquet.—To Dr. Nuquist, whom your correspondent noted carefully tearing down Kake Walk stickers stuck to the walls of the Old Mill, muttering, "tsk, tsk, defacing property." A noble sentiment, Dr. Nuquist, and one which the candidates for King and Queen might well heed. Stick up the posters with thumbtacks but let's take it easy on the permanent fixtures. After Kake Walk they don't have too much appeal.

A Brickbat.—For the prospective kings for their lack of action in the campaign thus far. Where is Logan's campaign? He's been up a week now and not a poster or sign is yet in evidence. Let's not have the same sort of dead campaign as we had last year. The primary trouble with the Kake Walk election is that they are bound up too much with fraternity poltitics. It seems to me that the first reason that the elections were established was to allow fellows to run for office with a fair and open campaign with no holds barred. As it is now the election has degenerated to the point where a candidate merely forms a combine for himself and then sits back and awaits the election, safe in the knowledge that he will have a certain number of votes assured and hopeful that it will be enough to swing the election.

Let's have a return to the old system, an open campaign without the background of the combines, for after all, if a combine appears to be powerful enough to win without much campaigning, the campaign will just die out.

Fraternity politics have their advantages in giving us the training we will need in the business world after college where one expects to run into "combines" and "dirty politics" but let's keep it out of the Kake Walk Campaign which should be run on a basis of good fellowship and a wild and woolly campaign (no advertisement intended—this column must be non-partisan).

May I remark that this comment is not aimed at any candidate or fraternity—it applies equally to all—let's have a campaign from here on, and may the best man win.

A Bouquet.—To Mr. Kehoe, for writing the most reassuring and level-headed commentary on the present financial situation of the University. What with rumors going around ranging from the cancellation of the southern trip to the complete shutdown of all activities, it is a pleasure to hear a calm voice assuring us that the whole institution is not about to collapse. What a relief. Now let's forget about it, let the University take care of its own finances without our advice, and settle back to a normal existence.

See you next week.

Collegium

The guest speaker at Collegium Sunday evening will be Dr. C. S. Leonard, assistant professor of pharmacology at the Medical College. Doctor Leonard's interest in stamps is well known and his topic will be "Stamp Collecting as More Than a Junior Hobby." He will also have some of his albums, especially those on Sweden, to illustrate his talk.

Refreshments will be served after the meeting. Everyone is cordially invited.

Doings At Southwick

Dancing classes will meet this week and next week according to the following schedule:

The class for the advanced group will meet tonight, February 14.

Next week classes are as follows:

The beginners' group will meet Tuesday, February 18.

The advanced group will have its meeting Wednesday, February 19.

All dancing classes meet at 7.30 and last until 10.00 at Southwick.

Keep these notices in mind and we will see you all there.

Campus Comment

February 11, 1941.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Doubtless the recipient of the "first bona fide bouquet" which your columnist (Brickbats and Bouquets) has been able to award any member of the faculty (Tsk! Tsk!) should beam blushingly and retain a becoming silence. On my way to the clothier's to purchase a larger hat, however, I should like to make one or two comments.

After describing how the members of the comparative anatomy class, arrived at the place of examination, were allowed to decide for themselves whether or not they would take the examination, your columnist said that they "rose as one man and walked out." Now, that isn't quite accurate (and for more reasons than that both sexes were included in the class). It is true that for most of the class the examination grade would have made little difference in the final grade. Here was John Doe with a B average in the course. It was "dollars-to-doughnuts" that he would write a B examination. So why should he be required to write it and I to read it (particularly at the fag end of the examination period)? But about five people in the class were so situated scholastically that the examination grade might have had a significant effect in deciding the final grade. It is worthy of note that four of these people stayed and took the examination. I think your columnist did not know this, otherwise he would have made capital of it in his plea for more adult treatment of students. The fact that students for whom the examination might have been a deciding factor did not follow the course of least resistance but rather chose to stay and work for two or three hours affords evidence of maturity of viewpoint on the part of upperclassmen, at least.

Finally, I waive all claims to initiating a revolutionary educational policy. In fact, it cannot be a policy at all, since in it, surprise is of the essence. Human nature (adult and otherwise) being what it is, the important review necessitated by preparation for an examination would be slighted if students anticipated that they might not be required to write the examination after all. It is the sort of thing which cannot be repeated frequently (students planning to enroll in my courses in the near future, please note!).

Museum Restores Portrait Of Former U.V.M. President

Among the portraits of men who had an important part in the University's development, which will hang in the new Waterman administration building, is that of the former University president, Worthington Smith. The portraits, awaiting the completion of the new building, will be hung eventually in the archives room which has been planned for them. President Smith was a Williams graduate, and, as seventh president, headed the University of Vermont affairs from 1849 to 1855.

The President Smith portrait, damaged in a fall several years ago, was, like many old paintings, also discolored by time. The treatment is to remove the varnish, which protects the paint, with a special solution for the purpose, and clean the painting. Horace B. Eldred, assistant director of the Fleming Museum, who has restored a number of old paintings, did this work, afterward applying a fresh coat of varnish. He explained that, while oil paints will sometimes last for several hundred years, the varnish which protects them deteriorates sooner and has to be replaced. The tears in the canvas caused by the painting's fall were repaired, and a very large old-fashioned frame, which was obtained from the Billings Library, was fitted to the portait by Antonio Gelineau, Museum technician. The picture also had to be placed on a new stretcher, owing to its damaged condition. Whole and bright again, it is ready for display among the illustrious company of men who contributed to the building of the University of Vermont in its first 150 years.

Mr. Eldred, who has acquired an extensive experience in restoring damaged and time-faded paintings, says that while experience is of some help from one repair job to another, each usually presents new problems, which have to be attacked from a different angle. Some paintings have gilt frames, made of plaster, from which pieces have been broken. They require new plaster and repainting. Torn canvases are not rare in the repair shop, and even parts of the original work are often missing. In one such case, Mr. Eldred secured the services of a Vermont artist, who painted in the part of the picture that was missing. Recently cleaned and varnished by Mr. Eldred have been several old paintings, part of the estate of Elliott W. Shipman of New York, which had been stored until recently in a building on the Robert Roberts estate, bequeathed to the University last year, through the will of Mrs. Roberts.

Supply of Pharmacists Is Inadequate for Needs

New York (ACP).—American colleges and universities are not supplying enough pharmacy graduates to meet the replacement demand.

So declares Dr. Charles W. Ballard, dean of Columbia University's College of Pharmacy.

With about 2,500 jobs for licensed pharmacists available every year through replacements alone, Dean Ballard reports it is hardly likely the annual output of graduates will exceed 2,000 in the next few years. The nation-wide reduction in number of pharmacy students, he said, has been caused by increased education requirements and the general economic situation. The shortage, he added, is beginning to give concern to owners of pharmaceutical establishments.

"Another factor," he continued, "is the number of pharmacy graduates entering fields other than retail pharmacy, and this ranges between 20 and 25 percent of the total output of the colleges."

Vermont Orchestra Presents Concert With Glee Clubs

Mr. Pappoutsakis Conducts, Mr. Bennett Directs Glee Clubs

The University Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Pappoutsakis and the men's and women's glee clubs directed by Professor Bennett and conducted by members of the class in orchestration and conducting presented a fine program of music including an entire symphony in the Southwick ballroom Tuesday evening. The ballroom was filled with many students, townspeople and out-of-town guests.

One of the highlights of the program was Mr. Anselmo's rendition of the prelude to "Le Déluge," Saint-Saëns as a violin solo accompanied by the orchestra. Mr. Anselmo served as concert master also. Another highlight was the conducting of the glee clubs by members of Mr. Pappoutsakis' class in orchestra and conducting. P. R. Poulin '41, L. Pichierri '41 and Eleanor Lewis '41, each conducted the glee clubs in two selections, and the skill which these students displayed in conducting was shown by the fine renditions of the glee clubs. "Marching" by Brahms and rendered by the Men's Glee Club was especially enjoyed by the audience, and the final number by the Mixed Glee Club of "Chorale" (from "Die Meistersinger") by Wagner also.

Especially appreciated was the Symphony No. 2 in D Major by the University Orchestra composed of twenty members. Mr. Pappoutsakis received much applause from the audience for his very fine conducting of this symphony, and for the beautiful concluding number by both glee clubs and orchestra of the "Chorale" from "Die Meistersinger."

The University Orchestra is composed of Mr. Anselmo, concert master, H. O. Bevins '41, Sarah Brigham '41, Ruth Cooley '43, G. L. Haines '42, Nellie Herrmann '44, Mary Lessor '43 Alison Ryan '44, Rosemary Thayer '44, Effie Winn, Sp., violins; Dorothy Mosely '42, viola; J. P. Goss '43 and R. P. Public Demand Brings Reissue Of Free Book

So many requests have been received for the big free book, "Tobaccoland, U. S. A.," offered by Chesterfield Cigarettes in a recent national newspaper advertisement, that another million copies for immediate distribution are being rushed through publication.

Individuals and groups will receive copies on request to Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, 630 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.

"Tobaccoland, U. S. A.," is the name given to the group of states in which America's fine cigarette tobaccos are grown. While tobacco is grown in twenty-two states of the Union, the primary cigarette tobacco states are Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio and Missouri.

Scores of colleges have written to praise the completeness of this story of America's great tobacco industry, which in forty-two pages with over 100 large photographic illustrations fully describes tobacco farming and cigarette manufacture.

Of particular interest to many readers is the long preparation of tobaccos for Chesterfield, a process lasting from two to three years. Careful steps of planting, growing, harvesting, curing, ageing, conditioning for correct moisture content, and blending of the various domestic tobaccos with imported Turkish leaf are the groundwork. Then comes modern foolproof manufacture, making possible production of millions of packages of cigarettes per day.

The Chesterfield factories at Durham, N. C., portrayed in this book, alone cover one hundred and fifty acres. Every visitor to "Tobaccoland" finds a tour through these factories an adventure in American manufacturing ingenuity, and he never forgets the bright golden color and rich fragrance of the newly-opened hogsheads of tobacco fresh from their long mellowing in storage.

"Tobaccoland, U. S. A.," is also the story of a typical Southern tobacco-growing family, showing how the family's life revolves around the progress of the tobacco crop from season to season. The importance of the cities and universities of America's tobacco capital are shown in pictures and text.

Study of Great Books Best College Course

Boston, Mass. (ACP).—American colleges and universities should abolish textbooks and substitute the study of 100 of the world's greatest books, according to Dr. Mortimer J. Adler, author of "How to Read a Book."

As a model for such a move he suggested St. John's at Annapolis, where the teachers lead discussions on the great thinkers like Homer, Plato, Galen, Hegel, Marx and Freud.

Adler says that learning requires reading and that one must read the great works to be able to read. He doubts whether more than a few students—or even teachers—really know how to read a book. He added that smaller schools must lead in any change because "the larger ones are so top-heavy with watertight compartments of so-called fields of learning."

Classical Club Holds Annual Roman Feast

Members Present Drama "Pyramus and Thisbe"

Reclining on mats and daintly selecting their food with their fingers, about twenty-five members of the Goodrich Classical Club including four new initiates, partook of the annual banquet at Southwick last evening. While the guests struggled with Roman togas, tunics, and sandals lent by the Latin department of the Burlington High School, a typically Roman feast was served to them by Mary Butler '43, June Hoffman '43 and Nancy Goodwin '42, while M. Hawes '42 acted as host. The menu consisted of entrees, roast lamb, roast pork, vegetables, bread, honey, dates, figs and fruit cake with Samuel Ziskind '43 carving when necessary.

In the manner of the world-weary Pompeiians, the guests watched the presentation of a modified floor show in the form of the Greek tragedy "Pyramus and Thisbe" with cast as follows: Pyramus, L. Shores '42; Thisbe, Judith Perry '43; Wall, Samuel Ziskind '43; Lion, M. Hawes '42; Moonshine, F. Bardossi '42; Theseus, Prof. L. M. Prindle; Hippolyta, Mrs. L M. Prindle; Lysander, Dr. C. H. Benedict; Demetrius, Prof. J. E. Pooley; Prologue, Constance Knight. Following the presentation, a Latin ode was read by Martha Baker '41 and two by W. Maurer '43.

At the conclusion of the program the four new members, qualified by receiving "A" in Greek for one semester, were initiated with fitting ceremony. They were Rosemary Warren '44, Margaret Fake '44, Dorothy Johnson '44 and Ruth True '44.

The committees were as follows:

Cooks—Miriam Fiske '42, Alice Needham '43, and Emma Abbott '43.

Arrangement—H. Ginsberg '43, and Colehamer Abbott '42.

Costumes—Myrna French '42.

Doorkeeper—L. Shores '42.

Dishwasher—Judith Perry '42.

Walter Maurer and Mrs. Prindle were in general charge of the banquet.

Awards To Be Made At Masquerade

On the eve of Kake Walk all roads leading to the gym will be jammed with one-way traffic of Joes and their Betties for the Masquerade. Masquerade? That's right! None of this regular dress business but it is rumored that everyone will look like somebody or something which he isn't.

Joe and Bettie, who may be Fibber and Molly or Baby Snooks and Baby Dumpling at the time, will enter the once-upon-a-time gym to see a "Storm of Colors" decoration effect—large, sparkling crystal balls in the Milky Way reflecting the Rainbow—many strange looking people (although a little familiar)—and (oh, happy day) Johnny Messner and his orchestra pouring out that smooth, flowing, indescribable rhythm. Later Johnny will feature, besides his own vocalizing and super clarinet swinging, lovely Jeanne D'Arcy, vocalist, Pete Schipper, and the one and only Professor Koleslaw, genius of the toy piano, which he will use in many of the numbers.

Besides the major event of the crowning of the King and Queen by Johnny Messner himself, another highlight will be the awarding of the prize to the fraternity, sorority or dormitory having made the best sculpture piece. The third event of the evening will be the awarding of the prizes (five dollars, three dollars, and one dollar, respectively) to the three persons having the best costumes.

The chaperones, Prof. and Mrs. Pond and Prof. and Mrs. Witham, as announced by E. A. Guilbert '41, chairman of the Masquerade, will be right on hand to greet you and share with you a memorable evening.

Aviation Class

The first aviation classes started Wednesday, February 12. A list of students taking the course is not yet available. It is, however, expected that twenty to twenty-five men will participate.

Sports Cast

The Tables Turned

Despite the fact that the Rutland Herald had Don Maley sinking the winning goal against the Cadets, I guess we can trust the reports of the battle. It was pretty hot while it lasted but it all turned out for the best. Very definitely in the limelight was Ace Healy who indulged in a one-man scoring spree which was the prime factor in the victory. The win was especially gratifying as it demonstrated that the Cats can come through in a pinch. Practice of this sort should come in handy against the Purple menace next week.

Considering the doleful predictions afloat about the Cats at the beginning of the season, they haven't done so badly. Just exactly what the revival is due to we can't say but the situation is certainly the reverse of last year's. Starting out with an outstanding outfit the Green and Gold was alternately up and down and finally out of the state title. Starting slowly this year the Cats have gathered power and now are riding the crest of the wave. Before meeting St. Mike's the Cats have two engagements away—with Springfield and Trinity. Advance dope doesn't give us much to write about but the Gymnasts will probably field their usually scrappy quintet. Results of these two games should be valuable in judging Vermont's chances for taking the state title.

Ski Meet—Coming Up

According to the papers that I. S. U. meet is going to feature some snappy skiing. New Hampshire, winner of the Dartmouth Carnival competitions, looms as the big favorite this early in the game. With other outfits such as Norwich and Middlebury and Dartmouth all out for the honors, the Cats chances of shining at home are very dim. Despite some fine work on the part of the Cats' ski squad, Vermont was in the end position at the end of the Indians'shindig. The home skiers have the initiative and the determination but they lack individual stars to carry them through.

One reason why the competition usually waxes pretty hot in this meet is that the rating of the contestants depends upon their performances in it. No one is going to be coasting with the judges keeping their eyes peeled for flaws in technique.

Win or lose, however, the meet is about the biggest thing that will happen around here this winter. It couldn't have been scheduled at a better time. With people returning for Kake Walk and people arriving for the meet, the old campus should be buzzing next week-end. We're all for making a winter carnival an annual feature of Kake Walk week. With this added incentive, the college would probably be able to get more candidates for the ski squad. It's been quite a long struggle trying to get an official ski team on the campus and now that it has definitely been recognized, the task is to maintain a high standard of competition.

A school the size of U. V. M. often finds it difficult to support a heavy sports program that will pay. The wisest policy would be that of utilizing all available oportunities to the utmost. And certainly situated as it is the Universiay has a wonderful chance to capitalize on winter sports. Dartmouth has shown that a well-planned winter sports program can be just as great a source of publicity and enjoyment as a winning eleven. There is no reason why Vermont can't do the same. So let's boost the I. S. U. meet and those who are responsible for planning it.

Kappa Sigs Beat Phi Sigs 37-15

Independents and Phi Delts Also Annex Wins

In intramural basketball the Kappa Sigs whitewashed the Phi Sigs 37-15. Getting off to an early start, the Kappa Sig quintet scored 16 points to the Phi Sig 2 in the first half, while using plenty of fresh players. The line-up for Kappa Sig was Williams, Laramie, Lynch, who scored 11 points, and Crossley. Subs were Royer, Simpson, Corbett, Cain, Costello, Dykens, Sullivan, Abbott and Swift. Starting for Phi Sig were Rynowecer, Goldberg, Levine, who scored 13 points, Becker and Wolk. Leavy, Steinman, Fieber and Katzew subbed.

The Independents nipped out the Delts by the close score of 28-27 in one of the tightest tilts this year. Leading throughout the second half, the Delts were suddenly confronted with a powerful Independent attack which they were powerless to stop. The Independents started Dunn, Smith, Willson, Stoddard and Kipp, and played without substitutions. Craig, Riddle, Roby, Carlson and Gallup started for Delta Psi, while D. Davis, R. Davis and Small were replacements.

The Phi Delts defeated the Sig Phis 33-21 in a semi-final tourney for the intramural championship. Logan, Mayforth, Mott, Pache and Daniels started for the Phi Delts. Carpenter, Moore, Spasyk and Cronin played during the second half. Burgess, Blakely, Moore, Pond and Hay were the Sig Phi team, with Tucker and Kimball substitutes.

W.A.A. Campaigns For New Members

Variety of Clubs Offer Amusement for Everyone

In the lull after the Mid-year storm, W. A. A. offers much for the restoration and amusement of those who have survived. Whether you are fascinated by the exacting sport of shooting or thrilled by the exhilaration that skiing offers, W. A. A. has a place for you. There are clubs for those who are interested in archery, badminton, basketball, modern dancing, square dancing, skating, swimming, skiing, bowling, shooting or recreational leadership. The fun that a girl can have by attending the meetings of one or more of these clubs is not her only reward. By attending only three-fourths of the meetings of one club she automatically becomes a W. A. A. member. Aside from the fact that members have a say in the election of next year's officers, the Council is planning several parties which sound as if they would be well worth attending.

This week, W. A. A. begins a new campaign for membership. It is very important that girls attend the first meetings of the clubs which will be held this week. If a girl is interested in becoming a member but cannot possibly be present at the first meeting, she should notify the manager of her intention to join. The various clubs and the times of their meetings, and their managers are listed below:

Archery Club: Friday 7.30, Dawn E. Nichols '41, manager. The feature of the first meeting on February 14, will be a Valentine shoot. If you are a Cupid at heart, be sure to be there. An organization meeting will also be held, to plan for ladder tournaments and for participation in the Winter Intercollegiate Tournament in which the scores of competing colleges are telegraphed to each other.

Exhibition Given

Badminton Club: Tuesday and Thursday 7.15, Kathryn T. Kyle '42 and Alice N. Howe '42, managers. This Thursday at 7.30, there was a badminton exhibition by four players from the Community Y. Mrs. Walter Weidman, Mr. Court Sturtevant, Mrs. Clyde Towle and Mr. Edward Keenan. The latter is now organizing a state badminton association. There will be an opportunity to play with these people after their exhibition. An interzone tournament and a mixed tournament are being planned for the club.

Basketball Club: Tuesday and Thursday 4.15, Catherine M. Peterson '42, manager; Edith F. Libby '43, assistant. At the present time, an interzone tournament is being played after the club meetings. This is a double elimination tournament in which the defeated team has a chance to play again in a consolation tournament. It is hoped that the club may play some invitation matches.

Modern Dance Workshop: Tuesday and Thursday 4.15, Jean E. Finney '41, manager. Upperclassmen are expected to be present at every meeting either for credit or for membership. Freshmen may count one meeting for physical education credit and the other meeting for membership in W. A. A.

Square Dancing Club: Wednesday 4.15, Jean E. Finney '41, manager. May be taken for membership or credit.

Special Help Offered

Skating Club will be held on Monday or Friday afternoons, whichever is more convenient for the majority. Special help will be given if wanted on Sunday afternoon or any night by appointment. Naola M. Carter '44, an experienced skater, who has entered several contests at Lake Placid has offered to help beginners and to teach figure skating, free skating or dancing to more advanced skaters.

Swimming Club: Friday 3.30-5.30, Virginia E. Amidon '42. A "splash" party is planned for the near future.

Skiing Club: Monday and Thursday 3-5, Country Club; Tuesday and Wednesday, Centennial Field. Mr. Steward Phillips is the instructor. Girls taking it for W. A. A. membership should report to him until a student manager has been selected.

Bowling Club: Tuesday 4.15, Alice M. Needham '43, manager. Plans are being made to divide the club into two groups. One group to take part in competition, the other group to bowl on their own.

Rifle Club: This club is at present closed to membership. There may be an opportunity for others to join later, but twenty-five are as many as can take it now.

Recreational Leadership: Monday 4.15. These girls learn how to teach games, social dancing and folk dancing. In the spring there will be camp craft. This training is valuable for girls who are interested in becoming camp counsellors or doing settlement house work.

At the last meeting of the W. A. A. Council, two new members were elected to the Council. Phyllis M. Pierce '43, to be sophomore class representative and Nancy M. Fawcett '44, to be freshman class representative. Freshmen and sophomores having questions about W. A. A. should contact these girls; juniors, Joanne J. Metcalf '42, and seniors, Nancy F. Jones '41, junior and senior class representatives respectively.

Whatever your interests in athletics you will surely find something to your liking here. Remember, attendance at three-fourths of the meetings of one club makes you a W. A. A. member, and the more members the merrier.

Vermont Skiers Journey South For Midd. Carnival

Coach Bailey Expects A Great Improvement In Remaining Meets

Thursday afternoon at one o'clock, the University of Vermont skiing team left the campus bound for Middlebury, where it will compete in the I. S. U. Middlebury Carnival during the week-end. The reason for the team's early departure is that it may get in some much-needed practice in downhill racing and jumping before the meet. Only six men will make the trip with Coach Ev Bailey, and they are: Captain Collins, Paterson, Pierce, Goodell, Goss and St. Mary. The latter is the only one of the six who did not compete in the Dartmouth Carnival.

In preparation for the meet, the team has been practicing daily at Underhill. Much stress has been placed on downhill slalom, and the U. V. M. skiers have been polishing themselves in that event by making trial runs down the tear drop. The cross-country race has proven to be another glaring weakness, so time trials in that event have been held during the week.

Most of the teams which U. V. M. will face at Middlebury are unknown quantities with the exception of Norwich and Dartmouth, who finished first and second respectively in the Dartmouth Carnival. Vermont has never competed with Amherst, Middlebury, Massachusetts State, Williams, or M. I. T., the other entrants in the Middlebury meet.

Against the aforementioned teams, Coach Bailey plans to enter his men in the various events as follows:

Downhill—Collins, Paterson, Pierce, and Goodell.

Cross country—Collins, Goss, Goodell, and St. Mary.

Slalom—Collins, Paterson, Pierce, and Goodell.

Jumping—Collins, Goss, Goodell, and St. Mary.

Combined downhill and slalom—Collins, Goodell, Pierce, and Paterson.

Combined jumping and cross country—Collins, Goss, Goodell, and St. Mary.

Much of Vermont's hopes are pinned on Captain Collins, who marvelously carried the brunt of the burden at Dartmouth. However, at Middlebury, Collins will have a great deal of assistance, for Goodell, the freshman cross-country star, will also be entered in all the events. Paterson, Pierce, Goss, and St. Mary are greatly improved skiers, and this fact gives Coach Bailey increased confidence that his team will make a better showing than it did at Dartmouth..

Corley Leads Scorers In Fifth Straight Win

Two foul shots by Henri Beauchemin in the final minute of play gave the University of Vermont basketeers a 48-46 margin over the Springfield College quintet in the Tech High gym Thursday night at Springfield, Mass.

Completely outplayed by the Gymnasts led by Schmidt and Maleska in the first half, Vermont, under the guiding hand of Capt. Paul Corley shot into the lead midway in the second session. From here on the game see-sawed back and forth until Frank Taylor dropped in his only basket of the evening and Beauchemin sank two free tries to offset a last-minute score by Schmidt.

Captain Corley, easily the outstanding man on the floor especially in the second half, was the evening's high scorer with 18 counters, making 14 of these in the last half. Corley was closely followed by his teammate Beauchemin with 14 points and Schmidt, Springfield guard, who totaled 13 for the evening.

Tonight the Green and Gold basketballers drop down to Hartford, Conn., where they hope to extend their winning streak to six at the expense of Trinity College five.

Heredity Determines Intellectual Ability

Ann Arbor, Mich. (ACP).—Like father, like son—that's the pet theory of Dr. Walter B. Pillsbury, University of Michigan psychologist, who says the father's IQ could be used for the son's college entrance examination.

The psychologist found in a statistical study that the difference between the father's grades and his son's marks is comparable to the relative scholastic achievements of the son in high school and college.

Doctor Pillsbury also found that brothers and sisters of the same family generally make the same grades, and he attributes the similarities to inheritance and not environment. He concludes that the government should give financial aid to intelligent couples so that they might produce intelligent offsprings.

1941 King and Queen Platforms

For King Dave Sawyer

Here it comes students, the announcement you have been waiting for. DAVE SAWYER officially pronounces his candidacy for Kake Walk King. At last is founded Kake Walk's deviation, for now, quietly and unassumingly, comes to the core the man, who, by all standards of personality and ingenuity, firmly asserts himself as the logical choice for these great honors—indeed, the very symbol of Kake Walk.

Why, some may ask, is his candidacy announced days behind the others, and to this students, may this reply be sincerely given. By now you have been exposed at least, to the devious little games and tricks of other aspirants to this great throne and as such, this campaign will suffer not the least by open comparison. DAVE SAWYER is well known to all of you—his characteristics and inclinations are no great secret, and so, could it be imagined that his campaign would be executed on points of trivial importance, and hackneyed conformity to the past? Indeed not, and in fact, rather than the all out buried campaign platforms of the past, Dave asserts his true claim to the throne by these four pledges.

1. I, DAVE SAWYER, do pledge and swear, that my campaign will be a sane one, well conceived and well executed, leading the way to the ideal holiday of fun for all.
2. I pledge myself, wholeheartedly indeed, to the glorious protection of our queen. To see that she is well tucked in bed at a proper hour during each evening of winter carnival, will become my most pressing attentive object. I DO assure you this.
3. To the faculty, I pledge my aid in averting the pending salary cut. Even now, negotiations are being completed to turn one fifty-ninth of the Book store's profits toward the Starving Professor's fund and with this fantastic sum of money available, fine pay will be assured as well as retirement after twenty-nine days' service.
4. And finally, for the student body, I pledge myself to their behalf for the duration of the carnival. No persuasive promises made by my opponents need sway you, for I do guarantee to match them first and completely outdo them secondly. (With the exception of belching forth in song, which field I shall leave entirely alone.)

And so there it is students. Maybe irregular—but at least sincere and different. So come on now, let's get together and push!! We've got a real candidate who merits our real support. Let's make the Kingdom of David a reality once more!! Remember, its loudly and strongly —DAVE SAWYER FOR KING.

Meals Are Cheap In Co-op House

Menomonie, Wis. (ACP).—Opening a co-operative boarding house on an experimental basis, fifty students at Stout Institute found their food expense in the first week averaged only 15.4 cents a meal.

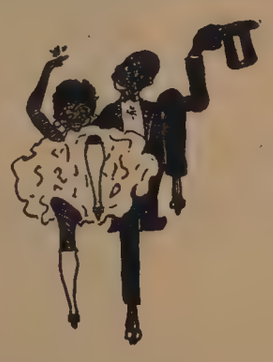
One of the group does all of the buying and the others are assigned cleanup tasks. The cook receives fifty cents a week from each member.

Saving time on crowded schedules is an important feature of the cooperative, members report. At one meal recently when men were served, the food was eaten and the dining hall and kitchen were cleaned in an elapsed time of twenty-five minutes.

CHAPEL SERVICE OF CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

Ira Allen Chapel, Sunday, at 11 a.m.

Wilmer J. Kitchen, in charge
Marjorie Southworth '43, soloist



Sponsored by the Vermont Christian Association

Vote! Vermont! Vote!

Let's vote for a real Vermont man, a man that throws no dirt and is everybody's friend. "Frannie" Nye wants no vote that is obtained by dirt throwing at his opponents. He only wants the votes from his friends. His friends include every student on the campus. Come on, kids, let's vote for a regular guy, "Frannie" Nye.

Let's do or die
With Frannie Nye.

A man who has worked from the bottom to the top, he knows the little fellow as well as the big shot, and he speaks to all of them during campaigning and after campaigning. He is the man for Kake Walk King!

For Queen Hilda Paquette

Ladies and gentlemen, do you realize that history is now in the making, and that its making is in your hands? For the first and only time we have a Vermonter for Vermonters, a tiny Paquette, packed with vim, vigor and vitality—to say nothing of personality. Who is it? Why, Hilda Paquette of course.

According to the scouts sent out to inquire into the affair, her platform is based on the following:

1. No rainy, slushy or muddy days in Burlington; only warm sunshine, but plenty of good snow on Mt. Mansfield and the Country Club.
2. All-year temperature at 78° except at Kake Walk, when there will be a week of invigorating crisp cold weather to enable the ice sculptors to exhibit their ice-artistic skill.

Furthermore, this will be the time to enjoy hardy winter sports. In a hut beside the skating rink, foot-warmers and hot dogs will be provided to warm the feet and interiors of the chilled skaters.

3. A homey atmosphere throughout the University classrooms, aided and abetted by canaries chirping in the windows—balmy zephyrs rustling crisp curtains, et al.
4. Chaise lounges, softly lit, in the library with special maids tiptoeing around carrying trays heavily laden with delectable brain food.
5. A twenty-four-hour trolley service to Southwick and back.
6. Thirty-six Professor Moodys scattered throughout the various departments, especially at exam time.
7. Numerous furnished dog houses, with well-stocked pantries scattered around the campus at convenient points for the exclusive use of Butch and his pals.
8. Special yarn racks in the Memorial Auditorium for the enthusiastic basketball fiends who take their knitting along with them.

Pilgrim Fellowship

At the next meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship to be held at 7.30 on Sunday, February 16, Margaret Wishart '43 and John Goss '43 will conduct a musical program. Refreshments will be served and everyone is cordially invited.

Perhaps 50 percent and certainly 25 percent of the country's population has impaired vision because of vitamin A deficiency, says Prof. Robert S. Harris of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

More than 15,000 students daily use the 160-story business building at New York's City College, more than three times as many students as when the building was opened.

For Queen Jeanne Woolley

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! Here is the Woolley platform which Jeanne Woolley '42, winsome Kake Walk Queen candidate, will carry out if she is elected. Just because we call it the Woolley platform, don't imagine that it is old and moldy. It will be the brightest, newest, shiniest, snappiest, super-duperiest little platform that ever supported a candidate. Now don't think we're trying to "fleece" you or "pull the wool over your eyes"; on the contrary, it's the "purest" platform ever built. In "ashearing" you that "Jeanne is the one for Queen" she gives you the following platform:

1. We shall install Professor Heicher, the political science professor, as president of the University, as he maintains that if he were, there would be no classes before 10.00 a.m. and none on Saturday.
2. Another thing that needs attention is the fact that Butch, one of our most important campus personages, has no escort. From now on he will have a motorcycle escort of co-eds to follow and protect him everywhere.
3. In the "Bundles for Britain" rage we shall send all our textbooks across because we hear that there is consolation in books and they certainly need it abroad.
4. We shall advance two steps farther than the Nye platform, which would have Whitey supplied with transparent books, and donate a pair of bifocals as well as a "seeing eye" dog to take care of everything Whitey misses.
5. Two tellers, one Republican and one Democrat, will be appointed to "tell off" the political science department when they toss off one too many of those frequent hour exams.
6. The Country Club and its greens will be moved down in back of Rand's so that all the students may see one of the beauty spots of Burlington without going so far.
7. Ear plugs will be passed out in Coffee Corner to all those students claiming ear aches from boring professors.
8. We shall have the Old Mill converted into an ultra-modern building with lounges and other commodities, beer on tap, etc., for those students who are unprepared for class. The downstairs will be completely renovated and made into a ballroom with Jimmy Dorsey playing at all hours of day and night.
9. A board of trustees elected from the ranks of those who have "flunked out" at least twice, with instructors having the same qualifications.
10. If there must be classrooms, they will all be fitted out with cushioned seats and headrests for those who "can't take it" sitting up.
11. There will be a fleet of St. Bernards with flasks attached to their collars to run to the far-distant points of the campus to the aid of those students on their "last" legs.
21. There will be a sandwich girl henceforth who will go around each night and carry out the same duties for the fraternities and Converse that the "sandwich man" does for the women's dormitories.
13. If spring has not arrived by March 15, we will get a series of undertakers' grass to lay out over the campus to fool ourselves until it really does come.
14. To all those who have seen by April 1 a crocus come out of the ground, crook twice and then disappear underground again, we give the privilege of returning home now and not waiting to flunk out formally in June.
15. Beginning next month there will be on sale in the Book Store sheepskins so we may see those campus wolves in their true colors.
16. Throughout the Old Mill, radios will be installed in each classroom for all students who wish to have soft music playing while spending their time in the classroom.
17. There will be a diploma given in June to all those house mothers who, though thick and thin, managed to keep their guiding light (the one on the front porch) shining at all times.
18. Ice skates will be provided for all those who have to come to school on the ice-covered canals which in spring prove to be sidewalks.
19. In a certain section of the library there will be comic magazines inserted in every volume so that those people who come to the library for the socializing side of college will have something to look at between quips. There will be a table where beer and pretzels are served at ten-minute intervals on the pattern of the German-American Club in New York.
20. Neon signs flashing on and off will be placed outside the Sugar House to guide home all those wayward ones who celebrate the end of mid-year's on every week-end and holiday.

With these steadfast principles of democracy and comfort, we give you the following sentiment knowing that with the interests of your college at heart you will not have to think twice before electing our candidate, Jeanne Woolley.

Valentine Greetings To You From Us

There's a rumor that Hecter liked Helen and nectar,
That Abelard loved Eloise.
We all know the story of Juliet's glory,
And other romances like these.

But lovers so dated could never be rated
First rank in the year 'forty-one.
Romeo's passion would be out of fashion,
And Eloise only a nun.

The girl of today must be witty and gay,
And the gayest of all must be queen.
The girl of the hour is sweet and not sour,
And Bibby's the sweetest we've seen.

So go to the polls and look over the rolls,
Then vote for our Bibby to reign.
You'll know when she's ruling that we were not fooling,
And you have not voted in vain.

For King Gus Malone

Dear Students:

In these days of threatening political change and foreign chaos, Vermont must recognize its Kake Walk in the same spirit of joy and happiness that has prevailed in the past. Kake Walk is based on tradition and stands symbolic of a week-end of good, clean, wholesome fun, entertainments and sports.

As the festivities draw near, the choice of a King of Kake Walk must be made by the great student body of U. V. M. Their choice must be a wise one. Students, among the candidates there is but one man who is qualified to carry on the Kake Walk tradition of Vermont. Yes! You guessed it. Malone. The robust, happy, cheerful and friendly boy who has spread cheer and joy on the Vermont campus during his three and one-half years of college.

We all know and trust Malone, therefore it is not necessary to gush forth with endless chatter and promises, but merely to state a few of Malone's major reforms.

1. More "petty" per mile for wall decorations at Converse Hall.
2. A lamp shade for the tower light in the chapel.
3. Life insurance policy for those entering Rand's between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.
4. Love seats in every living room.
5. Installment of a night club in the Waterman Building.
6. Students to attend lectures by television.
7. Free rubber bumpers to be worn at the Coffee Corner during breakfast rush hour.
8. University Book Stores to limit their profit to 200%.
9. Hollywood heroes to spend a week at all girl dorms.
10. University station wagon will be available for dances.
11. More beer and less head to be served at the Sugar House plus a revision of the age laws.
12. Guarantee of a permanent smile from the deans and their staffs.
13. All exams to be given "Moody style."
14. Installation of a swimming pool in the back armory.
15. Air taxi from Redstone, Robinson and Slade (not C. A. A.).

Students of U. V. M., give this election your careful consideration. Remember that both the personal qualifications and the intentions of the candidates should receive your sincere cogitation. Be alert and careful of any dictator tactics. Plan on a great Kake Walk and a great King. In short,

Any student would be a fool
Who doesn't vote for Gus to rule.

Respectfully submitted,
Jim Diforio,
Chairman of the Gus Malone for King Committee.

Carnegie Sends Books To I. R. C.

Several times during each school year the Carnegie Endowment for Peace sends the latest books on international relations to the Vermont International Relations Club, which deposits them in the Billings Library. These books are then subject to the same lending conditions as other library books. One lot has already been received by the club, and others are expected later this year.

Books explaining the U. S. A., Russia, England, Germany, Cuba and practically every other country and their relationship to international problems are represented on the shelves. War, peace, prosperity, empire building and breaking, and other of the world's headaches are subjects to be found on the I. R. C. bookshelf.

The purpose of the Carnegie Endowment in undertaking this work of the International Relations Club is to enlighten and instruct public opinion. It is not to support exclusively any one view as to how best to treat conditions that prevail throughout the world today.

The titles of these books are:

"America's Dilemma: Alone or Allied?" by Norman Angell.

"True and False Democracy," by Nicholas Murray Butler.

"Where Do We Go From Here?" by Harold J. Laski.

"Prerequisites to Peace in the Far East," by Nathaniel Peffer.

"The Caribbean Danger Zone," by J. Fred Rippy.

"The City of Man," by Herbert Agar et al.

Additional pamphlets were received also. These books are to be placed on the International Relations Club shelf in the library but are available to all of the students.

"We have spent a great deal of time and money on education to train the mind and on recreation to build up the body but we have done a very excellent job of neglecting those means whereby the human spirit is fed and strengthened.

"For instance, even though we have here one of the most beautiful chapel buildings to be found on any campus where fine music is provided and qualified speakers bring thoughtful and timely messages to us, yet the weekly chapel and monthly vesper services are attended by only a small minority of the students. Is that because we feel no need of what these services bring or is it rather that we are so illiterate, ethically and spiritually, that we cannot comprehend their meaning?

"What does our Christian heritage in terms of social ideals and personal faith mean in a world haunted by violence? I am afraid we do not really know because we have not made those ideals and that faith dynamic, constructive forces in our thinking. That is why I am interested in the week-end program sponsored by the V. C. A. at which the topic for discussion will be "Christianity in Thought and Action in 1941."

"It may be significant that where Christian institutions such as the church flourish, there we may have democracy and men are free. It is significant that only in a Christian society is the individual personality recognized as of intrinsic worth. If the democratic ideal is to function effectively it must do so on the basis of practical Christianity. Therefore it is well worth our while to turn aside from the work and play program of the week and think with the leaders of this conference on what Christian thought and action can mean to us in a troubled world."

V.C.A. Successfully End Conference

Well Attended by Students and Faculty

Very successful was the Student Re-ous Conference which the Vermont ristian Association sponsored last week-d under the direction of A. F. Amee '43. riday evening's program was especially ll attended by many students and ulty. V. C. A. was fortunate to have th them Wilmer J. Kitchen of Boston; d without Bishop Vedder Van Dyck, e program would not have been com-te. Those who were present will long member the timeliness of his remarks. Ernest Johnson, Negro tenor, sang in-rmittently throughout the evening, ac-mpanied by Mrs. Youngert. Included his selections were "Steal Away," Lord, I Want to be a Christian," "My ul's Been Anchored in the Lord," and are Selve." An effective climax to the ogram was "Were You There When ey Crucified My Lord," and Mr. John-'s interpretation of it was very impres-ve.

A good sized group met in Fleming useum Saturday afternoon for a dis-ssion of religious problems of the col-e student. After an informal song rvice, led by Mr. Millikan, with Betty le '41 at the piano, Lawrence Durgin Cornish, N. H., presided over the in-rmal discussion. Topics discussed dealt th religion on the campus as exempli-ed in the students. What brings people religion? Why do we want it? What uld be done with the startling apathy ong students?

The sentiment of those present favored re of these small group conferences as means of satisfying our own needs and e needs of others and to help us to face rlastingly the issues of religious life.

Guests at this session, besides those pre-ously mentioned, included Rev. William ber Lewis, Rector of St. Paul's Episco-Church, Burlington; Rev. Mr. Park-st of Williston; and Miss Myra T. den, director of summer projects in reached areas of Vermont.

A large congregation of students and culty met in Ira Allen Chapel Sunday rning for a service of Christian fellow-. Mr. Kitchen conducted the service. rjorie Southworth '43 was the soloist the service. Her selections were d Shall Wipe Away All Tears" and Shall Not Pass This Way Again," g very impressively in her usual pleas-manner.

Working against obstacles as it did, the rmont Christian Association feels that irst attempt at a campus-wide religious ference was justified by its results.

Annual Banquet Here Saturday

Fathers, Sons, Mothers, Daughters to Attend

One of the highlights of the Annual Kake Walk week-end is the Father, Son, Mother, Daughter Banquet which will be held this year at the Van Ness Hotel on Saturday, February 22, at six o'clock.

The banquet is sponsored by Mortar Board and Boulder honorary societies. Co-chairmen this year are Laura Hawley '41 and J. M. Evans '41.

After indulging in what, to quote J. M. Evans, "will be the finest food obtainable," the guests will be greeted by Dean Harris and Dean Swift of the University and the Kake Walk Directors. The principal speaker of the evening will be Prof. H. F. Perkins of the Department of Zoology at the University. Whitey Killick, local sports' commentator, will act as Master of Ceremonies.

The purpose of the banquet is to give parents, alumni and students an opportunity to become better acquainted with each other. Students are urged to help make this affair a success by attending and bringing Mother and Dad if possible.

French Club Will Attend Lecture

L'Alliance Française announces that its last lecturer of the season will be Madame Marguerite Yourcenar, French novelist. She has translated several works from English to French—namely works of Virginia Woolf and Henry James. She has also made a study of the Greek poet Pindar.

Her lecture will be on L'Athènes d'Aujourd'hui and will be illustrated by slides. It will take place at Fleming Museum, Tuesday, February 18 at 8 p.m. The lecture is open to the public.

The French Club meeting scheduled for February 18, has been postponed. All members, old and new, are urged to attend a lecture at Fleming Museum by Madame Yourcenar under the auspices of the Alliance Française.

Several social activities are being planned, including a tea dance, a May breakfast, a party for poor children and a picnic for Home Ec'ers and Aggies in the spring.

Eloise Bailey '41, Barbara MacIntosh '41 and Hester Carver '41 have been selected as chairmen of the committee to work on Dean Hills' Sugar Party which will be held on March 7.

Freshman Debaters Defeat Randolph

The freshman debating team started its season off with a bang February 13 when it took the affirmative side against Randolph High School on the question, "Should the nations of the Western Hemisphere form a permanent union?" This great battle of wits was waged between G. Goldsmith and R. L. Norton representing U. V. M. and Beatrice Holman and Kathryn Marcott from Randolph. Convincing arguments were presented by both teams and a round-table discussion followed. As the debate was a non-decision one, each group went home still firmly convinced that his argument was the most plausible.

Questions of national and international importance are debated and should be of interest to many students.

Health Council Dance Held at Southwick

The Health Council Informal Dance was held Saturday night at Southwick. Red Dower and his band supplied the music.

The theme for the decorations was taken from Valentine's day.

Campaigning by hopeful King and Queen for Kake Walk added much to the occasion.

Professor and Mrs. Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Perry chaperoned.

Sarah Wilson '42 was in charge of the dance. Marjorie Abell '43 and Jane Lyons '41 were in charge of the decorations. Madge Duba '41 was chairman of the refreshment committee.

The proceeds of the dance are donated to the fund which gives the necessary medical care to students who are unable to afford it.

Five Fraternities Pass Elimination

Talented Jeanne D'Arcy To Sing at Masquerade

Kay LeBaron and J. Bloom Are Working On Special Masquerade Decorations

It won't be long before that gentleman of swing, Johnny Messner will roll into town to give us his version of the latest hits. Messner's orchestra, a popular New York band, is rated for its smooth and flowing rhythm. Featured singer with the band is popular Jeanne D'Arcy. Vocals will be handled by Johnny Messner himself, and who, incidently is one of the best clarinetists in the business. His orchestra has been heard over the NBC network, at the Marine Grill of the McAlpin Hotel in New York City, and at present is playing at the Hotel Roosevelt, Miami Beach, Fla. Messner and his gang also recorded for Bluebird records.

Kay LeBaron '41 and Jack Bloom '41, in charge of the decorations, have planned to give the masqueraders and Maestro Messner something hitherto undreamed of; even the band will have its own unique setting. Colors here, colors there, where you see them and where you don't they will be caught up in those crystal balls to be handed down to the dancers personally.

At 11.30 p.m. everyone will participate in the Grand March and will later continue dancing until 2 a.m. During the course of the eventful evening, Johnny Messner will crown the King and Queen of Kake Walk; the directors of Kake Walk will present a prize to that fraternity, sorority or dormitory having made the best piece of ice sculpture. Also prizes will be awarded for the three best costumes and although everyone cannot be a winner, every masquerader has a good chance. Those couples not caring about winning plan to appear in costume anyway—for the fun and spirit if not for the prize.

The chaperones will be Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Pond and Prof. and Mrs. M. E. Witham. The Masquerade chairman, E. A. Guilbert '41, has announced that tickets for admittance can be had for $3.50 per couple at the Bookstore or at Hayes and Carney.

Five Musical Messners

About fourteen years ago a young man named Johnny Messner was busily engaged playing in an orchestra at a New York radio station, located at the time on the roof of the McAlpin Hotel. As the fates would have it, Johnny returned to the McAlpin a few years later and three successful years of leading his own band at the hotel's famous Marine Grill.

In a short period, Johnny and his orchestra have moved along rapidly to gain a deserved place among the leaders of the profession. Taking over his brother Dick's band some five years ago, a musical group that began as the Messner Brothers Orchestra—it contained five Messner brothers at one time—Johnny went into the McAlpin in 1937 and remained for nearly four complete seasons.

Some time ago, the Messner band dropped its style of "Music Box Rhythm" for a new brand, one that is based on muted rhythmic brass effects. A contest will soon be held to obtain a name for the newly adopted style. Featured with Johnny Messner are Pete Schipper, Professor Koleslaw, the talented fellow who uses a toy piano in many of the numbers; Johnny Messner, himself and supplying the beauty and charm is pretty Jeanne D'Arcy.

Writers' League Holds Clinic

Barre Novelist Appears At Afternoon Session

Prof. Leon W. Dean of the English Department, president of the League of Vermont Writers, was director of the meeting held by the League on Saturday, February 15, at Southwick. The Sesquicentennial program work was an appropriate topic of discussion at this convention. A new sub-committee on literature for the Sesquicentennial, was announced by Walter J. Coates of North Montpelier, who is in charge of the League's observance of this anniversary.

Clinics were held in both the morning and afternoon to discuss the various types of literature.

Authors Lead Discussion

Louis DeJean and Mrs. Laura Loudon, both authors of short stories, led the morning discussion of short stories. DeJean remarked that two of the commonest plot themes are "Crime Does Not Pay" and "Love Will Find a Way." This may easily be shown by classifying the short stories in almost any magazine. Both authors advised treating a short story like a play, so that the writer can show dramatically what the characters are doing and saying.

The other morning clinic, on oral story telling, was led by Miss Mary B. Sullivan of the English Department. She spoke of the techniques to be used in telling stories and the choice of stories for different age levels. The kinds of stories people like and the reason for liking them, were also discussed.

Mrs. Dallas Pollard of Burlington, in her afternoon clinic on the writing and staging of pageants, in connection with the approaching Sesquicentennial celebration, spoke especially of historical themes for pageants.

Mrs. Palmer Discusses Poetry

In another afternoon clinic, Mrs. E. Dorcas Palmer spoke on poetry. She advised poets to express their own personalities in their poems and stressed the importance of bringing novelty in likeness, impression, or approach to old subjects. Mrs. Palmer also spoke of the faults to be avoided in poetry writing.

Prof. DeForest Resumes Duties

Prof. John B. DeForest of the department of Romance Languages at the University of Vermont is back at his teaching duties again after a semester's leave of absence at Yale University in New Haven, Conn. Professor DeForest is a Yale graduate and also took his advanced degrees from Yale. He spent the semester in further study.

Dr. Gordon Baylies Ray, who took Professor DeForest's place, has now joined the Dartmouth College Romance Language department. Doctor Ray is a graduate of Harvard University and took his Doctor of Philosophy degree from Harvard in 1940. He was instructor in French at Harvard from 1936 to 1939, and spent last year traveling in Mexico, having been awarded the Rivers Traveling Fellowship.

That "Good Ole" Kake Walk Spirit!

Excitement is rising. The big I. S. U. Meet, the Masquerade, King and Queen campaigns, and Kake Walk dominate the campus. In two brief days the first college skiers will arrive in Burlington. The event-packed ski meet will begin on Thursday afternoon and will continue through Saturday evening when there is to be a large banquet at the Hotel Vermont.

The final elimination of stunts was made last night and the Kake Walk program is in its final stages. The addition of Donald Gearing as Master of Ceremonies should make Kake Walk a much better organized show. Much of the success of Kake Walk rests on Mr. Gearing but we are confident that he will do a praiseworthy job. The Masquerade also promises to be a "good time had by all" for Messner's orchestra is daily gaining in popularity.

After giving you but a few of the reasons why we think that the 1941 Kake Walk and the I. S. U. Meet should make the coming week-end one of the best Vermont has ever had we want to emphasize a most important factor. No matter how much effort has gone into the organization of these programs their success rests to a large extent on the cooperation and the spirit of the student body. Vermont students are playing hosts this week-end to many college skiers as well as alumni and parents and every student should make a special effort to make these guests welcome.

Let's all cooperate with the directors of the I. S. U. Meet and Kake Walk by giving plenty of enthusiastic support to these coming events so that this week-end will be one of the most memorable in Vermont's one hundred and fifty years!

An Earlier Election of Women's Officers

In an effort to provide for greater efficiency in the transferring of the executive duties of officers of major women's organizations on campus and the earlier releasing of busy Seniors from their executive positions, a plan providing for elections early in March was recently suggested to Mortar Board. Since a considerable number of upperclass women have enthusiastically received this idea, we feel that the suggestion should thoughtfully be considerd by all University women whom such a change would directly affect.

Many offices filled by student elections need a great deal of explanation and supervision while the retiring officers are still in college. Questions of newly-elected officers could be much better answered if the former officers could be contacted to offer suggestions.

Senior women holding office the last semester are, as a rule, so busy with Senior activities that it is most difficult for them to give their duties sufficient attention. They should be free from all active responsibility except that of aiding their successors.

Probably the most pressing factor in the changing of these officers is the recording of the organizations' business. Oftentimes under the present system, new plans outlined from past experiences, important data, and committee reports are lost during the summer and the functioning of new officers is considerably handicapped.

The CYNIC staff is changed directly following Kake Walk and sorority officers are also elected soon after February 1. Why shouldn't organizations governing and affecting a much wider group of students and activities elect their officers early in the second semester and thus provide for a more efficient handling of the important executive offices?

Meet "Frannie" Nye Your Ideal King

The English people know what an ideal king should be; they have him in King George VI, a scholar, a gentleman, and a man that will go among his people treating them as if he were one of them, and because he is one of them. For this his people look up to him and follow him loyally.

Isn't this what we want for a king, a man who is a true scholar, a gentleman, and a regular fellow who will be sure to serve his campus as they wish to be served, a man that will not forget what his fellow students have done for him in lecting him and for placing their faith in him. To attain this high goal in criteria of Kings, we have a true opportunity in Francis Nye, a true representative of the student. He knows you as a fellow student at all times. He is proud to be one of you and will stand by you through thick and thin, through campaigning and after campaigning.

So fellow students, let's show ourselves as following a worthy cause and a worthy man. We're truly your friends in victory or defeat, and may the "Vermont Party" and their candidate find an everlasting spot in your heart in true friendship and good fellowship.

"Frannie Nye, a King in his own right."

Then Comes The Dawn

We, June Hoffman, Barbara Gallagher, and Margot Benoit, the campaign managers of the darling, delightful, dynamic Dawn, issue the following proclamation:

Where is the campus going to! Really it is in an awfully bad state. Have you ever realized this is 1941. For thousands of years we have been in a rut. It is our duty to get out of it; it is our duty to future generations. What would they think of an institution that was still in dark? We blush to think. We must elect a candidate who will echo our sentiments —one who has the courage of her own convictions. And once they see the Dawn they will know it is the will of the people. We would have the shining order of the little queen.

With the coming of the New Dawn there will be no more darkness. There will be a New Day under the reign of our little queen. No more antiquated ideas, no more stuffed courses, no more tests, no more test tubes.

During the reign of the Golden Nichols there will be:

1. Nichols from heaven instead of pennies.
2. A lending library of Packards and Buicks for the use of all students.
3. A package of cigarettes given away with every penny box of matches bought in Rand's.
4. A Nichol-odeon for every dorm—and let Dawn supply the Nichols.
5. Bowling at a nickel a string.
6. A late night every week to see the Dawn rise.
7. A heating system under the sidewalks to keep them melted during icy weather—financed by Nichols.
8. An orchid for every girl at Masquerade.
9. In addition to a set of transparent books for Whitey, a pair of bifocals, an honest-to-goodness harem all his own.
10. A Dawn for all those in a fog.
11. A genie for every Home-eccer to complete her clothing problems on time.
12. No advertising at the Flynn—Mickey Mouse cartoons instead.
13. A year's subscription of Esquire given to every fraternity house and sorority.
14. Hour tests made out by the students and taken by the professors.
15. Exams given every four years, covering the last day's work.
16. A new wing added to the Sugar House for the busy Saturday nights.

And remember:

No need for yawning
Or studying at dawning
All life will be keen
With Nichols as Queen.

Cadets at the Citadel, South Carolina military college, come from thirty-three states, three territories, the Distrcit of Columbia and one foreign country.

Blitzkrieg!!—Logan Releases Platform!!

Despite the fact that our candidate has suffered considerably from untimely publicity (unintentionally bestowed upon him by a Greek Letter man) it is our greatest pleasure to release to you, students, at this time, the platform upon which "Fearless Fred" Logan shall conduct his campaign.

Before this, let us uncover the real Frederick Pomeroy Logan as a man of the campus. First of all our candidate has been very successful in achieving extra curricula honors. He was elected to the Gold Key Honorary Society and at the present time is an active member of the Junior Honorary Society—Key and Serpent. Fred is the Managing Editor of the 1942 Ariel and a member of the Interfraternity Council. Just yesterday "Fearless Fred" completed his C.A.A. student pilot training course. In the spring you will find Mr. Logan assistant manager of baseball.

The previous paragraph, my dear students, will prove to you that our candidate is not any ordinary jockey. He is definitely a man of affairs and certainly a king of whom we will all be proud.

It's a BLITZKRIEG—so let's hop on that good old band wagon and see him through.

FEARLESS FRED LOGAN gives you:

(1) His Platform—"Definitely Mahogany."

(2) A musical spitoon for all classrooms which plays "I wonder who's kissing her now."

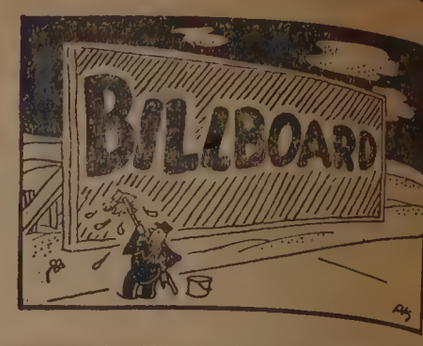
(3) Cows that gush chocolate milk at the Experiment Station.

(4) Interfraternity Beer Drinking League—Points to count toward Traynor Trophy.

(5) Permission for the University Choir to sing ASCAP songs.

(6) A delegation from Mortar Board to lay bricks at the Waterman Building.

(7) All University women free from college regulations starting Friday noon till Sunday night this Kake Walk week-end.



(8) A new recreation building to be called the Waterman Building—as a matter of fact we have already started on it.

CHARLES A. SHORTLE, JR. '42,

Twin Killing

Right now things look too good, to this usually pessimistic department. Certainly the Cats twin killing of Springfield and Trinity is not conducive to Cassandrian predictions for the pending tilt with the St. Michaelmen. According to all the reports the Cats were in top form. It's getting so you can't tell whose going to be high scorer on any given evening. Against Norwich it was Healy, against Springfield it was Corley and against Trinity it was Beauchemin. What are you going to do with a team like that? Even Frankie Taylor, who is supposedly a guard, piled up a thirteen point total in the Trinity contest. We recall one of the team members telling us during mid-years that the quintet would do much better from then on. That certainly was a gem of understatement.

And while on the subject of basketball, it might be well to mention that the Kittens seem to have things pretty well under control, also. Thus far they have mopped up about everything that has come their way. Their victory over V. J. C. the other night was a good demonstration of their power and expertness. Sherry Fogg should be complimented for turning out such a good combination. With most of the varsity graduating this June, there certainly will be a need for recruits come next season. The Frosh seem to have the stuff.

By the way, no slight was intended Don Maley in our last column for we were fully aware that he was responsible for the decisive score against the Cadets. We were merely remarking on the fact that the Herald had him down as Don "Mealey' but an overzealous proofreader managed to correct our spelling and as a result the line seemed to indicate that Don did not score that last marker.

Paging Snowstorm

The spring-like conditions of the past few days are gratifying and the balmy breezes are welcome but let's hope they don't put the Indian sign on the ski meet scheduled for this week. If the snow keeps melting at the rate it is right now, those in charge may have to call in a snowmaker (if there is such an individual) to conjure up some snowflakes. Then again trust the Vermont weather—it will change any minute now.

The lineup as released by the committee is a pretty formidable one. According to Saturday's newspapers Middlebury will be as much to be reckoned with as Dartmouth or New Hampshire for at their own carnival the Panthers took an early lead by unexpected wins in several of the events. Just how formidable such teams as Harvard, Amherst, Maine and Syracuse will be is uncertain. But if all goes according to past precedent the big three should be New Hampshire, Dartmouth and Middlebury. The program, however, offers plenty of opportunities for dark horses to slide into the lead positions. The entry of several women's teams should add a glamor note to the whole affair.

Vt. Debates With Middlebury Tonight

The annual Vermont-Middlebury debate will take place at Middlebury on February 18. The question will be: "Resolved, That industry and other private employers may be expected, through private initiative rather than governmental action, to put the employable unemployed to work." Middlebury will have the affirmative and Vermont the negative. The Vermont speakers will be Taze R. Huntley '41, Julius G. Cohen '42, and Harold A. Durfee '41.

Unbridled Team Downs Trinity 58-49

Beauchemin, Taylor Star in Victory Drive

It was six straight wins for Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' crew of basketeers as they returned from a victorious two day trip to Southern New England. The Cats came back strongly after a thrilling victory over the Springfield College quintet to defeat a game but outclassed Trinity College hoop team. It was winter carnival time at Hartford and a good house watched an exciting ball game until Henry Beauchemin put on the finishing touches for the Green and the Gold by dropping in two quick baskets three minutes from the end to start his team's victory sprint.

Trinity was somewhat handicapped by the incapacitation of their star, Jack Crockett, who played with his left arm useless in a cast. Despite this disability he turned in a fine performance at guard and scored five field goals with his one game flipper.

Vermont stepped out in front to an early lead which they held throughout, but Trinity drew up dangerously close in the second half to threaten their visitors constantly. The home team was kept busy chasing "Hank" Beauchemin around as he was dropping them from all angles and enjoying a fine evening. Frank Taylor took time out from his defensive duties at guard long enough to score thirteen points. Captain Paul Corley played his usual fine game and was content to loop twelve points through the strings for his night's work. O'Malley was Trinity's high scorer with four fields and four fouls for twelve points.

The last three games have shown that Vermont's potentialities are great and that they will be a very serious contender for the state crown. Especially significant is the fact that each and every one of the starters due to face St. Michael's this Tuesday are dangerous and are capable of coming through with the chips down. Don Maley showed that he is at his best in a tight game by licking Norwich with a last-minute basket; Dick Healy blossomed out into a scoring threat by dint of his 17 point total against the same team; Frank Taylor proved he was potent by his 13 point performance against Trinity; "Hank" Beauchemin came back into his own by scoring 32 points in the last two ball games; and Paul Corley, who is always a threat and without a doubt the best scorer in the state, dropped in 45 points in the last three contests.

Both St. Michael's and Vermont will go all out to win tonight, and a full house is expected to watch the battle. The Catamounts will be out to avenge a defeat pinned on them by the Ryanmen earlier in the season, and the Purple will go after the championship they won last year.

TURNOVER! ROUNDABOUT! THREE-SIXTY!

This has been a campaign of surprises and the best surprise of all is that Bibby Deming is still in the running for Kake Walk queen. At first she was declared ineligible by the Dean's office but later she was found to be not under warning.

February 17, 1941

To the Editor of the Cynic:

Miss Elizabeth Deming was under warning for the first semester of the current year. Consequently when I was given a list of candidates for Queen of Kake Walk I pronounced her ineligible, feeling that any action by the Committee on Studies would be too late for her to run. However work on the records has progressed more rapidly than expected and this (Monday) afternoon the Committee voted to remove Miss Deming from under warning, thus making her eligible.

Elijah Swift,
Dean.

So, back she comes with a fresh challenge for the crown!

Back in the running again, students!
Back in the race to win!
The campaign is going and votes will come flowing,
And Bibby is coming back in.

Many of you say you don't know Bibby. Students, do you recall the great and glorious, if somewhat dizzy, days of Campus House—when Bibby was a freshman? This year they have torn down Campus House and erected the Waterman Building to commemorate the fact that Bibby lived there.

Bibby lives at the Crowe's Nest this year and they will no doubt have to build some sort of memorial there—for when Bibby wins this title to the throne, The Crowe's Nest will come down to the last rafter.

Now for the facts of the matter. The committee had definite word from the office on Monday morning that Bibby was not eligible. Monday evening they had word from Dean Swift that she was to be permitted to run.

Students, listen for the radio début of our candidate over WCAX on Wednesday evening. At that time, she will present the newest thing in politics—the Negative Platform! Although there are a number of "don'ts" there's nothing that says "Don't vote for Bibby!" Come to the polls and vote for Bibby, a Match for any King!

Snooped and Found Department

Mid "Bibs" and "Woolley lambs" and the coming of the "Dawn" and "Paquettes full of joy" rises this challenging question . . . . "Whom do you want for Queen of the Kake Walk?"

Your inquiring reporters, in an effort to ascertain Joe College's weighty opinion on this paramount issue, have met with the following . . . .

First came J. Royer '41, a Kappa Sig and an affable sort of guy, who said very sweetly, "I'll have anybody you want." This helped us no end.

Encouraged by this enlightening interview, we next approached H. Pache '41, who is all in favor of Miss Woolley, saying in a typical Hank Pache manner, "I feel sorry for her 'cause she's got the measles, besides, I married her once." (We were about to be nonplussed by this statement when we remembered the wedding at the Pi Phi fashion show.)

Seymour James Baum VI of the class of '43 is firm in his well-based conviction. Unhesitatingly he said, "Bibby Deming, by all means! Why? That's self evident. She'd be a good queen because she is democratic to all students . . . . she's friendly . . . . she has a pleasing personality . . . . and besides, she's hot stuff!"

Next we called the Lambda Iota house to see if there was anybody there who could give us an opinion. One of the Owls, who preferred to remain anonymous, said "I'd like Dawn Nichols because (1) She's got a car, (2) She's not too bad to look at."

We next coralled C. Katzew '42 who was almost too busy eating Ritz crackers with jam to deliver this ponderous ultimatum. "I have been looking over the field at one time or another during the year and I have decided to defer making my decision until I have finished reading H. G. Wells' 'The Shape of Things to Come'." We agreed that this would undoubtedly make a scientific basis for selection.

Calling the ATO house, we got hold of a very diplomatic young man named Walter Koladza '43 who wasn't going to get mixed up in any intrigues—Said he "You see, I might want one girl for queen but I might also want to date one of the others. And then where would I be?" Well, we were supposed to be asking the questions—so we left "Walt" to figure that one out all by himself.

Then, we thought that some faculty opinion would be in order so we approached Professor Ladd of the German Department with our Eternal Question—and this is what he said: "Boy! What a spot you put me on! But I have a good idea who should be the queen." And that was all he would say. We teased and argued all to no avail. He wouldn't commit himself any further. So on we went to our next victim.

Said victim happened to be none other than F. Livak '41 who turned out to be an ardent supporter of Hilda Paquette. These, he said, were her qualifications—"She's pretty, she's a sensible country lass—she's quiet, unassuming—full of vim and vigor—and well—I could say a lot more but it would be only repetition."

There you have the personal opinion of several of the men of our fair campus. And now we leave you—with a little more information, perhaps—and probably no more help! See you at the polls!

The world is just beginning to use electricity intelligently, according to Dr. Frederick P. Woellner, professor of education at the University of California.

Writers' League

In his discussion of radio writing, Mr. Thomas M. Donlin, encouraged writers to try the radio free lance field. Those interested should submit their work to the broadcasting system in charge of the sponsor of the program in question.

In the afternoon, by request of the audience, there was a continuation of the morning short story clinic, this time led by Professor Dean, who urged beginners to try something besides love stories, which beginners usually try. There is a good field for animal stories or stories for young people. One of the highlights of this afternoon clinic was the introduction of Miss Mari Tomasi, of Barre, author of the popular novel, "Deep Grow the Roots."

Mr. Harry Stevens of Burlington, made many helpful suggestions on news photography.

At the close of the afternoon clinics, a business meeting was held, at which plans for the Sesquicentennial celebration were made, and it was announced that the next meeting will take place in August.

Events in U. V. M.'s Biggest Week-end

Messin' Around With Mr. Messner

Hear ye—Hear ye! Gather round for your latest news on that stellar attraction of this long-awaited week-end—Masquerade! Authorized news from authoritative sources reveals the fact that Johnny Messner and company will beat out the rhythm for these week-end celebraters. With such scintillating stars as Professor Koleslaw the talented tickler of toy pianos and lilting Jeanne D'Arcy to supply the vocals this band is sure to click. Johnny, who by the way is a mean clarinet swinger, and his boys are fresh from the Hotel Roosevelt at Miami Beach, Fla. Before that he was the feature attraction at the Marine Grill of the McAlpin Hotel in New York. Among his other achievements are his super performance over the NBC network and on many Bluebird recordings. So you don't just have to take our word for it, this man is really good, one of the best to hit Vermont in a long while.

Storm of Colors

In charge of decorations, Kay LeBaron '41 and Jack Bloom '41 announce that the merry-makers will really be dazzled by the effects planned. Reigning over all will be those sparkling, color-catching crystal balls which will transform the old gym into a paradise of colors. Along with these there will be many clever murals, silhouettes and caricatures carrying out the true Kake Walk spirit.

Charming and companionable chaperons of the evening will be Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Pond and Prof. and Mrs. M. E. Witham.

From the time the first early birds arrive until the festive grand march at 11.30 you'll have plenty of opportunity to discover who's who in all their fantastic finery and perhaps discover many a suppressed desire; for Masquerade is, as its title implies, a dance at which you have plenty of chance to show originality or costuming skill in competing for one of those three prizes for the best masqueraders and plenty of fun in being somebody else for the evening.

Fraternities Work On Ice Sculpture

Wednesday night found the aspirants for the 1941 Kake Walk snow sculpture trophy wringing their hands and praying for the weather man to reverse his decision and send some snow to cover the bare, icy hills of Burlington. Their prayers showed some indication of being answered in a mild sort of way when a gentle drizzle began to fall during the evening, but it failed to inspire much courage and most of the fraternities and sororities resorted to importing ice, and some, even, to bringing in truck loads of snow from the outskirts of town where there are still a few remaining vestiges of the currently priceless stuff.

The Kappa Sigs, for instance, not to be thwarted in their plans for contrasting figures, over the caption "Not Much Change," of Joe College a la 1791 and Joe College a la 1941, each grasping a beer mug, brought snow in from the vicinity of the airport. The Owls and Alpha Xi's played it cagey and decided in the first place to make designs of ice instead of snow—the Owls to have a pillar on either side of the walk, and beside each pillar a kake walker mounted on a plaque; and the Alpha Xi's, a block with a green "V" and side wings bearing the dates 1791 and 1941.

Several had very elaborate plans dependent on snowfall: The Phi Delts were going to erect a king and queen on a throne, the Delts a statue of Ira Allen, the Sigma Phis a "V" supported by a skier on one side and a kake walker on the other, the T E P's a cameo of Ira Allen, the Alpha Chis a statue of their patron goddess, Hera, holding a lyre, the Tri Delts a layer cake topped with a walker—but all these plans have had to undergo some rather serious overhawling.

However, the Greek-letter societies, far from discouraged by the lack of cooperation on the part of Old Man Winter have responded in the true spirit of the Kake Walk Carnival, and as long as the supply of artificial ice holds out and provides sufficient inspiration for the impromptu pieces of frozen art, there will be sculpture on the U. V. M. campus this weekend—ice sculpture—adorning every House on the hill.

Forty-Fourth Kake Walk To Feature Several Events

Ski Meet, Basketball Game, Kake Walk, Dance and Banquet Are Outstanding Features

The results of the election for Kake Walk's King and Queen are as follows:

QUEEN

KING
David Sawyer

After several weeks of feverish activity and ever-increasing excitement Vermont's forty-fourth mid-winter frolic is now upon us. The festivities will open in a blaze of glory with the annual Masquerade Ball, featuring Johnny Messner's orchestra, scheduled to take place in the gym at nine o'clock this evening. Following the Masquerade will be a full week-end of activities and entertainment including the I. S. U. Ski Meet, on February 20-22, the Vermont-Middlebury game on Saturday afternooon, the Father - Son - Mother - Daughter Banquet at 6.00 o'clock Saturday evening at the Hotel Van Ness and climaxed by Vermont's own Mardi-Gras, Kake Walk, on Saturday night at the Memorial Auditorium. As a fitting ending for the Kake Walk week-end on Sunday afternoon the fraternities on the hill will hold open house for alumni, parents and students.

The highlight of the Masquerade Ball will be the coronation, by band leader Johnny Messner, of the 1941 Kake Walk King and Queen. These monarchs will be chosen from among eight candidates by the student body on Thursday, February 20. This coronation will climax several busy weeks of campaigning by means of which the various candidates have attempted to gain a majority of the student votes. Colorful decorations and a smooth band testify that the Masquerade Committte has spared no efforts to make the affair one of the best yet in Vermont's long history of successful Masquerades.

Frats Compete

On Saturday night at 8.15 the first of the competing fraternities will present its stunt and the 1941 Kake Walk directed by J. R. Royer '41, R. P. Kenney '41 and W. I. Pye '41 will be on. Following the stunts which are to be 15 minutes in length, and are judged for originality and imagination, the overhead lights will go out, the thrilling strains of "Cotton Babes," theme song of Kake Walk, rendered by the R. O. T. C. band, will fill the air. Into the spotlight will dance the first blackfaced, costumed couple to kick their version of "Walkin' fo' de Kake." After the last of the kake walking exhibitions the prizes will be presented. The Briggs cup will be given to the fraternity with the winning stunt and the coveted Boulder Trophy to the fraternity of the winning kake walkers: Large decorated cakes will be presented to the Queen, the winning kake walkers and the R. O. T. C. band. Judges of the stunts are: Mrs. Wilnetta Taggart, Mr. A. E. Dietrich, Mr. H. D. Pearl. Judges of Kake Walking: Prof. P. B. Willis, Dr. P. A. Moody and Mr. M. D. Powers.

Teams Chosen to Walk fo' de Kake

Ten Fraternities Compete Tomorrow

Growing from an impromptu part of the program to a smoothly running part in which the couples strive to outshine each other in costumes, grace, teamwork and smoothness, carriage and stunts, "Walkin' fo' de Kake" has become the most colorful part of Kake Walk. "Walkin' fo' de Kake" originated from a ceremony of the South at which all the darkies would gather dressed up in their best Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes and "walk" in pairs. Those being the funniest or the most different or the most skillful in some way were awarded the prize of a large cake, as are the U. V. M. Kake Walkers of today.

Each fraternity is allowed to enter one couple who will be given two minutes of kake walking, and a warning bell will be sounded one-half minute before the time is up. The kake walking will be judged on the following basis:

1. Carriage, position of head and shoulders, knee action, position of toes—30 points.
2. Teamwork and smoothness — 30 points.
3. Grace—20 points.
4. Costumes—15 points.
5. Stunts—5 points.

The ten fraternities have announced their choices of Kake Walkers who will be "Walkin' fo' de Kake" Saturday night, February 22, in the Memorial Auditorium:

A T O—W. G. Dudley '43; S. J. Pekala '42.

Delta Psi—R. P. Davis '41; E. F. Roby '41.

Phi Delta Theta—H. L. Pache '41; W. A. Pratt '41.

Phi Sigma Delta—S. H. Sisselman '42; I. L. Harris '43.

Pilgrim Fellowship to Be Led by Rev. Jones

Rev. Charles Stanley Jones will lead the meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship on Sunday, February 23. Charles Carver '44 will lead the devotion. The meeting will begin at 7.30 in the Parish House of the First Church.

Perkins Speaks at Banquet Tomorrow

Come one and all to the Father-Son-Mother-Daughter banquet which will be held at the Van Ness Hotel Saturday night, February 22, at 6 p.m.! Laura Hawley '41 and J. H. Evans '41 are in charge of the banquet which is sponsored by Mortar Board and Boulder. According to Jean Evans, the food "will be the finest obtainable." After dinner, the guests will be greeted by Deans Swift and Harris, and the Kake Walk directors.

Whitey Killick, sports commentator of the Free Press will be Master of Ceremonies, with Professor Perkins of the Department of Zoology the principal speaker.

The purpose of the banquet is to bring about a closer understanding between the parents, the alumni and students of the University. Students are urged to attend and, if possible, bring their parents.

Heil Skiers and Cotton Babes!

At long last, the time of the I. S. U. meet and Kake Walk has come and with them one of the most exciting and event-packed week-ends in Vermont's one hundred and fifty years. Outstanding ski teams from the large colleges in the eastern part of the United Sates are competing in what is the largest ski meet in the country. Vermont students are proud to entertain these athletes, and we extend to them a most hearty welcome to our University, and an invitation to join in the fun and frolic of our unique and traditional Kake Walk which has meant so much to Vermont students for forty-eight years.

Despite lack of snow, the ski events are being run off as planned on the Underhill slopes where ski enthusiasts, competitors and sportswriters are gathered. The arrangements and plans for the I. S. U. meet represented numberless hours of work on the part of Dorothea Smith, general chairman of the meet, and her assistants. Miss Smith and all her helpers deserve a great deal of praise and the success of the I. S. U. meet should give them a keen sense of satisfaction

Tonight, U. V. M.'s forty-fourth annual Kake Walk week-end will commence with a gala Masquerade where Johnny Messner will crown David Sawyer '42 and Jeanne Woolley '42, King and Queen of the Walk. We congratulate Jeanne and David on their election as the regal monarchs of Vermont's mid-winter carnival. The campaigns this year were exceptionally clever and well planned and the spirit of the contestants was most commendable.

The stirring strains of "Cotton Babes" will usher in a Kake Walk which this year will represent another advance in the continuous chain of improvements in the annual entertainment. A Master of Ceremonies should improve the organization of the entire show and the special lighting effects will add attraction.

The innovation this year of a cup to be awarded to the group on campus which builds the best ice sculpture has brought a good response despite the lack of snow and ice and is a practice we would like to see become a part of every Kake Walk.

Despite changes and improvements made in Kake Walk through the years, one thing still stands out: the original presentation of stunts and Kake Walking have remained unchanged. Time and taste have forced the abandonment of many Kake Walk ideas, but the stunts and Walking have withstood the double test and with their long tradition of background, these two events are more firmly entrenched than ever. From a vaudeville act in the Old Mill loft, Kake Walk has grown and expanded until this year it will include an ice sculpturing contest, a masquerade, a coffee hour, fraternity open houses, the coronation of the King and Queen, a basketball game and the Fa-So-Mo-Da Banquet. It should be a matter of pride to the entire student body that Vermont's Kake Walk has now become famous as one of the most unique and colorful college festivals in the country.

Through the medium of this column, we wish to whole-heartedly thank those who have cooperated so splendidly to make this forty-fourth Kake Walk the very best that Vermont has ever seen.

Kake Walk Directors' Private Lives Revealed in Exclusive Interviews

During three informal chats with the co-directors of Vermont's forty-fourth Kake Walk—Robert P. Kenney '41, William Pye '41, John Royer '41—a Cynic reporter ferreted out many of the opinions, whims, and secret ambitions of these three outstanding men on the campus. In spite of the proximity of Kake Walk, which meant busy, crowded hours for them, each man received me graciously and answered my questions kindly. In every case, the interview had to come to an end because of important Directors' Meetings!

"Bob" Kenney received me in the Delta Psi library and patiently granted me an interview. Answering my queries in a friendly, informal, conversational tone he declared that among his favorite "likes" were roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, Tommy Dorsey's music, and Martha Scott's and Ronald Coleman's acting. Bob is majoring in Political Science and may either enter the banking profession or attend some law school. "My ambition when I was younger was to get into the diplomatic service, but" he added with a good-natured chuckle, "my aptitude for languages rather decisively changed my mind!" In the line of reading material Bob likes Time and Life, and his favorite newspaper is the Providence Evening Bulletin—"the best in New England" (plug!). Bob's draft number is 163 and he may go in July to join "Uncle Sam's forces." In answer to a question about the war situation he said, "I think we shall be in it sooner or later, and the quicker the American people make up their minds to that fact the better it will be." Bob meditated a moment when asked what memories of his school life here will always stay with him. "Well, I shall always remember our trip last fall out to Detroit to the Associated Collegiate Press Conference and also the trip to New York to the National Interfraternity Conference. In New York we heard Mr. Willkie deliver a fine speech and I rode down an elevator beside him in the hotel. You ask what I consider the greatest honor I have received while at school here—my answer is: the privilege of being a bearer at President Bailey's funeral."

Kenney Learns to Budget Time

'I asked my host—who, incidentally is not only a Kake Walk director but also the President of the Interfraternity Council, Business Manager of the Cynic, Secretary-Treasurer of the Boulder Society, and Captain of the Track team—about "sleep" and he replied, with a rueful smile, "I sleep when I get around to it." But he added that one worthwhile thing he had learned at college was to budget his time. About this "time" Bob glanced at his wristwatch and politely informed me that he had to be on his way to a meeting.

Not a bit discouraged I set out to pester Mr. Pye next. Bill likewise gave me a courteous reception. He is a graduate of Rutland High School and is enrolled in the Commerce and Economics course here. Among his honors he has been a member of all the men's honorary societies (including Boulder this year), Chairman of Junior Week, member of Interfraternity Council, member of the Faculty-Student Council; he has also achieved distinction in the sports line, participating in football, basketball, and track. "Do you really want to know all these 'favorites' of mine?" he quizzed me in return for my quizzing him. I nodded. "Well, as far as Hollywood goes I like Bill Powell, Jimmie Stewart, Katherine Kepburn, and Joan Bennett. I like to read the Reader's Digest and the Herald-Tribune. As for music, I enjoy both the old classics and the popular tunes. My favorite food is ice cream, all six delicious flavors!!" Bill believes the United States should give all aid to Britain short of war, if this is possible. "What we need is more action and less filibustering down in Washington," he declared.

Pye Cheers for Cap Stubbs

Since he still had a friendly smile on his face even yet, I hurled a new batch of questions at him, receiving these answers: "Waterman Building? Great! Vivid events that I recall? Well, the time we beat Dartmouth in basketball a few years back. Favorite expression? Well, not any for publication! Views on politics? I'm a Vermonter, that ought to cover that. Lasting memories? Well, Tucker's horse, around Kake Walk time last year. . . I shall also always remember a long friendly, informal talk I was fortunate to have with President Bailey one afternoon at his home. Favorite occupation? Oh, studying!!!" While he was coming up for air, I hesitatingly asked him his choice among the comic strips, "Oh," he replied quickly, "I like to read Cap Stubbs best of all. Great stuff!"

As I was asking Bill what he thought about life in general, I caught him sneaking a look at his watch. "Life in general is swell, but it springs a lot of surprises! If you'll pardon me, I have a meeting . . ." And before I could even thank him, my second director had disappeared!

Undaunted and unabashed I set out the next day to call upon by third man, Director Royer. John received me in his room and in this cozy atmosphere he leaned back and relaxed as I sharpened my pencils and opened by notebook. To start the ball rolling I asked a few stock questions and received an interesting variety of answers. "Favorite dish? Anything from the Kappa Sig kitchens! In the musical field I like some of Chopin's works and the modern tunes of Brother Carmichael. My pet newspapers are Cynic and the Herald-Tribune. I like James Stewart's acting. The mention of movie stars recalls an amusing picture I saw recently—"This Thing Called Love" with Melvin Douglas and Rosalin Russell, but I wouldn't recommend it for my mother! People? I like everybody who says, 'Hello!' I think the Waterman Building is going to prove a big asset to the school; all I hope is that they can furnish it."

Royer Likes Dorsey, Messner

As I delved into my notes for more questions my host sat opposite me and his smile, his personality, put me at complete ease. Small wonder that he has a long list of honors such as: member of Boulder Society, Circulation Manager of Cynic, President of his fraternity, member of the Interfraternity Council, and member of Faculty-Student Council! John is majoring in the Commerce and Economics course and his ambition is to get a position in the merchandising section of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. "In answer to your last questions," he said, "I like Life best among magazines because it doesn't take much time to read. Draft? I missed it by a few days, thanks to the old stork! For band music I prefer Tommy Dorsey's, next," he hastily added, "to Johnny Messner's. As for events or happenings which shall stay in my memory, I should list our football victories over Middlebury the last couple of years, and my roommates' (Maley and Healy) decisive baskets in that Norwich game last week. What a great game that was!" he declared enthusiastically, and we discussed it for a while. Then I asked John a few more questions. "The war situation? Well, it will be long and enduring, no doubt. And it's going to be tough for the U. S. A. if we stay out too long. I'd sign up with Coast Guard Artillery; and if worse came to worse, I just as soon be a sentry at the Westfield Reservoir!" (John is a native of Westfield, N. J.) "My greatest interest is in my fraternity and in the University's activities. My favorite occupation is pushing my car down Main Street to the nearest gasoline station, which," he added, peering at a clock across the room and springing up from his comfortable chair, "reminds me I've got a meeting, if you'll excuse me!!"

Would-Be Wearers of the Crown

Aspirants to Kake Walk Royalty Bring to Close Lively Campaigns

Students at U. V. M. during the last two weeks have been treated to a most hectic and entertaining Kake Walk campaign period. Prospective Kings and would-be Queens have plastered posters over all the sacred and ancient walls of the Old Mill, Science Hall, and other college buildings. University thoroughfares and hangouts have been littered for days with handbills. Stickers have been glued in every conspicuous place from notebooks to building walls. Some of them announced:

"Sing and Swing with Gus as King."

Others:

"You Can't Fool Us
Bibby Will Rule Us."

A couple of thirty-foot black and white signs came out with it frankly:

"Elect Fred Logan as King!"

Some posters artistically pictured the rising sun with the proclamation:

The Queen of Queens."
The Queen of Queens."

One poster in the Coffee Corner envisioned a Kake Walk under the rule of "Dave" Sawyer as:

"The Kingdom of David."

Logan's slogan was:

"Alive or Dead
It's Fearless Fred."

Other posters decided the issue of Kake Walk Queen confidently:

"Vote for Hilda L. Paquette She's the Best Queen You Could Get."

Persons calling on the Dean this week were surprised to find outside the office door:

"If 'Mary Jean' suits the Dean
Why not use it for your Kween
Woolley's the 1."

Supporters of Jean Woolley have also attracted notice to her 100 percent Woolley qualities by a pair of stuffed red flannels hung from the topmost beam of the Coffee Corner. To rival this "Bibi" Deming's supporters who announced that "Queen Elizabeth shall reign again," hung many inflated balloons from the same beams.

As if posters over the college buildings weren't enough, other stunts were "pulled." Adherents to the side of "Dave" Sawyer carried a coffin through the Old Mill during Chapel hour just as Fred Logan's committee was giving a loudspeaker program to the assembled crowd.

About the same time a balloon-bedecked automobile parade of cars escorting Dawn Nichols sped around the campus and a real, genuine, somewhat grownup lamb led by several of our more attractive co-eds stormed the citadel of the Old Mill for Jean 100% Woolley.

Gus Malone, Kake Walk King aspirant, sped down to Montpelier a week before Kake Walk to pose with Hollywood's own Guy Kibbee. The photographs were released to the newspapers of Burlington's metropolitan area.

At a dance held Saturday night before Kake Walk, Gus Malone gave out bazookas to all so that they could "sing and swing with Gus as King," while "Bibo" Deming handed out matches to show that "she was a match for the King no matter who he would be."

In honor of "Bibi," her managers hung a line of bibs in front of the Old Mill.

Dinner at the girls' dormitories during the week preceding Kake Walk was especially attractive what with Fred Logan, "Dave" Sawyer, and Gus Malone visiting a different one every evening. Fred Logan even paraded around the dorms one evening to convince the co-eds that he should be their King.

In addition to publishing campaign platforms and literature in the CYNIC, the several candidates gave persuasively hilarious speeches over station WCAX Wednesday night before the balloting.

Tuesday night there occurred a great basketball victory for Vermont. Spectators at the game were startled to find the Memorial Auditorium decorated with posters for all the candidates. They were pleasantly surprised during half time by fliers given in honor of Gus Malone, while "Dave" Sawyer walked around the floor escorted by Ira Allen and Lafayette. Supporters of "Dave" Sawyer were so overjoyed at this event that they passed out candy then and there. A large group of co-eds then danced around the floor in honor of Jean Woolley while the band played "Cotton Babes."

Even the mails were utilized in the campaign. "Dave" Sawyer's backers sent tokens to various houses and dorms, while Jean Woolley sent Valentines imploring "Wool-ye be my Valentiine."

Tokens, fliers, stickers, lapel lambs and tags, sandwich signs, speeches on the radio and before the Home Economics Club, supper at the dorms, Vermont students can get used to anything and did. After having a lamb and a rooster and girls distributing red hearts in the Old Mill,

100% Woolley
and
Don't be as dumb as you useter
Be smart like a Rooster
And Crow for Dawn.

Have a Heart and vote for Bibi.

respectively and victrolas playing "Sunrise Serenade" and loudspeaker campaigns in the Coffee Corner, it might be expected that nothing would be able to startle the average Vermont student. Wednesday's torchlight parade around the campus in honor of Gus Malone was the beginning of the campaign windup.

On the day of voting, students were influenced near the polls by complimentary Woolley cigarettes and by butterscotch proclaiming:

"She's as smooth as butter and don't be Scotch. Vote for Dawn."

This was too much for Vermont students! For as they had come over the front campus that morning they had seen the statue of Ira Allen gloriously crowned in honor of "Dave" Sawyer.

They staggered to the polls and registered their votes.

Women Run the Show Says Rev. O. H. Sisson

Rev. O. H. Sisson of Burlington spoke on the subject, "A School Man in India," Wednesday morning in Chapel. His topic treated of the elaborate system of schools established in India today through the work of missionaries and funds furnished by various countries and the British government. The Indian people are able to attend school at low cost depending on the class of schools which they attend. There are schools for all race groups living in India, the Chinese, Indian, Burmese, Bengolian, etc.

The women in India run the show. They do business and hold the purse. In conclusion, Reverend Sisson said that India has 70 million outcasts knocking at the door of the church.

Campaign Ends With Broadcast

The climax of a series of broadcasts featuring the Kake Walk, Wednesday evening at 8.30 over WCAX, was a success in mud-throwing, dig dealing, and political ballyhoo. Introduced by Meyer J. Levin '41, the Kake Walk King and Queen hopefuls made their final and heartiest appeal to the voters.

Jeanne Woolley made a most hearty appeal, speaking very well and bringing out the points in her program. Jean Stewart, manager for Hilda Paquette, gave a most clever alliterated brief in behalf of her candidate. Then came the Dawn (Nichols) in her appeals to the voter. Last of the Queen hopefuls was Bibi Deming who certainly put over her mysterious negative program in a big way.

Then came the potential Kings: Fred Logan, who threw a few good-natured darts at his opponents, proved why he should be king; Dave Sawyer appealed to the more serious thinker dwelling upon the importance that he could have in carrying out the traditions of Kake Walk; Gus Malone hilariously set himself up as an Old King Cole II, in stating that his "over-exuberance" was only intended to make his subjects happy; Fran Nye kept close to tradition and gave the audience full benefit of his platform as he boasted his representation of the Vermont Party.

All the candidates thanked their supporters in the campaign and expressed appreciation of the new contacts which they had made.

The next CYNIC broadcast will be next Tuesday at 8.30 p.m. Don't forget to listen to U. V. M. on the air!

Good News

What a week. All the news is good news and there's plenty of it. Mark that win over St. Mike's up in your memory books—the grandchildren should appreciate it. It was a pleasure to watch the Cats—for they were enjoying what is known as a "perfect night." Everything clicked from the start and the Ryanmen might just as well have gotten themselves seats on the sidelines and conserved energy. And since this was the Cats' seventh straight win you couldn't call it a "lucky" performance. It was a case of unbeatable accuracy and perfect teamwork. Even the second string was plenty rabid for scores.

Looking back on the season as a whole, we find that the Cats managed to pile up a good victory margin despite a slow start. Three factors featured in the team's apparently over-night revival—the scrapping of an intricate offensive strategy, the use of a man-for-man defense and the rounding into peak form of several of the starters. Hank Beauchemin was definitely off-stride in the opening encounters and his eventual return to his old self was decidedly helpful. Next year's team will no doubt retain some of this year's changes.

At first sight next year's prospects would appear doubtful due to the loss of so many stars by graduation. But Fuzzy Evans will have such veterans as White, Kaufman and Doherty to build around and those frosh of Sherry Fogg should send up some good men. Which is neither here nor there—but the Middlebury game is. Don't forget to be present at the Auditorium, Saturday afternoon for the Cats' final appearance on the boards.

Invasion

With all the skiers coming in from various parts, the general scenery should look like the dress rehearsal of the Russian invasion of Finland, or a Swiss winter resort. Long-planned and waited for the I. S. U. meet is at last with us. The latest weather bulletins report enough snow on Mansfield and the general atmospheric conditions promise more of the same. As to predictions, we're all in a daze. Dartmouth took over the honors at Middlebury but New Hampshire had previously beaten them. What do you do in a case like that—toss a coin? Vermont has a good squad entered and should end up fairly high in the final results if they can show the continuance of the improvement begun at Middlebury. But despite all the possibilities of unknowns coming through, Dartmouth and New Hampshire with Middlebury a strong contender should be the teams to watch. Among the individual stars to look for are Barber of Norwich, Townsend of Middlebury and Clark of New Hampshire. And of course don't forget the co-eds. They will be much in evidence—be doing their best to show that the fairer sex can pull off as neat a "Christy" or "stem turn" as any male.

Well that's a good stopping place. Happy Kake Walk and merry Masquerade.

Cats Meet Midd. In Final Game Of Season Tomorrow

Vermont Expects Capture State Title By Defeating Panthers

It was only one month ago that a Vermont team was valiantly endeavoring to rise from the depths of basketball. A five-game losing streak had been broken the week before with a decisive triumph over Norwich. The most important question then was, "Has Vermont really hit its stride?"

Coach Fuzzy Evans' men proved their Norwich victory was no fluke by taking the measure of a scrappy Middlebury quintet soon afterwards. This latter victory put them into a tie for first place in the State League. Five successive wins followed, and today a rejuvenated Vermont aggregation remains at the top of the standings in league play, as the win over St. Michael's Tuesday virtually gave the title to the Cats.

Although the Middlebury Panthers would be very much gratified to upset the Vermont "band wagon," they are given little chance to break the seven-game win streak. As it is, the Panthers have failed to capture a league game.

Vermont's earlier success over Middlebury was by six points, 47 to 41. The smallness of Middlebury's gym cramped the Cats' style of play. Bob Doherty had a field night with 20 points, when the opposition concentrated on Capt. Paul Corley and Hank Beauchemin.

Tomorrow the spacious Memorial Auditorium floor will afford Vermont its last opportunity of the season to demonstrate its much improved razzle-dazzle shooting at the expense of the already much beaten Panthers.

The game will feature the last appearance of the whole Vermont starting five in basketball. Corley, Beauchemin, Healy, Taylor and Maley will be donning their U. V. M. basketball trunks for the last time. All of them performed admirably during the season. Felicitations are certainly in order to Coach Fuzzy Evans, who in his first year as basketball mentor has already turned out a conceded championship outfit. For a while things looked extremely black for the Vermont cause, when the defeat column was expanding steadily, and the win column looked insignificant. Coach Evans rallied his warriors nobly at the crucial point, and forthwith produced one of the highest scoring Vermont teams in years.

Catamounts Blast Mikemen in Seventh Straight Win 68-41

Corley and Beauchemin Lead in Victory Which Virtually Cinches Title

Paced by Capt. Paul Corley and the rejuvenated Hank Beauchemin, the Vermont Cats followed the Kittens to victory by shellacking the St. Michael's College quintet to the tune of 68-41 and thus capturing the coveted Vermont Intercollegiate Basketball crown, won previously by St. Mike's.

Before a frenzied crowd which jammed the Memorial Auditorium to the rafters Tuesday night, the Catamounts exhibited great offensive power, dropping the pill from every imaginable angle capitalizing on free throws, and in general running circles around the astounded yet intrepid Ryanmen.

Vermont had a veritable bank-night with every man of the starting line-up hauling his share of the loot. In the second period, "Fuzzy" Evans substituted freely and with approximately seven minutes to go, he threw in all the reserves who also weren't too bashful to partake of the spoils.

This Vermont team certainly has gone a long way since they capitulated to St. Mike's in their last encounter 38-26. In that game, the Cats used the now discarded zone defense, played very sloppy ball and their shots were way off. On the other hand, St. Mike's were shooting with finesse and accuracy and registered with regularity.

But, on Tuesday night, the tables were reversed. The Green and Gold's newly installed man-to-man defense clicked perfectly, and after the first five minutes of play left the Purple men in a cloud of dust. Not once during playing time did the Mikemen have as much as a Chinaman's chance of offering competition. The Hilltoppers had an excellent pass attack, fast-breaking and colorful, but their incapability to find the mark accounted for their poor showing. Also it is interesting to note the difficulty St. Michael's had in cracking the loosely-constructed Vermont defense. In fact, most of the Purple scores were made at a considerable distance from the hoop.

Healy and Maley both played a bang-up game, getting the sphere off the backboards in perfect style, whipping it into the offensive play, the former doing a swell job of follow-ups, and the latter, heaving high, arching shots from mid-court with eagle-eye precision. Frankie Taylor played a whale of a game, checking his man to a goose egg, frequently dribbling in, and flipping the ball from the bucket in the famous Taylor manner.

It took the Green and Gold just about 30 seconds to warm up. Corley started the fireworks with a high looping shot and two seconds later, he repeated with a lay-up. Pequignot then came into the picture with a long heave. Then the time-out buzzer apparently sounded St. Mike's death knell. Vermont surged ahead. St. Mike's forged onward. Immediately after resumption of play, Corley sank a shot from the side and Maley followed suit with a flip from way out, Vermont leading 19-4.

St. Mike's called again for time out, and Fitzgibbons replaced Malone at the center berth. Beauchemin heaved the pill in from the side, and then Taylor registered. Beauchemin was fouled by Riley, and the two conversions were good. Score 25-8.

Captain Coffey came in for Riley, Corley fouled Guter, who made one good. Pequignot sewed one in; Guter fouled Maley—good for two points. Two minutes later Doherty substituted for Healy, Maley then sank one, but at this point in the action, the Purple machine started to function. Fitzgibbons ran in for two step shots which were both successful. But then the St. Mike's initiative seemed to have broken. Doherty converted after being fouled and then Corley placed the sphere into the webbing.

With six seconds to go for the first chukker, Healy, who had replaced Corley, flicked a shot from way out and Beauchemin came in for a two-pointer. Riley received a pass to the side, aimed, and scored as the half ended. Score 33-14.

In the second period, the Mike men found the range with Riley setting the tempo, but the damage had been done St. Mike's fought valiantly to no avail.

University of New Hampshire Ski Team

With ten minutes to go in the second half, the Ryanmen were peppering the basket from all angles, but the well-coordinated Cat defense finally stemmed the tide planned play, Doherty laced the ball from the side.

Buzzer sounded and diminutive Milt Kaufman replaced Corley who received a hearty ovation as he left the playing surface. Beauchemin at a jump ball under St. Mike's basket, slapped the ball across the floor, Kaufman nonchalantly picked it up and went in for a pretty step shot. A second later Kaufman scored again with the same type of shot.

At this juncture all Vermont reserves went in and put up a gallant fight, scoring at every opportunity and keeping the Purple well under control. As the final gun sounded Guter sank a lay-up shot.

Riley and Pequignot carried St. Mike's banner scoring 10 points each. Stever Guter, stellar guard, also played a commendable game, cutting and passing smartly, and expertly converting fouls.

If the Senior basketeers play the same brand of ball in the Middlebury game as was manifest in the St. Mike's venture, they will hang up their Green and Gold togs with a smirk from ear to ear which will convey the message that they had "Blitzkrieged" through the last eight games with nary a defeat and had sufficiently avenged their fiasco and the hands of the St. Michael's Purple men on January 7.

Dartmouth Second With Vermont A Close Third

In an amazing exhibition of skill and endurance the University of New Hampshire langlauf skiers bolted to an early lead in the Intercollegiate Ski Union with a perfect score of 100.

Capt. Paul Townsend crossed the finish line in first place just ahead of his teammates Bill Keough and Ralph Townsend in the excellent time 52:39. These three men followed by Allison Merrill in fifth place piled up the New Hampshire lead in this event.

The Vermont skiers showed their best form of the season and loom as a threat in the remainder of the competition this week-end. Sigma Nu Maintains Lead in Bowling League

The Vermont Independents shellacked the Kappa Sigs 36 to 12 to win the Intramural Basketball Championship. The Independents started Corsonnes, Smith, Willson, Kipp and Stoddard, with Dunn subbing.

On the basis of wins and losses, the standing is as follows:

1—Independents.
2—Kappa Sigma.
3—Phi Delta Theta.

Enrollment at Los Angeles City College, restricted because of crowded campus conditions, is down 12.8 percent.

Kake Walk Developed from Strictly Informal and Impromptu Affair

Did you know that the first Kake Walk on the U. V. M. campus started because Frederick T. Sharpe was disappointed over a promised Military Ball in 1893? Through the years many improvements and new features have been added until today we have the annual celebration as we know it now.

Whereas we now plan for several months in advance for this event, back in the 1890's the preparations usually began the Friday noon before the performance Saturday evening, and on Saturday morning a poster would be put up on the bulletin board reading, "Kake Walk in the Drill Hall Tonight. Everyone welcome!" According to the authorities of that time the affair, although it was strictly informal with no attempt at fancy dress, was very well attended although it was looked upon askance by some of the professors. The entertainment consisted of dancing the Virginia Reel and other similar dances to the accompaniment of a three-piece orchestra.

Keg of Beer Donated

The next year the celebration was held in the loft above the chapel in the Old Mill at which time a keg of beer was donated by a certain McCarthy, proprietor of "one of those Establishments." History tells us that under the influence of the aforementioned keg of beer the students celebrated by throwing various articles of furniture through various windows, and staining up the walls with what beer they didn't drink. As a result of this escapade, Ted Randall, then editor of the CYNIC was summoned before President Buckham and requested to remonstrate with the students through his columns. Randall, shamefacedly was forced to confess that he himself had been one of the happy celebrants and for that reason felt a little reluctant about upbraiding the others. "Well," replied the President, who fortunately possessed a sense of humor, "you can condemn property damage, can't you?" All of which may be mere hearsay but it certainly shows the wild and embryonic stages of our present-day event in an amusing light.

A lapse of two years then ensued as a result of this second Kake Walk when it was outlawed as "an activity unbecoming to college students" by faculty members.

Then from 1896 to 1904, Kake Walk was held annually in the Armory and the Old Opera House. During these years, the program consisted mostly of minstrel shows and satires on personalities of the Faculty. At one of these events it is extremely interesting to note that the late President Bailey took an active part.

Classes Put on Stunts

In 1904, the scene of Kake Walk shifted to the University gymnasium where it was held until a year ago. At this time, "Walkin' fo' de Kake" came into prominence, the prize for the winning couple being a cake from the kitchen of the Marshall "Hash House." The stunts were put on by classes rather than fraternities. Later, Greek-letter fraternities became the competing parties.

With the passing of years, Kake Walk became a highly refined art requiring a maximum of efficiency and practice. A ruling was made that each stunt must be timed; that is, each fraternity must set up their stage properties in darkness, present their skit, and then remove their properties in darkness, all in a specified amount of time.

"The Grand Peerades" were instituted not very long ago, and represent the height of originality. It is amazing what the collegiate mind can conceive in the way of characterizations, devices and contraptions.

Back in 1922 one whole issue of the CYNIC was devoted to Kake Walk and included such startling news as the account of the faculty crap team trimming the Vermont Club Rollers and an advertisement of the College Book Store to sell ten bottles of "ye old brew" at a moderate price. The issue, printed in glaring red ink, was headed by the caption, "All the news that's fit to print and much that isn't."

King and Queen Reign

A new innovation was introduced in 1934, the choosing of the Kake Walk King and Queen, who reign over the Masquerade on Friday night and the main event on Saturday night. This popular election of the two reigning deities culminates a strenuous campaign on the part of the business managers of the candidates.

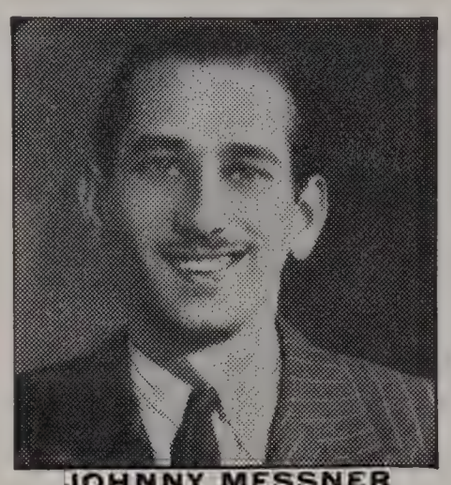
There are two co-directors of Kake Walk, one in charge of production and one of finance. These directors are selected on the basis of their ability shown while scrubbing Kake Walk during their first three years in college, and share the entire responsibility of the event.

In 1937, special trains from New York and Boston brought alumni to Burlington and various banquets, breakfasts and teas were held. In 1938, the scene of Kake Walk was shifted to the Memorial Auditorium because of its advantage in seating capacity.

Kake Walk really has three great motives—it furthers the good will and spirit of the students, it has a financial significance in that it partially makes possible the southern baseball trip, and it has a great and respected traditional background which is dear to students and alumni alike.

Britain reports three former team captains at Eton College have been killed in the armed services.

Women Organize New Rifle Team



Several girls from the University of Vermont are showing a marked interest in rifle shooting as an extra curricular activity at the Pioneer Rifle Range.

The group has been shooting only a couple of weeks, and already there is evidence of the possibilities of another winning University Women's Rifle team. In another season, with the coaching and practice they are now getting, there should be enough girls to furnish a very good team.

Messner Tells How A Hit Is Written

JOHNNY MESSNER

How to write a "hit" song is related by Johnny Messner, who with his orchestra will be on U. V. M. campus for its big annual event—Kake Walk. It has always been the impression that a few notes will click in a writer's mind and in a moment other notes start finding their way, slowly but surely to a rhythmic and melodic sequence until a theme develops into a song or perhaps a "hit." When asked if this were true, Johnny Messner replied that it was and illustrated this idea by telling how he came to conceive one of his recent songs—"Study in Eight Notes."

It happened, he said, the afternoon he and his band were returning to New York by bus after an engagement in Trenton. It was a fall afternoon and light flakes of snow were beginning to sprinkle the streets. The unusual pre-winter touch gave Johnny his first inspiration and he hummed two notes. The bus rumbled on, next passing through Elizabeth. The snow died away. A fresh combination of notes struck the Messner mind. The bus continued through Newark. The mind theorized on an extra note or so. They fitted in perfectly. Then through Harrison and Kearny, more notes and measures; through Holland Tunnel, Messner dreamed several musical strains. And by the time Johnny and company reached New York, he had his chorus in a catchy alignment. Then a dash to the piano to run off the crazy jumble of notes and to spread them in flowing sequence—the verse came easily. He next discovered that he had used only eight different notes and by adding each to a new combination, he had a new air. He thereby named it "Study in Eight Notes" and sold the song that very day!!

Johnny Mesner specializes in clarinet playing, add to that his terriffic arrangements and an effective backdrop of supporting music from his trombone choir. Messner himself vocalizes along with featuring Jeanne D'Arcy and the "Three Jacks" with his orchestra. Besides presenting his smooth arrangements to the public, he gives out on "hot swing" and several novelty numbers with Profressor Koleslaw in the spotlight.

Killick and Goodrich Lead Frosh to Victory

The freshman cagers evened the series with Green Mountain Junior College, pounding out a 36-35 victory which kept the spectators on the edge of their seats throughout the contest.

It was nip-and-tuck all the way, with Bob Bennett leading the Frosh basketeers with 16 points. It took two G. M. J. C. men to stop high-scoring Larry Killick, who nevertheless figured in every play, working the ball in to Bennett and the other Kittens for close shots.

Snider and Fisk led the Greenies, scoring 7 and 6 points respectively, as Coach Heffernan alternated two squads in a vain attempt to halt the Frosh attack.

Master of Ceremonies Gearing Interviewed

When interviewed Don Gearing '41 said that he felt this year's Kake Walk would be bigger and better than before. The directors have tried to replace the slapstick pageant of previous years with a grand show. He feels that if the Greek-letter fraternities and Independents on our campus show the fine spirit at Kake Walk of which they are capable it will be a huge success.

Prof. Dykhuizen To Lecture Twice On Agriculture

"What is a Desirable National Agricultural Program? will be the question which experts will attempt to answer in a School of Philosophy for New Jersey Extension Workers, February 25-27, in which Prof. George Dykhuizen of the department of philosophy of the University of Vermont will be one of the instructors. The sessions of the school, held under joint auspices of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture and the Agricultural Extension Service of Rutgers University, will meet at Rutgers, New Brunswick, N. J. The meetings of the school will extend over three days. Professor Dykhuizen will speak at sessions of the second and third days.

Theme of the first day's discussions is "Foregrounds and Backgrounds." Carl F. Taeusch of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture speaks on the subject, "The Extension Worker Takes Stock in a Time of National Crisis." Dwight Sanderson of the Department of Rural Sociology at Cornell University will consider "Poverty in a Setting of Plenty: General Social and Economic Backgrounds." Mordecai Ezekiel, Economic Adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, will develop "The Recent Response of Government to Agriculture."

"What's the Government's Business?" is the theme of the second day's study. Professor Dykhuizen will speak on "Democracy versus Autocracy: A Study of the Roots." Dwight Sanderson will take up the question of "Government's Job in the Distribution of Our Plenty." "The World War and Its Possible Effects on American Agriculture" will be the subject of O. B. Jesness of the Division of Agricultural Economics at the University of Minnesota.

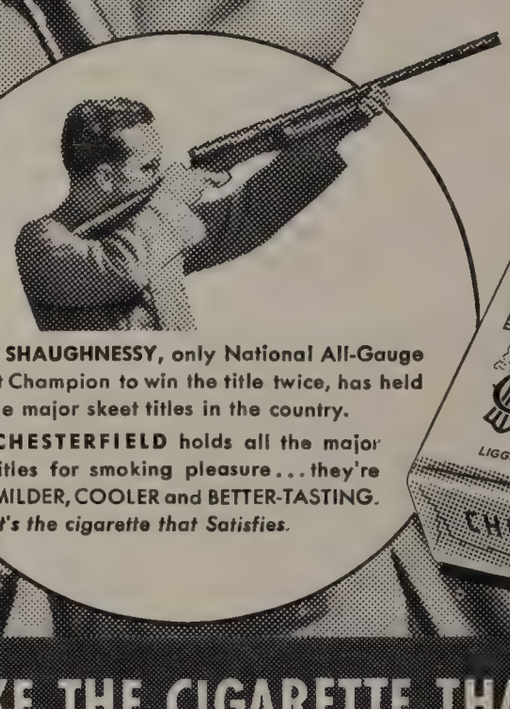
"Social Adjustments in a Changing World" will be the central topic of the third day's work. Professor Dykhuizen will speak again, on "Cooperation versus Competition: the Place of Each in Modern Society." O. B. Jesness will discuss "Fundamentals in Long-Run Agricultural Policy." Mordecai Ezekiel will examine "Agricultural Adjustment for National Defense: A Program for New Jersey and for the Nation."

Professor Dykhuizen, who has studied extensively with the Department of Agriculture, has written booklets on the philosophy of agriculture and teaches a course in that subject at the University, recently spoke on the subject at Laconia, N. H., under auspices of the University of New Hampshire. Last week he appeared again, this time under auspices of the Vermont Extension Service, and spoke to county and state committeemen of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration meeting in Burlington.

Coffee Hour Will Be More Informal

For the first time since Coffee Hours were begun at Southwick two years ago, there will be an entirely new kind of afternoon at Southwick this Sunday. It will be an informal Coffee Hour, held in the ballroom, and all are urged to come, whether they have taken off their church clothes or if they have just been for an afternoon walk. Skiers returning from the Country Club may stop in and have coffee and doughnuts, too—in short, everyone is invited to this informal Coffee Hour. It is hoped that many more people will come to Southwick this Sunday from 3.00 o'clock to 4.00 than have ever come before under the old system.

Alice Needham, Phyllis Savage, and Natalie Spear are in charge of the new kind of Coffee Hour this week.



Connecticut's Lieut.-Gov. James L. McConaughey has been president of Wesleyan University since 1921.

Lambda Iota Wins Sculpture Award With Triple Theme

U. V. M. defies the Weather and Imports Quantities of Ice

Despite the unfavorable weather conditions for ice sculpturing, all the sororities and fraternities and a few dormitories on the hill laughed at the weather man and turned out many fine ice sculptures in competing for the cup offered for the first time this year. At Kake Walk proper Saturday night, the judges announced that the cup would go to Lambda Iota. The Owls had a combination of themes. There was a plaque with kake-walkers as a background, and a bust of Martha and George Washington on the sides of a gateway entrance, and between this entrance was an owl. The judges gave honorable mention to the Kappa Sigs who had Joe College 1791 and 1941, each with a beer mug (and, incidentally, the 1791 beer mug kept dropping off) and the letters "Not Much Change" beneath the two figures.

Depict Ira Allen

One of the finest and carefully worked sculptures was the statue of Ira Allen by the Delta Psi's. The Delts even went as far as to get an exact cast of Ira Allen's head. The SAE's had a yellow cake and a background of "UVM" in green and the words "Kake Walk" with the date of the first Kake Walk, 1893.

The TEP's had a reproduction of the Ira Allen Chapel in red and with even a clock in the steeple. The Sigma Nu's had a good idea, but the warm weather spoiled their plans. They had planned on having a spray of water come out through the top of a cone by means of a hose, and the spray would freeze with a fountain-like effect. At night, they planned to throw colored lights on this.

The Phi Sig's had a very imposing ice sculpture and one of the very best on the hill. It was a huge figure of an Indian kneeling. The Indian was topped off with a big red feather. The ATO'S had a carving of George Washington, and a cherry tree and hatchet on either side and the words "God Bless America." The Phi Delt's had a figure of a skier and at night a light threw an imposing shadow

"Suki" Makes Good In the Theatre

Priscilla Newton Wood '38 has taken another step in a promising theatrical career with a rôle in "My Sister Eileen," which has been playing in Buffalo, N. Y., and opens in Chicago the twenty-fourth. This play has been an outstanding Broadway success, under the direction of George S. Kaufman, famed in New York dramatic circles and throughout the country. Kaufman continues to direct the play as it travels to Buffalo and Chicago. In Chicago, "My Sister Eileen," adapted from Ruth McKenney's best seller, will appear on the stage of the Harris Theatre. Mrs. Wood, the former Priscilla Newton, appears as Helen in the play.

After receiving high praise for her acting in "Our Town," which had its first presentation outside New York City in Burlington, Mrs. Wood went to New York and later appeared on Broadway in an Ethel Barrymore play, "Farm of Three Echoes." She was with the Nantucket Summer Theatre all last summer.

Some of the meetings will be at Harvard University, while others will take place at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Professor Holmes will be away for the balance of the week and will return to Burlington Sunday.

Masquerade Sees Royal Crowning

The long-awaited masquerade has come and gone in a blaze of glory. This traditional affair, one of the highlights of Kake Walk week-end, truly fulfilled all expectations by being the most outstanding dance of the school year.

The gymnasium was transformed to a utopia of light and color by revolving multi-colored crystal balls, Kake Walk murals, caricatures and streamers. Kay LeBaron '41 and Jack Bloom '41, co-chairmen of the decorating committee, did a splendid job and deserve a vote of thanks.

That melodious maestro, Johnny Messner, and his musical mirth-makers were added to the parade of big-time bands who have been featured yearly at Masquerade. With Professor Koleslaw beating it out on his toy piano, Jeanne D'Arcy going to town on the vocals, the maestro himself stepping in on a chorus with his clarinet and vocalizing, and the rest of the band giving out with clever glee club arrangements, this band was at one time an excellent dance and entertainment unit.

The high spot of the evening was the crowning of King Dave Sawyer and Queen Jeanne Woolley by Johnny Messner.

Alumni Banqueted At Van Ness

Whitey Killick is Master of Ceremonies

The Van Ness Hotel, with decorations of spring flowers and candles, was the setting for the Father-Son-Mother-Daughter banquet which was held Saturday night before Kake Walk.

After enjoying the fine dinner prepared for them, the 150 guests were entertained by Whitey Killick as master of ceremonies. Mr. Killick is a local sports commentator and is also employed making "lollipops safe for babies" in a Burlington confectionery concern.

R. P. Kenney '41, W. I. Pye '41, and J. R. Royer '41, directors of the 1941 Kake Walk, were present to greet the guests. Dean Swift, of the Arts and Sciences College, spoke concerning his work in the University. He cited several cases of boys who don't make good in college and gave his definition of a dean as being a "man who is not bright enough to be a college professor and who is too bright to be a college president." Miss Freda M. Harris, assistant dean of women, expressed her pleasure at seeing the parents whom she has become acquainted with through correspondence present with their sons and daughters whom she meets in various college activities. Dr. H. F. Perkins, of the zoology department and director of the Fleming Museum, was the main speaker, and the audience was entertained by his reminiscences and short stories. Prof. G. L. Millikan, in his usual pleasing manner, sang two selections, accompanied at the piano by Betty Cole '41.

Laura Hawley '41 and J. M. Evans '41 were the co-chairmen of this very successful affair.

Independents Dance

Saturday evening, March 1, the Independent women are sponsoring a dance at Southwick. There will be both square and round dancing with music supplied by a local orchestra.

Final arrangements for the dance have not been completed yet, but Hilda Paquette '42, who is in charge, has announced that the chaperones will be Prof. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell and Prof. and Mrs. J. G. Leeder.

EDITORIALS

A New Crew Takes Over Your Cynic!

With today's issue the staff of your twice-weekly paper is again changing. Just a year ago today we took over the responsibility of publishing the CYNIC for the students and the faculty of the University. Skepticism accompanied the announcement that the head of the new staff was to be a woman, and the rest of the editorial staff with the exception of the Sports Editor and one of the staff assistants were women.

We took the job only because there were no men who were eligible for these positions. This fact has brought to our attention one of the most apparent deficiencies in the student body at Vermont. It has become apparent to us during the past year that there is a considerable number of men on the campus who do a minimum of class work, are financially secure, are not members of athletic teams and yet do not cooperate in campus activities and do a maximum of criticizing. These men, we sincerely believe, should realize that college men and women who make a sincere effort to make a reasonably good scholastic average and who support the University's activities and all it stands for as an institution, derive satisfaction and become more interesting personalities. These statements are not directed at any specific group of men but toward a campus-wide group with whom we have become acquainted in our efforts to publish the CYNIC.

During this year in which we have been responsible for your paper, we have come to appreciate dependability and loyalty in a student. On a paper such as the CYNIC, for which all the work is voluntary, the staff relies solely upon the new editors, reporters and scrubs for the gathering, writing and editing of the news of the campus. The task is a difficult one and you of the student body should become aware of the problems involved in the publishing of a twice-weekly paper for you.

The CYNIC is run on very strict budget which permits only a few pictures. The approximate cost of a four-page issue is $50.00 and the cost of a six-page issue is about $75.00. Approximately sixteen hours are needed to publish a four-page issue, which includes the setting of the type, the actual "making up" of the issue, the proof reading and correcting, and the printing of the paper.

When we were at the Associated Collegiate Press Conference in Detroit, we were surprised to learn that there are less than ten American colleges, whose enrolments are less than 1,400 students, that publish a twice-weekly paper. Most of the colleges the size of Vermont publish a paper only once a week and a large number publish only bi-weekly.

We have attempted to give you a few facts incident to the publishing of your campus paper. Our aim in doing this has not been to excuse the faults of which the retiring staff has been guilty, but to make the student body appreciate and cooperate with our successors. They will need your support. The men and women who are accepting the responsibility of publishing this paper for the next year are capable, dependable and loyal, and we are confident that the student body will join with us, the retiring staff, in pledging to the new staff of the CYNIC its loyal support and wishing them the very best of luck in their new responsibilities.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Now that all the laughter and fun of Kake Walk have become another memory, I would like to take this opportunity to extend my sincere thanks to all those who in any way helped in my campaign for king. It was indeed a real privilege and one which will be lasting for time to come, but which was only made possible by the warm response so many of you displayed. The campaigning was a lot of pleasure and in some way I hope it made your Kake Walk Carnival more enjoyable. And so again, I thank you, and may we have many more Kake Walks to come, as full of spirit and fun as this, our 1941 Kake Walk was.

Sincerely yours,

by 0.83 of a point. In addition to the bronze cup, which is to be theirs permanently, the Dartmouth ski team also received the I. S. U.'s rotating cup.

The 1941 Kake Walk began with a short concert by the R. O. T. C. band, followed by a fanfare of trumpets which announced the approach of Queen Jeanne Woolley '42 and King David Sawyer '42. After the handsome royal couple had seated themselves upon their thrones, D. F. Gearing '41, master of ceremonies, announced to an enthusiastic crowd of students, alumni and parents the S A E stunt, written and directed by R. B. Hunting '42, entitled "The Life I Love to Lead" or "What Could Be Worse." The stunt was concerned with the draft, as was the second stunt, "The Dafty Drafter" or "Brenda and Cobina Get Their Man," presented by the Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity. The main characters, Brenda and Cobina, were modeled after the pair of comediennes in Bob Hope's radio show. A clever impersonation of President Roosevelt by Charles Katzew '42 and a pair of swimmers, R. C. Steinman '42 and S. J. Baum '43, brought many laughs from the large audience.

Gone With the Fiend

The Kappa Sigs' winning stunt, "Gone With the Fiend," based on contemporary events and with a perseverant entomologist thrown in for good measure, was the third skit presented. Leading rôles were admirably played by J. R. Royer '41, J. E. Corbett '43, P. E. Corley '41 and J. L. Costello '42.

"The Elephant Vanishes," which won the second prize for the Phi Delts, was fourth on the program. The stunt pictured the decline of the G. O. P. from the top-of-the-world position in 1928 through its decline in the bad years of 1932, 1936 and 1940. Important rôles in this show were played by J. F. Cronin '41, F. P. Logan '42, and W. A. West '43.

The last stunt was given by the Sigma Nu's and was entitled "Still Going." The comic strips and hill-billy customs were featured in this skit which told of "Li'l Abner" and his education at the University of Vermont.

Dance Exhibitions

Then came the most colorful part of the program—the "walkin' fo' de kake." After exhibitions of "jitterbugging," "square dancing" and "the old-fashioned waltz," the first walkers were greeted by wild applause as they started to strut to the strains of "Cotton Babes." Following the parade of walkers, Don Gearing introduced Mr. George Millikan, who after due hesitation, awarded cakes, cups and money. First of all was a cake for the Queen. Then Mr. Joseph Lechner, leader of the R. O. T. C. band, and the directors of the 1941 Kake Walk—J. R. Royer '41, R. P. Kenney '41 and W. I. Pye '41—received cakes and much thanks for their share in the success of this year's Kake Walk. With the presentation of each cake, the crowd's curiosity increased until Mr. Millikan announced the winners of the various competitions.

The judges of the stunts were Mrs. Wilnetta Taggart, Mr. A. E. Dietrich and Mr. H. D. Pearl, and of the kake walk Prof. P. B. Willis, Dr. P. A. Moody and Mr. M. D. Powers.

With the presentation of these awards ended a glorious Kake Walk indeed worthy of the celebration of U. V. M.'s sesquicentennial.

Dr. Perkins to Speak To John Dewey Club

The John Dewey Club will meet Thursday, February 27, at Southwick at 8.00 p.m. Professor Perkins of the zoology department will speak on the "Philosophical Phase of Eugenics."

Approximately a sixth of the 1,794 students at the University of North Dakota are sons or daughters of farmers.

Fifteen members of the University of Minnesota medical school staff have been assigned to army base hospital duty.

Sports Cast

By the SPORT EDITOR

Last Bow

This is what is known, in poetic language, as a swan song. After today we bow out, lay down our trusty Waterman and leave the sports-casting to our successor. It's been a great year and we feel rather fortunate to be able to bow at such an auspicious moment—the Cats having finished a grand basketball season and the Outing Club having efficiently handled the I. S. U. meet. What could be more gratifying to a sports editor's heart (if he has a heart)?

Quite a bit of ink has flowed since last year and quite a few rash predictions have been made. We only hope our successor will not have to burn so much midnight oil making those self-same predictions. And we hope he may hit the bullseye more often. To him we are leaving our crystal ball and our patented Ouija board for consulting the spirit world.

Looking back we are aware only of an interminable row of daffy columns. We are also aware of a lot of games well played and many really exciting moments. It's been worth a little hair pulling over columns to be able to share in the excitement that goes with athletic competition—sharing as we have only from the sidelines, we have enjoyed trying to reproduce some of the thrill in print and to give credit where credit is due.

A sincere vote of thanks is owing to the entire physical education department for their fine cooperation and patience, and a special vote of thanks to Graduate Manager Sabe Abell for providing tickets when most needed and for his timely notices of coming events and schedule changes. There's nothing like friendly cooperation to keep things sailing smoothly.

All of which seems like a pretty roundabout way of saying farewell. We would like to close with a snappy quote but we can't seem to quote a quotable quote unquote. Mayhap it's just as well. To one and all—this is positively our last word. Take it away, Charlie.

Dartmouth Wins I. S. U. Meet By Slim Margin

Wins I. S. U. Meet

By the narrowest margin in intercollegiate skiing history, Dartmouth College's ski team nosed out the University of New Hampshire by .83 of a point to win the Intercollegiate Ski Union's 1941 meet, completed with the jumping Saturday afternoon. The meet, held under the auspices of the University of Vermont Outing Club and the Underhill Winter Sports Club on the improved western slopes of Mt. Mansfield, saw Dartmouth walk up 565.30 points to New Hampshire's 564.47 total, based on six events—two actual competition and two combined. It was Dartmouth's narrow victory in the jumping at the new Jump Bowl near the Halfway House on Mansfield Saturday afternoon which enabled it to shut out the Wildcats from New Hampshire, for the visitors from Durham racked up their second perfect score of the meet by getting 100 points in the combined langlauf and jumping.

Norwich, on its excellent showing in the jumping, moved into third place ahead of the Crimson skiers from Harvard, who had tough luck in the leaping, taking several falls which dropped their form and total down. Norwich scored 522.22 points and Harvard, in fourth place, had 518.94 points.

A real battle for the next three positions developed between Williams, Middlebury and Vermont, who finished fifth, sixth and seventh in the order named only separated over one point apart. Williams totaled 502.45, Middlebury 501.64 and Vermont 501.36.

DAVE COLLINS

New Jump Bowl

Amherst was eighth, to remain in the junior division of the I. S. U. for another year, getting 435.70 points to nose out Maine, which finished with 433.09. Syracuse was last, moving into the junior division with Maine for next year, while the teams which placed first and second in the junior division I. S. U. meet next week at Rumford, Me., will take the ninth and tenth places in the senior meet in March. Syracuse had 378.25 points.

Saturday's jumping, inaugurating the recently completed Jump Bowl, drew a crowd of around 1,000 spectators, and although conditions were not of the best for jumping, the results were satisfactory. Coach Ed Blood of the New Hampshire team was the fore-runner before the trial jumps and the two competitive jumps, and after he had leaped 137 feet his first time down suggested that only three-quarters of the take-off be used, as he did not think enough snow had been packed onto the lower quarter.

Roger Simpter of Dartmouth won the jumping by a wide margin on points, scoring 218.7 for form to Merrill Barber's 208.3. Simpter had the longest competition jump of the day, 117 feet on his first jump and added a jump of 115 feet his second time. Barber, from Norwich University, leaped 115 and 112 feet to gain a slight edge over Bill Distin, another Dartmouth ace, who had leaps of 114 and 113 feet, and a form rating of 208 points.

No skiers were injured in spills, and of the forty-six taking three jumps each, there were only sixteen falls, with the shortest jump being 71 feet, which is not a bad average for a new hill.

Collins Leads Cats

Vermont jumpers, after two of them fell in their trial jumps, kept their feet in the competition, and the quartet finished in 19th, 20th, 21st and 22nd places, with Dave Collins leading with jumps of 83 and 86 feet, and a point total of 176.4. Bob Goss jumped 84 and 83 feet, Ernie St. Mary 81 feet each time, and Harvey Goodell, who was unable to participate in the cross-country Thursday due to an attack of the grip, left his bed to place 22nd with leaps of 81 and 86 feet.

This excellent showing enabled the Vermont jumpers to place fifth, and with their excellent third in Thursday's langlauf, to take third place in the combined event, figured after the jumping had been completed.

There were plenty of thrills for the crowd which gathered up and down the sides of the landing hill and on the side of the hill opposite the jump, where a perfect view of every jumper from the time he started until he finished could be had.

Simpter displayed excellent form from start to finish. His course was straight, and after his landings he shot into and across the traverse without the slightest wavering. The leaps of the first thirteen placers were all excellent, considering that the landing hill was rough in spots and ruts quickly appeared.

In the women's downhill held in the morning on the Stevens Trail, Sue Martines of Middlebury was the winner, making the excellent time of 53.6 seconds to nose out Bea Gossmiller of Connecticut College for women by .2 of a second. Suzanne Van Dyke of Wellesley, a member of the United States women's F. I. S. team a year ago, placed third with a time of 55 seconds.

The combined women's downhill and slalom title was won by Ruth Dickson of the University of New Hampshire, who took first in the slalom and eighth in the downhill. Officials made a recheck Saturday of the slalom and found that Miss Dickson was the winner, not Helen Chandler of Skidmore as was released Friday.

Notable was the performance of Dave Collins of Vermont, captain of the skiing team. He placed sixth in the cross-country, nineteenth in jumping, eighth in the combined jumping and cross-country, twelfth in the downhill, twenty-second in the slalom and fifteenth in the combined downhill and slalom.

When the judges went to work in the U. V. M. gym office after coming back from the mountain area, tension was high for observers who knew what it was all about—this one didn't—felt that the final team score for the meet would be close. None thought it would turn out to be one of the closest in the history of intercollegiate skiing, .83 of a point.

It took a triple recheck of the three-day results before the final tally was pronounced correct. New Hampshire gave the Dartmouth Indians a real fight all the way through, and had the honor of chalking up two perfect team scores, cross-country and the combination langlauf and jumping, giving future teams something to shoot at.

The meet was run off in excellent fashion due to the fine cooperation of the U. V. M. Outing Club members under the leadership of Dorothea Smith '41, club president. To Dot goes much of the credit for a smooth job, coming as it did with the great activity surrounding Kake Walk.

Lads and lassies in fur coats from Harvard, Dartmouth and other college spots were much in evidence, as well as a large group of the U. V. M. students who arrived in droves by bus, cars and trucks.

Charlie McLane showed why he is called one of the East's outstanding skiers on the steep and winding Tear Drop Trail by winning the slalom, placing second in the downhill and capturing the combined title to lead the Dartmouth Indians, which he captains, to first place after four events had been staged in the Intercollegiate Ski Union's annual meet.

In the women's slalom Friday Helen Chandler of Skidmore turned in a time of 1:11 to win by a wide margin over a large field. Ruth Dickson of New Hampshire was second with a time of 1:26.

Friday morning's downhill run of a fraction under a mile was won by John Tobin of Dartmouth in the excellent time of 1:14.2, with McLane shoving him with a time of 1:15.6.

Neither of these skiers checked their speed. They shot from a start on a knoll near the top of the mountain at full speed, taking the dips and curves without caution and throwing up clouds of loose snow which had fallen the preceding night and fell all during yesterday's events, giving a four- to six-inch light powder top which went to make skiing ideal.

Bob Clark of New Hampshire was third in 1:17.4, nosing out Finn Ferner of Harvard by .4 of a second, while Franklin King, Jr., of Harvard nosed out Ira Townsend of Middlebury for fifth place by .2 of a second.

Frosh Terminate Successful Season

Well-clicking Quintet Boasts 8 Wins, 2 Losses

With the vindictive win over Green Mountain Junior College 36-35, the freshman basketeers answered their last curtain call of the 1940-41 season.

Gliding through the season with bugles ablaring and drums arumbling, the Kittens threw over every team they played at least once. The sore spots of the schedule were, however, the defeats the freshmen received at the hands of Vermont Junior College and Green Mountain Junior College quintets, but the pain of defeat was greatly alleviated by the joy of victory over the aforementioned teams later in the season.

Sherry Fogg, who came to U. V. M. this year to fill the vacancy left by Fuzzy Evans, varsity mentor, ingeniously molded the comparatively green material into a well-clicking freshman quintet. After many weeks of hard, diligent coaching, Sherman realized his goal—to make the University of Vermont Kitten five the best of its class in the state.

Also credit is due to Larry Killick, star forward. Larry's basketball career started at Burlington High School, where he often thrilled crowds with his neat passing, accurate shooting, calm and cool head. This year Killick has dumped in thirteen points average per game followed closely by Goodrich, lanky center, with a nine-point average. Speed demon Reno Conti, who was the fastest Vermont schoolboy hoopster as a senior at Spaulding High two years ago, started off quite slowly this year, but toward the end of the season his name began to appear in the starting line-up. Though small, Conti is a very cunning player, faking, dribbling beautifully and finding the range not too infrequently. Bennett, a guard, played very good ball from the beginning of the season to the end; the columns beside his name in the score book were consistently being filled in with significant digits.

Other members of the squad who deserve congratulations, felicitations and commendations upon their great showing and effort in annexing the eight victories out of ten starts are: Orban, Manheim, Didinsky a man who rose steadily to a regular berth, Desso, a newcomer who showed great promise, Warsaw, and last but not least, Rudy Kempter.

With the passing of this freshman basketball season, hopes run high for next year's varsity campaign. In view of such freshman material, Fuzzy Evans' job of constructing a new starting line-up will certainly be greatly facilitated.

Cats Clinch State Title; Trounce Middlebury 57-28

Corley, Healy, Maley, Taylor and Beauchemin in Final Appearance

In a climactic finish to a season which started with little encouragement, the Green and Gold drove to the tape with eight consecutive victories and a state championship under Coach Fuzzy Evans' first year at the helm. The final victory came Saturday afternoon at the Memorial Auditorium before a crowd of Kake Walk visitors as the Catamounts defeated Middlebury decisively 57-28 and walked off with the state crown formerly held by St. Michael's.

The game started slowly as the U. V. M. attack seemed to be stalemated by a flurry of Panther baskets. Henri Beauchemin was absent until the middle of the first half, when he made a belated appearance due to circumstances beyond his control. With Hank in there Vermont settled down and gradually drew away from a decidedly inferior visiting team. Nick Krauszer, Middlebury captain and chief scoring threat, had kept his team in the running until he was faced by Beauchemin. From that time on Middlebury did not score for a period of about eight minutes. The half-time score was 23-15.

Starting the second semester with a bombardment of baskets, Vermont ran the count to 36-15 before Middlebury scored. The all-senior team stayed in as a unit until the waning minutes, when Coach Evans inserted his second club. The first team received a terrific ovation as they went off the floor for the last time.

Once again it was Capt. Paul Corley who handled the bulk of the scoring in one of his fine performances. He made some of the most miraculous shots in the book, including a beautiful off balance tap in of a Beauchemin set shot. Hank Beauchemin played a fine floor game and did a fine job of holding down Krauszer, who was Middlebury's best performer. Frank Taylor kept Fred Lapham, Middlebury's set-shot artist, blanketed in a fine piece of defensive work. Don Maley and Dick Healy came in for a lot of praise for their passing and back-board work. Bob Doherty looked good in his relief stint.

Pan-Hell to Give War Relief Dance

Chairmanned by Joené Agard '42

Instead of the usual individual spring informals given by the sororities, Pan-Hellenic Council has set aside March 8 for an inter-sorority dance. The purpose of the dance is to raise funds for the British War Relief. Approximately $100 is expected to be the donation for this worthy cause. The amount given by each sorority has been reached upon consideration of the allotment from the sorority budget for the purpose of its spring informal.

Decorations will consist primarily of large posters done by each sorority that will carry out the general theme of the dance. This theme has not been formally decided upon.

Joené Agard '42 is chairman and the chaperones will be Prof. and Mrs. H. B. Bickford and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry. The decorations committee is headed by Miriam Fiske '42, Alpha Chi Omega; the finance committee by Kay LeBaron '41, Kappa Alpha Theta; and refreshments by Mildred Creamer '41, Delta Delta Delta. Each committee will consist of one representative from each sorority.

Jack Collins' orchestra will supply the music and it promises to be a most delightful evening. Hurry, sorority women, get your dates now. Why delay?

One Year Ago In Sports

Under the régime of Coach Johnny Sabo, the 1939-1940 basketeers fought through a mediocre season, with the final tabulation showing five wins as compared to nine losses.

The season was launched with an encouraging 32-25 victory over McGill. In the next game the Dartmouth Indians luckily eked out the decision over the hard-playing Catamounts, score 37-35. As the referee's whistle was about to blow for the last time in this game, Ace Healy ran in for a beautiful step-shot, but to the disappointment of all Cat rooters, the basket was disregarded due to a foul called on a Dartmouth man. The Indians, probably, for the first time considered a foul a divine blessing.

After the mid-season mark the Cats fell prey to the Indians who scalped away to the tune of 68-39.

With this burning defeat fresh in their minds, the vengeful Vermonters invaded Middlebury and then joyfully returned to Burlington with a 56-27 massacre to their credit.

In a thriller-diller, the Mikemen's accurate shooting cost our courtmen a 61-56 tilt.

On the last road trip of the year, the Cats tripped the New York State Teachers 55-45, and then in the Colgate encounter, the final whistle tolled a 44-33 defeat for the gallant Catamounts.

The Vermont basketeers climaxed the season with brilliant marksmanship and timely in the Trinity game; with the game tied up at 46-46, Belardinelli sealed the verdict for Vermont 48-46 with a beautiful throw from the side.

The spotlight during the season fell upon Anse Belardinelli '40, who beside doing marvelous floorwork, headed the list in scoring honors with an average of 12 points per game.

Top honors also went to Paul Corley '41 and Frankie Taylor '41 who followed Belardinelli in scoring and also showed themselves worthy of first-team rating.

Dartmouth Wins I. S. U.

Dartmouth's team score in this event enabled it to pass New Hampshire, which placed third behind Harvard.

In the afternoon slalom two runs of a tight course was faced by a group of forty-six skiers. Just after the start was a tricky four-gate flush, followed by a two-gate flush on the edge of a steep drop, with another three-gate flush a short distance above the finish line. Bob Meservey of Dartmouth made this in 42.4 seconds, but it took McLane to provide the thrills as dusk was closing down over the western slopes of the mountain. With New Hampshire skiers pressing and promising to get back the lead, McLane took the second trip down the slalom—reset in several places to make it harder—in the fast time of 50.2 seconds, four seconds better than the next best time, turned in by Meservey and Ames.

Their majesties then led the grand march of masqueraders around the gym, and their honors, the judges, chose the prize-winning costumes. A pickaninny couple walked off with honors, and under their black faces we found Bibi Deming and Bishop McGill. A football player, Patty Page, and ballet dancer, Jack Burgess, won third prize, while Uncle Sam and Miss Britain, as impersonated by Jack McGarry and Mary Rita Mullin, won second prize. Professor and Mrs. Witham and Professor and Mrs. Pond, faculty chaperones, acted as part of the judging committee.

And so another masquerade is over—and has left behind many pleasant memories of a glorious Kake Walk week-end.

Financial Report Given by Trustees

State More Serious Than Rumored

The trustees of the University of Vermont yesterday issued a financial statement disclosing the fact the University is confronted with a deficit of $314,502.17 of cumulative past losses, which will be increased to a total of more than $526,000 by the estimated deficit of $212,097.13 for the current fiscal year ending on June 30. The lack of current funds for operations has been made up this year by the use of funds allocated for specific purposes.

It is evidenced by this report that the financial state of the University is even more serious than was inferred by unofficial sources during the past weeks. Acting President Newman K. Chaffee issued a statement for the board, attached to the report, drafted at last Saturday's meeting of the trustees here in Burlington.

The accounting firm of Jurgs, Murray and Densmore, which has audited the University's books for several years, sent out a statement in reply to that given out by Acting President Chaffee. It explained their treatment of items carried as deferred assets and not deficit, "which were evidently misunderstood or overlooked by the trustees until recently."

State Societies Discuss Sesquicentennial

Vermont's sesquicentennial celebration was brought to the attention of two of the state's patriotic societies when the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of Vermont and the Vermont Society of the Sons of the American Revolution held a joint dinner meeting on February 22 at 12.30 at the Hotel Vermont.

Informal talks were given by Prof. Julian I. Lindsay of the University of Vermont and by James P. Taylor, secretary of the State Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Taylor discussed the state sesquicentennial, and Professor Lindsay spoke about the history of the University, which is also celebrating its sesquicentennial this year.

The Colonial War Society held a business meeting at 11.30, preceding the dinner, and the Sons of the American Revolution held their business meeting at 1.30, following the dinner.

Committee Chosen For Home Ec Doings

Last Wednesday night, February 19, the Home Economics Club met in the Brick Barn. Doctor King, new head of the department, gave a very interesting talk on her work in Washington, D. C., where she was chief of the Food Utilization Department.

Plans were made for the spring activities of the club and include the following: A party for underprivileged children, of which Madeline Greaves '41 is in charge, and a tea dance, with Louise Peters '41 as chairman.

Dean Hills' annual sugar party will take place March 7. The following are the committees for that:

Serving—Hester Carver '41, chairman, Lucille Clark '42, Jean Mann '42, and Kay Kyle '42.

Buying—Eloise Bayley '41, chairman, Hilda Paquette '42, and Hester Rice '42.

A spring membership drive is to take place and dues are to be paid to the respective class representatives.

The meeting was followed by refreshments in charge of Mary Tuckerman '43 and Gratia Pearl '42.

Colonel Spalding States Views on National Defense

COLONEL SPALDING

Head of U. V. M. Military Department

With the world becoming more and more embroiled in a great war, the possibility of the United States becoming involved in such a conflict is now far from remote. For that reason, this country has been stepping up its national defense preparations. Since all U. V. M. students are vitally concerned with national preparedness, they will be interested in learning some of Colonel Spalding's views on the subject.

When the Colonel first came to Vermont many years ago, there seemed not the slightest chance of war. Because the army had been reduced and defense appropriations had decreased, national preparedness lapsed. The R. O. T. C. continued to function for any possible emergency. It constantly sent men into the reserves, although gradually many of these men gave this up. However, as all history shows, periodically there was a need for these men, and they were, and still are being, recalled to the colors.

U. V. M. Reserves

Many U. V. M. reserves are now in service, and the Colonel cited, as an example, the case of William H. Cross '40, who has just returned from maneuvers in Puerto Rico. Lieutenant Cross began the course in Military Science here four years ago, when there was no emergency. He took the advanced course and entered into active service as a second lieutenant. Soon after graduating, he served with his regiment at Fort Devens and then went to Fort Benning, Georgia, where he received much practical work. Here he had the opportunity to use new weapons, which the University of Vermont is without.

A few months ago, his battalion made the aforementioned Puerto Rican trip as part of a combined maneuver of the Army, the Navy, and the Marine Corps. The maneuvers involvd movement by water, landing in conjunction with the Navy, and operations on new and different terrain. This, the Colonel believes, is an example of the direction which preparedness should properly take. Lieutenant Cross is but one of many who is an asset to the government. Colonel Spalding declares that every American citizen can be of value to his country if he does his bit, no matter how small, in aiding national defense preparations.

The Colonel concludes by stating that actual military preparedness is a matter of time. It cannot be allowed to lapse and then be expected to spring out when needed and accomplish everything at once. The Germans have molded their enormous military machine only after years and years of hard work and training. Colonel Spalding emphasizes the fact that a good national defense cannot function properly for a long time, unless there is continual preparedness.

Trustees Report on University's Deficits

A financial statement issued February 23 by the University of Vermont trustees disclosed that the college will be confronted with a deficit of more than $526,000 by June 30, 1941. About $315,000 of this sum is a deficit of cumulative past losses. The report indicated that many expense items have in the past been carried on the books as deferred assets and not deficit. Whereas the capital assets have increased greatly during the last few years, this income has aided the students rather than the University; furthermore, the expense of a greatly expanded plant has increased the burden of operating costs. The statement went on to say that in rendering the fullest measure of service to the students, the University had strained its own resources.

In a recent statement on the school's financial condition, Governor William H. Wills, honorary member of the board of trustees, said with confidence that "the present financial difficulties will be solved and the institution will go on to greater accomplishments for the youth of the state."

French Film "Heritage" To Be Shown Here Soon

"Heritage," the newest and latest French film, will be shown at Fleming Museum on Thursday evening, March 13. This may be the last opportunity for a long time to see a real French film, as the conditions in France now are not favorable to producing pictures.

Gloria Oling '42, president, conducted the regular meeting of Le Cercle Français at Southwick on Tuesday evening, February 25. All the new members were welcomed and accepted into the club after the reading of the club's constitution. J. M. Evans '41 introduced the guest speaker, Prof. S. L. Johnston, who told several anecdotes about French life and reminisced about his experiences in Paris.

"Le Perle Noir" (The Black Pearl), a play by Sardou, is going to be produced some time this spring by the members of the French Club. Tryouts for the various parts were held after the meeting.

The activities of Le Cercle Français are varied and interesting, there usually being a guest speaker for the evening and French songs and games on the program.

I.R.C. Hears Talk By Professor Evans On Foreign Affairs

Governor Wills to Address Group on Wednesday, March 12

A large gathering at the I. R. C. meeting, Wednesday, February 26, heard Prof. P. D. Evans discuss the Near Eastern question. After the talk there was a discussion among the members of the group.

According to the facts as presented by Professor Evans, Great Britain is trying to get a toehold on the continent, perhaps at Salonika, and try to force her way into Germany. As for Turkey, Britain feels sure of her as an ally since they have a common interest and admire each other's fighting power as a result of their experience in the first World War. On the other hand, it is doubtful whether Greece will permit Britain to keep her newly acquired basis on Greek soil and so lay herself open as the battleground of the war. An attack on the southeastern front by the British opens them to one serious difficulty, however. The problem of supporting the army and transporting supplies is no mean task even for a navy of the size which the British possess.

Much depends also on Russia. Russia in this war is a silent enigma whose attitude may determine the course of the war. At this point, with her army as inefficiently organized as it is and with her scarcity of supplies, she fears war, especially a possible two-front war, since Japan's stand is not entirely predictable.

On the other fronts, the friction in the Dutch East Indies and Singapore will keep Australia occupied. Spain will probably stay out despite the Axis attempts to draw it into the war. There is a possibility that Germany may try to take the power in Italy and intercept Britain there.

In Africa, Britain will probably clean up Libya, although there are rumors that the Germans are extending material help to the Italians. If Weygand decides to help the British, he has a strong force at his command, although not so strong as before.

Professor Evans does not predict the outcome of the war which is at best uncertain. Concerning the United States and Japan, he feels that if Japan starts a war, the United States will fight.

For future meetings the I. R. C. plans to have the following speakers: March 12, Governor Wills; March 18, Jay Allen. It also plans to have Senator Austin and Professor Driver of Yale in the future.

Dr. Rovenstine Guest Of Osler Medical Group

Dr. Emery Andrew Rovenstine, specialist in anesthesia, spoke to members of the Osler Clinical Society of the University of Vermont Medical College at the Fleming Museum of the University Wednesday, February 26. Doctor Rovenstine took as his subject "Introduction and Present Status of the Gas Anesthetic Cyclopropane."

Students in the Medical College, who maintain the Osler Society, as usual welcomed members of the medical profession in Vermont to the lecture.

Doctor Rovenstine is Professor of Anesthesia at New York University College of Medicine. He belongs to the American Society of Anesthetists, Inc., and to the American Society of Regional Anesthesia, Inc. He is a graduate of Indiana University School of Medicine in the class of 1928.

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College

VOL. 59 FEBRUARY 28, 1941 NO. 37

EDITORIALS

A change in staffs always calls for some statement on the part of the incoming editors as to policy and plans. Before doing that, however, we should like to commend the fine work done by our predecessors. Maywood Metcalf, as first woman editor in the history of the newspaper, had no precedents to go on. Starting from scratch she and her staff proved that girls are just as good at running newspapers as boys. It is always difficult to be the first in any line of endeavor and the retiring editor's fine work becomes even more praiseworthy when viewed in this light.

A college newspaper is a continuous activity; one that is carried on by group after group. If that paper is to go on improving, each new group must add something of its own to what has been entrusted to it. The present staff is therefore unusually fortunate to be able to take over from such efficient predecessors. If we are to succeed part of the credit will go to improvements initiated by them.

It is not our intention to give a detailed list of projected improvements. We believe that a college newspaper should fulfill a two-fold function: (1) convey information of college activities in a thorough and readable fashion and (2) act as a medium of student expression and exchange of opinions. The first duty will depend strictly on the staff. It will be up to us to see that proper news coverage is given to campus events and also that the news be presented in a readable and attractive form. We trust that all those engaged in campus activities will help in this work by cooperating with reporters sent after news.

The second function is dependent on three groups—the student body, the faculty, the CYNIC staff. Unless the first two groups are prepared to take an interest in campus affairs and problems, the newspaper cannot rise above its first duty. A newspaper can direct opinion and can serve as a clearing house for ideas but it cannot do so unless both faculty and students take it upon themselves to correspond with the staff, to make suggestions, to submit articles. A newspaper, after all, is not concerned with the mere external happenings, the purely physical aspects of campus life. That is just one side—more important is the expression of what the student and faculty think about common problems, what their reactions are to world events. It is their duty to cooperate with the staff, then, if the CYNIC is to be of significance as a representative of student thought and activity. Surely it is not too much to ask of persons engaged in acquiring knowledge and applying it to life that they make an endeavor to exchange ideas through a common medium—the campus newspaper.

Sitting Tight

The financial report of the University just released for publication has given rise to considerable discussion on the campus. Many fear that a raise in tuition may result and with affairs as they are there is a strong temptation for all and sundry to belittle the administration. This is neither an accusation nor a defense—it is a plea for broadmindedness. Certainly at a time when the school is experiencing a crisis students should be the last to make matters worse by injudicious and derogatory references. Also there is no need to decry an increased tuition rate until it actually is announced. The best policy it seems would be to sit tight and wait until the administration releases definite plans for dealing with the existent problem.

Brickbats And Bouquets

By ROGER B. HUNTING

A BOUQUET to Directors John Royer, Bill Pye and Bob Kenney for putting on a fine Kake Walk. The moves made toward making it more of a finished show without the long stage waits and hitches which have characterized past Kake Walks, were a big help and made the show more of a finished production than a mere succession of disconnected events.

A BOUQUET to Don Gearing, master of ceremonies, whose fine job made the efforts of the directors a success. It may be well to make the job of master of ceremonies a fixed part of the Kake Walk, for this first try at it has certainly proved worth while.

A BRICKBAT to those who in an excess of holiday spirit and enthusiasm took it upon themselves to remodel or dismantle the ice sculpture about the campus. Destruction of the work of two or three days is a pretty poor form of recreation. Nothing can be done about it now, but let's sort of avoid any recurrence next year.

A BOUQUET to the basketball team for finishing up the season in high with the trouncing of Middlebury. Also a bouquet to Red White for his election as captain of next year's court crew, and to Don Moran for his election as manager.

A BOUQUET to Eddie Guilbert for a fine job as chairman of the Masquerade. It was the best attended dance the gym has seen in years, and should be a goal for future dance chairmen. Bouquets also to Eddie's assistants who turned out at all hours of the week-end to help out on decorations and other details. Fine dance; let's have more like it.

A BRICKBAT to chronic worriers about the financial situation of the U. of V. Let's leave it up to the state and the administration, and rest assured that the portals of the old Alma Mater will not close for lack of one-half a million dollars—we hope.

A BOUQUET to the past staff of the CYNIC for a fine job for the last year, and a bouquet to the new staff, with the hope that this year's CYNIC will be even bigger and better. To Maywood Metcalf, loads of orchids for a fine job in the face of all sorts of difficulties, and to Fulvio Bardossi, best wishes for an equally fine year.

Well, that's that for this week—lots of bouquets, for once. We'll be back next week with a crash.

SENIORS AND JUNIORS—Those of you who have not yet filled out Activity Sheets, please do so immediately in the Bookstore. All must be in by the end of this week.—ED CORLISS, JEANNE WOOLLEY, Biography Editors of Ariel.

NOTICE TO PRE-MED. STUDENTS—An additional or third year of chemistry will not apply to the selection of the next entering class in medicine, that of 1945.

In keeping, however, with the pre-medical curriculum, of the College of Arts and Sciences, an acceptable third year of chemistry will be required of all applicants to the class of 1946 and further years thereafter.

TRACK SCRUBS—All sophomore men interested in scrubbing track for either an assistant managership or numerals, see either G. H. Bailey, manager, or assistant manager P. S. Czachor or W. W. Suojanen, immediately, since the allowed number of scrubs is limited.—G. H. BAILEY, Manager.

DANCE—The dance Saturday night at Southwick is for everybody! It is sponsored by the Independents, and will include square and round dances. Fun for all, so everybody out.

Junior portrait proofs are now to be had in the Book Store. Get them now, and be ready to hand them in when asked for—probably in about a week. The Ariel must go through—be ready for orders from headquarters.—R. B. HUNTING.

CYNIC SCRUBS—There will be a meeting of all CYNIC scrubs on Monday, March 3, at 1.30 p.m., in 1 N. College. Attendance will be taken.—FULVIO BARDOSSI, Editor-in-Chief.

Sally Rome and Miriam Rubin Shine in Summer Social Work

When the tumult and the shouting dies and the Old Mill closes for the summer vacation what do U. V. M's mighty seniors and no less mightier juniors find to occupy their attention? Well, take for example this year's Co-ed Major, Sally Rome '42 and prominent senior leader Miriam Rubin '41. Both these girls spent the summer days of 1940 in the slums of New York and Boston respectively, following their natural bent—social work. Sally, who intends to make this her life work, passed eight weeks in the Henry Street Settlement at New York City where she and seven other girls supervised the work and play of seventy underprivileged children from the lower East Side. She was one of ten other girls who volunteered from states all over the country, with Texas, Indiana, Washington and Maine, representatives all being chosen from applications.

The nursery school, which lasted from nine in the morning to four in the afternoon included children from the ages of four to seven. Sally was in charge of the six-year-olds. The main purpose of the school was to get the slum children off the streets, a purpose keenly appreciated by both the parents and children. In fact the session proved so enjoyable that one little Irishman was found by the girls the day after the school had closed sitting on the steps of the Settlement house patiently waiting for the doors to open.

The schedule for the day included music lessons, playing in the gym, handicrafts—boat building for the boys, scrapbooks for the girls—trips to the park and swimming. On special occasions the children were taken on outings to the Central and Bronx parks, aquarium, camps, etc., under the supervision of the college girls, who lived at the house and ate their meals with the children. Once during this period they were given a Fourth of July party which was on the whole very successful except that some of the little girls thought that the pink lemonade was tomato juice and refused to partake. The children also took part in a closing-day play in which they made their own costumes.

Two-fold Program

The credit for the success of the Henry Street Settlement can be attributed to Lillian D. Wald, a visiting nurse whose work on the East Side gave her a first-hand knowledge of conditions which prompted her to found the Henry Street Settlement. Her death occurred only about a week after Sally had left New York City. Besides the nursery school the Settlement includes a playhouse or theatre, two main buildings, two camps and a visiting nurses' association. Various cooperative activities are in existence there having to do with the milk supply of the neighborhood, a lending library, renting bicycles, a credit union, etc.

In commenting on the organization she remarked on the helpfulness of the parents who seemed to have a very clear grasp and appreciation of the advantages offered, most of them being second-generation Americans. The children also, although taking the school more or less for granted, found it interesting enough so that it accomplished its purpose of keeping them off the streets.

The work in which Mimi Rubin was engaged last summer was along the same lines but of a little different nature. She represented the University of Vermont at the New England junior month project sponsored by the Family Welfare Society of Boston whose purpose is the broadening of the college students' social outlook.

Mimi was appointed last year by the University together with one girl each from Smith, Wellesley, Radcliffe, Mt. Holyoke, Bates, University of Maine and the University of New Hampshire. Every year the Family Welfare Society offers eight college juniors the opportunity for non-professional training in social work from June 18 to July 13.

Junior month has a two-fold program—half being devoted to field work and the other half to visiting various types of community resources such as the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, Sherburne Reformatory for Women and the Norfolk Prison and Community Federation for men. The first part of the month each girl was assigned to a certain district which she visited under a program mapped out by her individual supervisor. Her job was to interview the families who had applied to the Society for aid and to offer advice on sending under-privileged children to camp, acquiring medical aid or readjusting poor economic conditions. Money is advanced only in particular cases.

Criminologist Lectures

The second half of the program included visits to the aforementioned institutions and lectures from such prominent people as Dr. Miriam Van Waters, the eminent criminologist in the country and leaders in the fields of social security, union and social service of all kinds. Mimi was particularly impressed by the Sherburne Reformatory for women where an effort is made to get away from the prison atmosphere and the women are allowed to dress in flowered cotton dresses, learn definite skills and have every opportunity to make good after their release. In fact, it is here that all the flags for Massachusetts are manufactured and the stamped ings for all the prisons in the state.

The Family Welfare Society, which is the leading organization of its type in the country, is supported by private contributions and funds from the Community Chest and offers a chance for the underprivileged people to apply for service and help. This service includes such items as vocational guidance, placement tests, free talks with consultants absolutely free of charge.

Every week a bulletin, Family Welfare, is put out by the Society illustrating

Sports Cast

By ITZ

Before starting our career of crystal gazing and sports casting we would like to bow in by complimenting our predecessor on the excellent work he did. Although we don't possess his stock of Latin phrases, and dislike burdening a limb with uncertain predictions, we shall do our best to maintain a policy of interventionalism and shall attempt to give recognition to those in the sports world who deserve it.

In Retrospect

The Cat basketeers aided the success of the Kake Walk week-end by swamping the Panthers 57-28, and concluding a successful season of nine wins as opposed to five losses. The season was somewhat disappointing in that it took the Cats six games to really hit their stride. Had they played teams in their own class first, and concluded their season against the better teams of Dartmouth, Fordham and Amherst the results might have been quite different.

It may be mere coincidence, and then again it may have a significant bearing on the case, but the Cats played a man-to-man defense in their last eight games which were all victories. Because the Memorial Auditorium court had been enlarged three feet at each end, Coach Fuzzy Evans realized that his team could not hold with a zone defense, and cautiously began to break them in to a tighter man-to-man play. Maley and Taylor switched, Taylor who guards a little closer taking the best set-shot opponent. Beauchemin, Healy and Corley fitted in well with this type of play because it calls for aggressive ball and these three are naturally aggressive ball players. Result! Nine wins and successful season. Congrats, Fuzzy!

Johnny Sabo at Yale

Former Coach John P. Sabo, who in past years has coached many Vermont football and basketball teams, was just appointed to the coaching staff at Yale University. Johnny will serve under Head Coach Nelson and will probably begin his work this spring. Best of luck to you, Johnny!

Intramural Month

The members of the physical education department have planned a busy March for all active males on this campus. The individual free throw contest which will be held all day today will start the ball rolling. It will be followed by four tournaments, handball and badminton singles and doubles. The interfraternity relays and track meet will come about the middle of March and will be closely followed by the hexathlon. There is a question as to whether the interfraternity free throw contest will be held this year owing to a lack of interest among the would-be competitors. Get busy, lads, those key chain fobs and certificates of achievement are worth working for.

Cats Piled Up Good Hoop Record

Ended Season With Eight Successive Wins

Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' 1940-41 varsity basketball team has avenged the poor record of last year's team with a relatively successful season. What started out to be another dismal season in the annals of U. V. M. basketball history concluded as a surprisingly prosperous Green and Gold campaign.

The curtain-raiser with Hartwick was heartening to the Vermont followers when Coach Evans' crew took the Indians into camp to the tune of 44 to 24. However, by the same score the Catamounts lost to Fitzgerald of Fordham, after they had bowed to Gus Broberg's Dartmouth tribe, 54 to 32. Although the latter defeat was the worst inflicted on them during the season, the U. V. M.'s bravely traveled to Hanover where they were again on the receiving end of a bitter 59 to 40 defeat. Still in the throes of the slump, Vermont lost its following game to Amherst, 51 to 40.

Then the Green and Gold started its quest of the state title when it met St. Michael's. The boys on the other side of the river handed U. V. M. its fifth straight loss, the final tabulation being 38 to 26.

But, at last the Vermonters broke their losing streak against Norwich. They subdued the Cadets, 58 to 37. From then on, the U. V. M. team never lost a game. It beat Middlebury and then had a two-week layoff because of mid-year examinations. The boys came back hotter than ever and overcame a tough Holy Cross aggregation by the score of 47 to 35. They followed by conquering Norwich and started on a two-game journey, defeating Springfield and gaining a sweet victory over Trinity, 58 to 47, thus avenging the latter's football win.

In the homestretch, the Green and Gold swamped St. Mike's, 68 to 41, and then captured the state title with a brilliant 57 to 28 victory over Middlebury. So the Vermont basketeers ended the season with nine wins and five losses, and, what's more, in possession again of the state championship.

Capt. Paul Corley was the sparkplug of the Green and Gold. In almost every game he was the high scorer, and during the first part of the season, most of the burden rested on his shoulders. Because he has the sharpest eye on the team, he was constantly being fed the ball, and it was very seldom that he missed the basket.

Much had been expected of Hank Beauchemin, but he did not regain his last year's form until mid-season. Then he made every shot count and became as feared by opponents as Captain Corley. Dick Healy, who had played a steady defensive game most of the season, came into his own when he personally took care of Norwich by amassing seventeen points. Frankie Taylor and Don Maley proved themselves two of the greatest U. V. M. guards in recent years. They were continually ruining their opponents' attacks and setting up scoring plays. Both boys will be sorely missed next season. Bob Doherty was the "find" of the season. This husky sophomore is certain to go places in the next two years, for he showed excellent potentialities by his fine play this season.

Last, but certainly not least, is Red White. Red is captain-elect, and he certainly deserves that honor. One of the scrappiest players under Coach Evans' wing, he saved Vermont's bacon many times when he beat the U. V. M. rivals to the ball rebounding off the backboard.

Coach Evans and Captain-elect White are looking forward hopefully to next season. They expect to wage a campaign that will be even better than this year's, and, although practically all of the first team is graduating in June, they have good reason for such great expectations. With White and Doherty as a nucleus, and with the addition of one of the best freshman teams in the Kittens' history, the University of Vermont basketball team is bound to go places next season.

Twenty-Eight Baseball Hopefuls Report To Coach Larry Gardner

In spite of what Old Man Weather thinks about it, spring is here. That is, according to Larry Gardner and his baseballers. From now on, every afternoon but Sundays, the smack of wood on horsehide will echo through the cage, for the nine is preparing for its southern tour and the opening game with the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia March 29.

The group of 28 hopefuls who answered Larry's call assembled in the cage Tuesday to loosen up those long unused arm muscles. Some of the pitching corps have been working out for nearly three weeks, so eager are they to limber up for the jaunt to the South.

The pitching corps includes three veterans, Swede Carlson, the slowball and control specialist who pitched for Larry's United States team in the International Baseball Federation playoffs in Havana last fall; Clarence Akley, a regular moundsman last spring; and Norm Strassburg, a hurler who saw service in relief rôles. All are righthanders. Also present is Al Shaw, the twirler who flings them either north or south paw with plenty of success. Red Dorian is another likely prospect for the mound. Up from last year's Frosh team are Roy Alberghini, Dick Clausing, Al Caldwell, Dick Iby, Larry Agan and Larry Burgess, all showing a great deal of promise.

Veteran infielders include Johnny Spasyk and Jim Corbett, out for duty behind the plate; four candidates for the initial sack, Hank Beauchemin, Bob Doherty, Don Maley, and Boots Lawrence. Other infielders are Dick Healy, Hazen Wood and Whizzer White from last year's squad, and newcomers Joe Corbett, Randy Sullivan, and Russ West.

Frankie Taylor, Sig Sysko and Bill Conrad will roam the pasture, supplemented by Dave Neil and Milt Kaufman.

Whether or not others report before the end of the week, Larry has the makings of another of his winning teams, one which faces the toughest schedule ever encountered, 29 clashes, besides the state series tilts, contests with Penn, Navy, Dartmouth, Yale, Princeton, Villanova, Maryland, George Washington, Lehigh, Wesleyan, Trinity, Williams, Amherst, Colby, Springfield, Bowdoin, Bates, and Virginia.

Women in Sports

The physical education department has announced a new Red Cross class which will be held next week with Dr. W. H. Heinenberger. Girls who wish to take this course are asked to sign up in the Y room before Saturday noon for the day which they prefer the class to be held. The most convenient day will be chosen.

Basketball Club

The Town team are victors of the A tournament, having won a coveted victory over the Robinson, Grassmount and Crowe's combined team with a score of 18-12. Dresser Hall were winners of the B tournament and these two victors will play off for top honors.

Next week Tuesday Sanders Hall will play Warner House, University Terrace, and Robinson Court at 4.15.

There will be a special meeting of the Basketball Club very soon to make new plans for organization. Be sure and watch the W. A. A. column for the date.

An official basketball rating exam will be given at Burlington High School on Saturday afternoon at 1.30 to girls who wish to be able to do official refereeing. Helen McLean '43, Charlotte Hyde '43 and Barbara McIntosh '41 will take the test and others are invited to attend.

Badminton Club

Badminton Club had a bit of novel entertainment Tuesday night when a group of boys came up to give them a little competition. About fifteen girls were there to match the following boys and Mr. S. Fogg and Mr. A. Post: D. P. Dana '42, F. J. Fowler '43, B. Benoit '43, D. Nutter '41, N. Tucker '42, M. J. Reynolds '42.

Miss Barbara Crowe and Kay Kyle '42 attended a State Badminton Association meeting at Rutland Thursday evening. They served as representatives from the University to the new state badminton organization which is being formed.

Harold Durfee to Speak

Harold Durfee '41 will give a talk on "The Church's Place in the World Crisis" at the next Pilgrim Fellowship meeting on Sunday, March 2. Bob Norton '44 will lead devotions. Everyone is cordially invited.

Collegium

Sunday evening at Collegium Dr. W. Raab of the Medical College will present his colored slides and pictures of Europe and Scandinavia. These pictures are very fine and Doctor Raab has many interesting stories to tell about them.

Doctor Raab is an Austrian refugee and his slides and talks about Europe have been very popular.

There will be a short devotional service before the meeting and refreshments will be served afterwards. Everyone is cordially invited to see and hear this most interesting program.

Independents Win Basketball Title

The intramural hockey schedule is nearing completion with three teams fighting out for supremacy on the school rink. In League A it is Kappa Sigma all the way. The Kappa Sigs have won all three of their games, winning over the A T O sextet Wednesday 2-0 and earning the right to meet the winner of the forthcoming Sigma Nu-Delta Psi battle which will decide the victor in League B.

The bowlers have progressed rapidly and matches are being run off in steady fashion. At present the A T O rollers are leading the pack, having amassed a total of 51½ to 47½ of its nearest competitor, Sigma Nu. On February 21 a number of matches took place. The A T O defeated the Independents 5-2, but the Independents came back to lick Phi Delta Theta 7-0. The Faculty also defeated the Phi Delts 7-0. S A E vanquished the T E P's 7-0 and the Delts dropped on the Owls by a 7-0 count.

Vermont Ski Birds to Enter Norwich Carnival

The Vermont skibirds fresh from the I. S. U. meet are busy again competing in the annual Norwich Winter Carnival which opened Wednesday and will continue through Saturday.

Norwich will also play host to teams representing University of New Hampshire, Williams College and Middlebury College.

An outstanding feature distinctive of European ski meets will make its first appearance at Norwich. The innovation is a combination of the regular relay with the cross-country event.

The most thrilling and dramatic event of the meet will be in the form of jumping, which will take place tomorrow, Saturday.

Merrill Barber, former member of the United States Olympic team, will be in the Cadet line-up.

Along with the ski competition, the Norwich Cadets will entertain the visiting teams at two corps dances, fraternity house parties, skijoring, a horse show, hockey game, and basketball game with the U. S. Coast Guard Academy.

Dick Healy Rates Apple Pie Ice Cream and Blondes Tops

"That's a-hitting 'em, Ace," quoth Don Maley as Dick Healy cracked out a long one right on the nose during a freshman batting practice some four years ago. The Free Press reporter who was watching the proceedings took notice and next day reported in the paper of the tremendous hitting power of "Ace" Healy among the freshman baseball prospects for that season. The nickname has stuck ever since.

But if it hadn't been for Jack Husing, 1939 captain of the Vermont football team, Dick might have been somewhere down in North Carolina this year, instead of a senior at Vermont. For it was he who influenced Dick to reverse his decision, nor has he been sorry ever since.

Dick Healy started his basketball career as a struggling junior varsity hoopster of Lindbrook High School in Long Island and did not make the varsity until his senior year. In that year Lindbrook High achieved fame by defeating the basketball champions of New Jersey at Madison Square Garden. But when Dick first came to college, he was unable to go out for basketball at first because of an outside job that took up much of his spare time. However, he did go out for the team in his sophomore year when he had more time.

Member of Three Societies

"I wish I knew," replied Dick, when asked what qualities a good basketball player should have. He excused his own claim to fame by explaining, "I'm just the guy to throw the ball to when no one else is around. I've always had a hard time getting the ball through the hoop, anyway."

Beside being a member of the varsity baseball and basketball teams for three years, Dick is also interested in the Newman Club, is a member of the Gold Key and Key and Serpent honor societies and has been elected to the Boulder Society this year.

"The best thing about the University, offhand," said Dick, as the questions kept coming up, "are the Saturday night razz dances at the gym. I really enjoy those." He finds the coming of hour exams all around the same time the most disagreeable feature of the college. Another improvement that was suggested was the building of dormitories and similar institutions around the campus, which would go a long way toward increasing school spirit by taking some of the emphasis off fraternities. The Waterman building should be a good example of this.

Dick's favorite outside activity, aside from baseball and basketball, is golf. In fact, he has been spending his summers for the last six years working at the Seawane Golf and Country Club at Lindbrook, Long Island (Adv't). Other outside activities that kill time between studying are listening to records, bull sessions, "and oh yes—dates."

Met Maley at 7.30

Among other favorites of "Ace" are apple pie and ice cream, blondes, UVM, Kappa Sigma fraternity, his two roommates, Don Maley and John Royer, and all the rest of "the boys." The first time that Don Maley and Dick met was during a 7.30 drill in their freshman year. They were immediately attracted to each other by the common tie of their both being the worst soldiers in the place. They spent the major part of their drills climbing over each other's backs in their effort to execute "About face," "Right face," and "By the right flank, march." Ever since then they have roomed with each other and have been close friends. To make matters worse, the two are always being mistaken for one another. Says Healy, "P. S.—I'm the guy who made Maley's hair turn gray."

Concerning athletics at U. V. M., "Ace" stated: "The coaching is of a very high quality here. The coaches always seem to bring out the best in a man. I also think the Southern spring baseball trip is the best treat that a fellow could ever get in college." He also added that Coaches "Fuzzy" Evans and Larry Gardner are two "swell eggs"—and he doesn't mean rotten, either.

Dick's ambitions and plans for the future are both conservative and liberal. He hopes to get a job after he gets out of college that will allow him to marry and raise a large family with a decent amount of security. His draft number is high, so that he hopes he won't be called for another two or three years. However, his R. O. T. C. training ought to prove a great help to him when he is called into the army.

Social Work

various ways in which the organization has been of service. For example, one bulletin described a family with two sisters of opposite temperaments and their difficulties of adjustment. Under the guidance of the Family Welfare Society they were able to understand each other and themselves. Or as the mother said: "When I look back now I think that they (the Society) really have done a lot to keep our home together, I really do."

Enlivening Experience

The eight girls who attended the junior month project were greatly benefited by their study. They lived in the Elizabeth Peabody Settlement House and during the week-ends relaxed at the homes of their sponsors. One of their activities during this month was a radio program in which Mimi and four other girls took part explaining the purpose and organization of Junior Month. On the whole, Mimi said: "Junior Month is the most enlightening experience I have ever had because it has made me aware of so many community resources which I never knew existed, and it gave me a chance to see at first hand the workings of many wonderful organizations. I am sure that I shall be much better prepared to do my chosen work after college, now that I have had this splendid opportunity."

Vermont Co-eds Form Rifle Team

Fourteen University of Vermont girls who have joined a newly formed rifle club for women are making fast progress in the sport, according to their instructor, Mr. Watts Bagley. The girls report for practice once a week on the rifle range on the first floor of the Bowlaway Alleys in Burlington. Groups meet on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays. Miss Marion Way of Burlington has charge of the Tuesday section and Hester Carver of Weston, senior home economics student at the University, of the Monday and Thursday sections. The Women's Physical Education department, which sponsors the rifle club, announces that there is still room for a few more girls to join.

That University of Vermont girls should show aptitude at rifle shooting is no new thing. A few years ago, girls' rifle teams here hung up for themselves some well-nigh perfect records, repeatedly leading the field or standing high in national ratings among women's teams from colleges throughout the country. It is expected that the new women's rifle club will later form a team, but as yet the girls are just practicing.

The girls who have been attending the rifle club are Alma S. LeVens, New York, N. Y.; Natalie B. Beal, Burlington; Louise F. Rice, Arlington; Kathleen Benson, Springfield, Mass.; Frances D. Steere, Edgewood, R. I.; Dawn E. Nichols, Malletts Bay; Dorothy H. Murphy, Burlington; Charlotte L. Scott, Burlington; Peggy-Dean Abbott, Burlington; Evelyn D. Adams, Stowe; Shirley A. Buckingham, White Plains, N. Y.; Nancy M. Fawcett, Plainfield, N. J.; Mary F. Hoag, Burlington; and Margaret E. Von Paulsen, Miami, Fla.

Lieutenant Rogers To Visit Vermont Campus in March

Will Enlist Men For Commission in Marine Corps Reserves

Lieut. Leyton M. Rogers, U. S. Marine Corps liaison officer for the University of Vermont, will make three visits to U. V. M., starting March 7, to interest and enlist young men for commission in the Marine Corps Reserve through the Candidate's Class.

Lieutenant Rogers will make his first visit in connection with his duties as liaison officer for the University of Vermont, March 7, to contact University authorities, to make preliminary arrangements, and to distribute literature. The second trip, on a date to be decided later, will be given over to preliminary physical examinations, interviewing applicants, and filling out necessary forms. The third visit will be used to give final physical examinations and to enlist applicants in the Marine Corps Reserve.

The Candidates' Class offers an opportunity to this year's seniors to take three months' training after graduation and qualify for a commission in the Marine Corps Reserve at the end of the training period. Applicants must first pass a physical examination and then are enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve and assigned to the Candidates' Class. The training period begins early in July at the Marine Corps Base at Quantico, Va., and continues for three months. Upon successful completion of this course the Candidates are commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Marine Corps Reserve and are assigned to active duty. Necessary transportation performed by accepted men is paid by the government.

Women Will Vote At Mass Meeting

Elections to Honor Societies To Be Made

The time has come again when all University women are allowed the privilege of naming for next year's honorary societies, the girls whom they believe to have exemplified in their college career the highest ideals, and the greatest development. At mass meeting on Wednesday evening at Southwick, each girl is given a list of the members in her class, and from this list, the juniors are allowed to check ten names for Mortar Board membership, the sophomores fifteen names for Staff and Sandal, and the freshmen twenty names for Sophomore Aide membership. The new point system will be used in this election which will be explained by Dorothy Emerson '41.

The high democratic standard of voting should be preserved. It can only be a success if each girl casts her ballot, impartially, choosing not those girls who are her best friends, or members of her sorority, but those who, through their scholarship, personality, campus activities, and achievements, have not only greatly aided the college, but have firmly developed their character as well, and truly merit these honors.

Vermont Students Attend Conference

Christianity in 1941 Topic of Discussion

Ten students from the University of Vermont, along with students from Middlebury, Smith, Yale and other Connecticut Valley Colleges, attended a conference on: "What Christianity Means in Thought and Action in 1941." The movement is part of the Mid-winter Conference of the Connecticut Valley although two Vermont schools, Middlebury and the University of Vermont attended. It was suggested that since Vermont and Middlebury have so much in common and are unable to attend all the Connecticut conferences that they cooperate more with each other in solving these problems.

Much was gained from the speakers and discussion which followed their talks. The following people spoke: Dr. T. Z. Koo who gave an inspiring keynote address; Rev. Luther Tucker, Secretary of the World Student Christian Movement; Mr. William Kitchener, who was here two weeks ago; Miss Edith Larrigo, Secretary of the New England Student Christian Movement, who has been here several times to confer with the Y. W. C. A.; and Dr. Dorothy Fosdick.

The program was as follows: Friday afternoon, the delegates registered; that evening heard a talk on, "Social and Religious Forces in the World Scene Today." Later there was a talk on, "The Values, Universal and Basic of Christian Faith." Saturday there were four addresses by students on, "What Christianity Means to Them." This was followed by discussion groups on this subject. Saturday afternoon was devoted to a discussion on the

R. O. T. C. Band Guest at Dinner For Col. Spalding

Kake Walk Cake Shared; Band Acclaimed One of Best in U. V. M. History

Last Thursday evening the R. O. T. C. Band were the guests of the University at a most delicious steak banquet at the Black Cat Restaurant. Guest of honor was Colonel Spalding; Joe Lechnyr, bandmaster, was toastmaster extraordinary.

The occasion was the cutting, and incidentally the eating, of the Kake Walk cake.

Following the banquet Mr. Lechnyr spoke briefly lauding the band's improvement since last September. He then introduced Colonel Spalding who related that his only musical accomplishment was a Filipino tom-tom, and then exhorted the boys to do a good job this spring at the Federal Inspection. He closed by praising the excellent performances of the band this year. Lt. Carl Schofield, officer of the band, pointed out briefly the importance of the band to the individual and to the University.

Issy Goodman '41, assistant director of the band, told of his fine experiences in being with the band four years. Frank Proctor '41, staff sergeant, emphasized the importance of sophomores continuing with the band as upperclassmen in order to improve the quality and the size of the band. John Landry, drum major, expressed his thanks to the band for their cooperation and asked that they do their best at Federal Inspection.

In closing Mr. Lechnyr offered a toast "to the memory of a great man, Guy Bailey," followed by the singing of one verse of "Champlain."

Mr. Lechnyr reports that this year's band is one of the largest and finest in the history of the University. It boasts a total personnel of forty-three, which number is divided as follows:

Cornets and Trumpets: I. Goodman, L. Burningham, R. Bennett, N. Carpenter, W. F. Balton, R. S. Stockwell, N. B. Comings, Jr., S. R. Siegra.

Second Semester Debates Announced

Schedule Provides for Participation by Many

Debating during the second semester at the University of Vermont is well under way. The schedule includes engagements for four different types of teams. There is work outlined for freshman teams, in debates with freshman teams from other colleges, and with high school teams. Members of the freshman class at the University are not eligible for intercollegiate varsity debates. There are debates arranged between the women's team of the University of Vermont and women's teams from other colleges; also debates have been arranged especially for men's teams and there has been a growing tendency during the last year or two, for intercollegiate debates in which teams composed of both men and women participate. The combined varsity and freshman squads include about thirty students. The schedule during the second semester calls for between twenty and thirty debates, and will provide opportunity for a good percentage of those on the squads to participate in debating.

The men's varsity team has been successful in maintaining the high standard in debating that teams in the past have set. This is the fourth consecutive year that the Vermont debating team has won in the annual Edwin Winship Lawrence Prize Debate, between the University of Vermont and Middlebury College. Other victories include wins from Harvard, the University of Richmond, Richmond, Va., American International College, Springfield, Mass. ,and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y.

Music Department Prepares Oratorio

Under the direction of Prof. H. G. Bennett, the Music Department will present the oratorio by Handel, "Judas Maccabaeus" on March 23 as a Vesper service in the Ira Allen Chapel. A chorus of eighty-five voices, including members of the Glee Club, other students, faculty, and townspeople as well as the University choir will be accompanied by the Chapel orchestra of twenty pieces with Michael Anselmo, violin instructor, as concert master.

The story deals with the herosism of Judas Maccabaeus who took over after his father's death and won freedom and liberty for his people from the oppression of the Syrians. The music is very martial and heroic, and contains several rather difficult passages. Included in the performance will be the famous arias, "Arm, Arm Ye Brave," and "Sound and Alarm," the well-known chorus "See, the Conquering Hero Comes," although not originally a part of the composition, and the familiar "Hallelujah, Amen."

Independents' Dance

The Independents' dance, Saturday night, March 1, was well attended by dancing couples who swung to the syncopated music of the victrola. Members of the committee took charge of the music during the evening.

During intermission refreshments of ice cream brownies were served. Prof. and Mrs. Rowell and Prof. and Mrs. Leeder chaperoned. Hilda L. Paquette '42 was in charge.

About sixty attended. Among the speakers were Betty Cole, class of 1941, president of the sorority; Harriet Woods, class of 1942; Peggy Wishart, class of 1943; Rosamund Hughes, class of 1944; Madeline Greaves, class of 1941; Barbara Gallagher, class of 1942; and Miss Marjorie Perrin, alumnae adviser.

No Bonfires Wanted

With the world at war and new doctrines in the air, this country is becoming more and more conscious of its ideals and more and more wary of anything which promises to undermine them. Most natural and most human. The educational system, of course, is getting its share of close scrutiny. Fair enough. If you feel that new doctrines are menacing your system, one of the first places to examine is the school where future citizens are being trained for your form of life. But of late we have noticed that the forces of reaction are flocking to the banner and posing as defenders of democracy against "subversive influences."

Just recently the National Association of Manufacturers hired Ralph Robey, teacher of banking at Columbia and financial reporter, to examine school textbooks in the social sciences. Very generously the New York Times and other newspapers aired his startling findings on their front pages. The textbooks now being used states Mr. Robey are "derogatory of the American form of government and critical of free business enterprise." Worse than that, Mr. Robey finds the following dangerous doctrines being taught to young Americans: There are powerful corporations in America; there are trusts and monopolies in America; there are sharp differences in living standards in America; vast amounts of money are spent in advertising to break down consumer resistance; the press has enormous power and in general speaks for a minority; politics is not always clean; the N. A. M. has been found guilty of subsidizing propaganda against social legislation.

As a result of Mr. Robey's work the N. A. M. is now placing in the hands of its members and school authorities a book containing excerpts from 600 textbooks, labeled "Dangerous." The aim of the N. A. M. is very obvious—to use the defense emergency as a tool for breaking the way into the American educational system. The campaign against the Rugg textbooks illustrated the method—by widespread newspaper publicity books are denounced without a fair hearing, local reactionaries become self-appointed committees and put pressure on any school board that dares to buy those textbooks. In this way any liberal textbook which dares to suggest that we in this country are not blessed with a perfect system but rather must work to achieve it, will be condemned. Such action usually leads to bonfires.

Even if we grant that our textbooks are in need of examination, we see no excuse for the favor shown the N. A. M.'s work in this field by many newspapers and civic groups. There is sufficient evidence to prove that the patriotic N. A. M. has fought social legislation and has tried to inject its own propaganda into textbooks. Certainly Mr. Robey has never rated as an educational authority nor even a social scientist. Had he bothered to read the reports of such government agencies as the Pujo commiteee and the TNEC he would have found facts far more startling than those presented by any textbook writer. Mr. Robey seems to confuse big business and democracy.

If we must have our textbooks examined let us have it done by a competent group of educators with authoritative standing in the social sciences. Unless we do that we will be surrendering our educational freedom to unprincipled and self-interested groups.

Democracy is an unfinished business because democracy is progress. Therefore, let us be jealous of our educational freedom and let us recognize its true enemies. Educational freedom is a keystone. Yank it out and we will all be "heiling" among the ruins with arm outstretched in a mechanical salute.

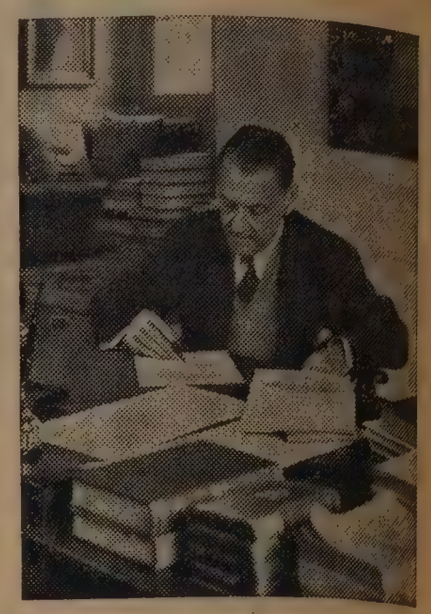
Youth In England



by W. Somerset Maugham

(Editor's Note.—This is the first of three articles by the famous author of "Of Human Bondage." We feel that it is of unusual interest as it deals with a group whose problems are very pertinent for college studens in any country.)

I write about them tentatively. It is very difficult for the old, however friendly disposed they may be, however sympathetic, to understand the young. The years that separate them are a wall which the old can only peep over, and the information they glean is haphazard and fragmentary. Parents have often told me that they know everything that is to be known about their children and that their intimacy is such that their children keep no secrets from them. I, knowing their children and having sometimes received their confidences, listen with politeness, but incredulity. The fact is that the world of the young is a different place from the world of the old, or even the mature; it has its different problems which must be solved according to their conditions. It is an error to suppose that the old know better than the young; they know differently; a lawyer is no wiser than a farmer, he is expert in one sort of knowledge just as the farmer is expert in another. So a course of conduct may be very sensible for a boy of twenty which would be very foolish for a man of fifty. The old should show tolerance towards the young, but so should the young towards the old.

I have started with these trite remarks to emphasize the fact that the following observations claim no more authority than is due to a looker-on from a discreet distance. I have a number of young relations and I have been on as intimate terms with them, and with their friends, as I suppose it is possible for a person of one generation to be with those of another; and because I was connected with a club for working boys in one of the poorest districts in London and continued my intercourse with them after they had smashed it up in a moment of temper, I have had the opportunity of knowing very well a good many young working men; but I know very little of the youth of the white collar class. Owing to my family connections it is the undergraduates of the University of Cambridge that I have known best, but I do not think the undergraduates of other universities are very different. There is at Cambridge a large proportion of men who have come to the university from secondary schools, what you call the public schools, whereas at Oxford the majority have been educated at what we call the public schools and you private schools. In consequence there is, I think, at Cambridge a more democratic feeling and a greater inclination to be interested in advanced ideas.

During the years that immediately preceded the war there was in the universities a good deal of communist feeling, but it was a parlor communism; these young men were at college by favor of the capitalistic system and however vehement in debate they were in their attacks on privilege few of them showed any inclination to put their theories into practice and surrender the advantages they enjoyed. When they had taken their degrees and entered upon the serious job of earning a living the majority changed their minds and received a reference to their old theories with some confusion.

Sports Cast

By ITZ

Coach Ev Bailey and his team have worked hard this year to put Vermont on the ski map, and although their season's record of wins and places is not impressive, they have entered into competition with the best teams in the East and put Vermont's name on the roster of every skiing college in the East. They participated in the Dartmouth and Norwich Carnivals and, of course, the I. S. U. meet.

In the Norwich Carnival, Sunday, the team placed fourth behind Norwich, New Hampshire, and Middlebury and in front of Williams. Paterson and Sutton took fourth and eighth places respectively in the slalom, and Dave Collins placed eleventh in jumping and seventh in jumping and langlauf combined. The team's score was 508.3 points, 65.7 points behind Norwich, the winning team.

Things to Come

With basketball now definitely a closed book, the spotlight shifts, and attention is focused on the most famous of American sports—baseball. Students of Vermont should be especially anxious for the coming of this season because prophecy and prediction here should give a U. V. M. student a pleasant feeling. It should be pleasant also for those who like baseball and enjoy seeing good games because of the excellent schedule of home games prepared for them. Besides the usual home and home series with state rivals, the Cats will meet Williams, Princeton, Amherst, Colby, Springfield, Dartmouth, and the University of Virginia at Centennial Field this season; they will play a total of 29 games.

The Team

The whole Vermont team of last year with a few notable exceptions (Pesarik, Bellardinelli, Boucher) is back in uniform this year, and they will be reinforced by members of last year's frosh nine. The outfield will undoubtedly be composed of Taylor, Sysko and Conrad, a .300 outfield. There is the possibility however, that Lawrence will alternate with Conrad in right field. Coach Larry Gardner has four candidates for the initial sack, but the job will probably go to Hank Beauchemin who held that position two years ago and batted in the clean up slot. Johnny Spasyk and Ace Healy will probably make up the second-short combination, while the hot corner assignment may go to Hal Wood.

The battery is Larry's main headache. Through graduation last June he lost all but one hurler and one catcher, Bob Carlson and Jim Corbett. Bob was responsible for several pitching masterpieces last year, and distinguished himself this summer as a member of the American Amateur Baseball Team. Corbett alternated with Boucher last year, and although a good man behind the bat, he is weak at the plate. Strassburg, Akley, Dorion and Zellinger are working out regularly in the cage, and from these men or possibly some unknown prospects Coach Larry Gardner will build his mound staff. He may get his second catcher from last year's frosh team or he may switch Johnny Spasyk behind the bat. This will necessitate further changes and will probably work out with Beauchemin and Healy playing the second-short-combination and either Don Maley or Bob Dougherty filling in the hole at first. Coach Gardner has several good utility men whom he can use in case of injuries or slumps or just for good, plain competition with the tentative line-up, for regular berths.

Milt Hutchinson Leads in Ski Meet

In the Underhill Winter Sports Club ski meet, Milt Hutchinson of Barre proved his supremacy over the skiers of the state by taking both the slalom and downhill events to lead the Mount Mansfield Ski Club of Barre in a successful defense of its state club title, in the third annual meet held under the auspices of the Underhill Winter Sports Club. Dave Collins, University of Vermont captain, made the run in 1:19.4 thus finishing second behind Hutchinson of Barre, and Beck of Norwich.

Jumping honors went to Bob Stewart of Middlebury College. Vermont nosed out Middlebury College, Team A, for the slalom title.

Museum Has Exhibit of Historical Paintings

On Thursday, February 27, an exhibit of Vermont historical paintings was opened in the Fleming Museum Art Gallery. The forty-one colored reproductions of famous paintings are being shown at an especially appropriate time, since the Vermont Sesquicentennial celebrations are due to make their appearance all over the state on Town Meeting Day, March 4. The exhibit will be open till April 10.

The pictures include prints of many famous Vermont men, and men such as Daniel Webster and Lafayette during their travels in Vermont. The paintings also recall that Vermont was the first state to adopt universal manhood suffrage (in 1777) and that Vermont's first newspaper, printed in 1781, was printed on the first press brought to America. The stern "beech seal" of early Vermonters also has its part in the exhibit as do many other stories from the state's history.

Women in Sports

There will be an important meeting of the W. A. A. Council on Tuesday evening at 7.15 at Southwick. All members are urged to attend.

Badminton

Miss Barbara Crowe of the Physical Education Department and Kay Kyle '43 represented the Women's Badminton Club at the Vermont Badminton Association's first meeting held at Rutland Thursday evening. Representatives from Springfield, Rutland, Middlebury College, Burlington Community Club, and University of Vermont were present to draw up a constitution and apply for membership to the New England Badminton Federation. Mr. Edward Keenan of Burlington was elected president, Mr. Rifford of Springfield, vice-president, and Miss Barbara Crowe, secretary-treasurer.

There will be an open Badminton Tournament, sponsored by the Burlington Community Club on March 21 and March 28. This will take the form of the first state tournament.

The Badminton Club has announced that men will be their guests again a week from tonight, so all girls out for a good practice this week!

Basketball

On Tuesday afternoon at 4.15, the Basketball Club will hold an important meeting to discuss new plans for the club. Catherine Peterson '42 will be in charge of the meeting, and all members are requested to bring some novel ideas with them.

Last Thursday afternoon the Town team defeated Dresser Hall team by a very high score to become the champion of the two winning leagues of the tournament. The two leagues of losers will probably play off a match soon.

Charlotte Hyde '42, Helen McLean '43, and Barbara McIntosh '41 received intramural basketball rating last Saturday afternoon, taking their exams at Burlington High School. This gives them the right to referee games within their own school. The national ratings, which are very hard for anyone to obtain while still in college must be retaken every two years, to permit one to referee anywhere in the United States.

Bowling

The bowling tournament, up to date, finds Teams I, II and III with six points each ~~and~~ leading Team IV by four points and Team V by five.

This Thursday night four girls from the Bowling Club are challenging the Women's Administration team.

The new Red Cross class under Dr. W. H. Heininger will be given on Tuesday afternoon at Southwick at 4.15.

Mme Bradish Presents Students in Recital

On Friday evening Mme Elizabeth Bradish was hostess to her vocal students in a private recital at the Music Building. The recital took on the form of a Musical Masquerade, each student coming dressed appropriately for his song.

The Music Building took on a festive air as the masked singers arrived. An Indian brave and his squaw turned out to be Paul Poulin '41 and Betty Cole '41; a fish monger became Effie Winn, special student; a hermaphroditic half-man, half-girl was no less than Ruth Hopkins '41. Robert McKee '41 was a delightful minstrel of the Dark Ages. Flower girls, drunken friars, gypsies, Spanish señors and señoritas, and excellent personifications of a star, the night, and a thunderstorm added to the collection.

Following the recital Mme Bradish served delicious refreshments. The evening closed with a group singing.

The purpose of the recital was to help the students to become used to singing to an audience and at the same time demonstrate their abilities.

Larry Gardner Puts Baseball Charges Thru Early Drill

First Fielding Practice Slated for Next Week; Prospects Good

To date there is little to report on the program of the U. V. M. varsity baseball team. Since the opening day of practice, Coach Larry Gardner has had his charges get the winter kinks out of their muscles by throwing baseballs leisurely, jogging around the cage, and doing calisthenics.

Since there has been so little practice, Coach Gardner knows little about the ability of those who played freshman ball last year and of those who were ineligible to participate in varsity baseball last year. Next week, Coach Gardner will hold the first fielding practice of the year and thus learn whether this latest crop of varsity hopefuls can really handle the horsehide under pressure. In two weeks, the coach plans to hold the first batting practice, and it may result in the promotion to first-stringer of several sophomores when the coach sees the way some of last year's hard-hitting yearlings can "smack the ole apple."

If the 1940 varsity men are still as agile as they were last season, and if some of the sophomores prove themselves worthy of being on the varsity (and many of them surely will), Vermont followers may rest assured that Coach Larry Gardner will mold another formidable nine, and it is not a remote possibility that the 1941 team will bowl over all the opponents on its schedule.

Handball Victors Enter Second Round

The Intramural Handball Tournament is progressing very nicely, having passed through Round 1 and is now gradually developing through stage 2 into stage 3. As yet only three men have passed into Round 3 by virtue of their previous victories: In the second round L. Brum eked out a win over S. Baum by the score of 22-20, 21-18. J. C. Ditore whitewashed Kimball 21-8, 21-4. The third man who has fought his way into the third round is B. Rynowecer, tripping Wysolmerski to the tune of 21-10, 21-15.

The competition assignments are as follows:

Round 2: Cain, Cycleman; Davis, Brown; Brum, Baum; Rynowecer, Wysolmerski; Ditore, Kimball; Bielli, Basch; Fieber, Foti; Warsaw, Gold.

Round 3: Brum; Rynowecer; Ditore.

In order to stimulate more enthusiasm, Roy Wietz has set the deadlines for Round 1 and 2 for March 1; Round 3 for March; 6; Round 4 for March 8; and Round 5 for March 12.

Professor Perkins Discusses 'Eugenics'

John Dewey Club Hears Member of Zoology Dept.

"Eugenics" was the topic discussed at the meeting of the John Dewey Club at Southwick last Thursday evening. Pres. Harold Durfee '41 introduced the speaker, Prof. H. F. Perkins of the Zoology Department, who explained the philosophical background of eugenics. He gave Galton's definition of the science of eugenics as "the study of all the agencies under social control that may improve or impair the unborn." Professor Perkins stated his own opinion that, although Galton had referred to the subject as a science, it is not old enough nor advanced enough to be called a science. He contracted eugenics with euthenics, saying that while eugenics is the improvement of man in the future, euthenics is the improvement of man in the present.

Attendance at this meeting was small, due to the fact that the program had been scheduled for a week earlier and postponed. Refreshments were served to those present.

Plans for the next meeting are indefinite, but it is hoped that Prof. W. H. Heicher of the Political Science Department will be the guest speaker.

Cynic to Hold Radio Round Table Discussion

"Government by the People and Threats to It" will be the subject of a round-table discussion by Professors Heicher and Millikan and several advanced political science students to be broadcast Wednesday night, March 5, at 8.30 during the regular CYNIC radio program. This topic will be well in keeping with the public interest in our democratic way of life which will have received another practical test in the New England Town Meetings of Tuesday, March 4, to be held all through Vermont as well as other states.

M. J. Levin '41, radio editor of the CYNIC, will direct and announce the program as usual. There will also be a campus and sports newscast.

Fleming Museum To Show 'Heritage'

"Heritage," vivid French film, is to be shown at Fleming Museum on March 13. Produced in Southern Spain by Marcel Gras, French producer, "Heritage" is in the French language with English captions. The story is adapted from the classic Spanish drama "Maria del Carmen," with music by Jean Poueigh and Allen Small.

Just before the Fascist uprising in 1936, a French film company, headed by Marcel Gras, producer, writer, and director, went to Murcia in Spain to make a movie about the Spanish way of life. That record has now been brought to this country. The film was completed just before the trouble began in Barcelona, and much difficulty was experienced in getting the "negative" out of unfriendly Spain. In fact, some sound tract was irretrievably lost in transit. The film finally reached New York last fall and has been running continuously at the Belmont Theatre since its premiere on November 4.

The Motion Picture Council of Burlington is sponsoring this outstanding attraction on Thursday evening, March 13, at the Fleming Museum. Tickets may be purchased from members of the French Club, and at the University Store. There will be two shows, at 7.30 and 9.15.

value of summer work of various types including the evergrowing work camps. Vermont and Middlebury also held a short conference before supper on Saturday. Saturday evening there was a panel of speakers led by Reverend Tucker which discussed Christianity in action in 1941. On Sunday morning there was a religious service in the form of a Quaker Meeting, before breakfast. There were discussion groups after breakfast Sunday morning as well as a religious service.

The delegates from Vermont were: Charlotte Perkins, Secretary of Vermont Y. W. C. A.; Elizabeth Deming '43; Elizabeth T. Cooper '42; Barbara Butterfield '42; Patricia Pike '43; Cathryn Grier '43. The men delegates were: K. W. Johnson '41; H. C. Tatro '43; F. H. Livak '41; C. E. Corliss '42; R. L. Clarke '42; H. A. Durfee '41; and Mr. Powers.

The delegates derived much value from the meeting, and they will try to run a short column in the CYNIC, with the opinions of each delegate. This column will be called simply "Northfield" and will appear in about two weeks.

The Deans of the three academic colleges agreed to make out their lists by averaging the numerical grades reported by the Registrar and making four groups. The first group (Summa Cum Laude) includes all with an average of 95 percent or better; the second group (Magna Cum Laude), those with an average of 92.5 percent or better but not 95 percent; the third group (Cum Laude), those with an average of 89 percent or better but not 92.5 percent; the fourth group (B Average), those with an average of 85 percent or better but not 89 percent.

Four Initiated to Kappa Phi Kappa

Alpha Gamma Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, national education fraternity, initiated four new members, Wednesday evening, at a meeting held in the Education Office. They were: E. A. Guilbert '41, R. D. Thayer '42, C. M. Abbott '42 and M. A. Hawes '42.

After the initiation ceremonies, a short business meeting was held. Plans were discussed for the annual banquet which is to be held this year some time in late spring.

A. F. Amee '43 was chosen chairman of a committee to plan for the next meeting, which is to be held Wednesday evening, March 19. Assisting him will be R. D. Thayer '42 and C. M. Abbott '42.

The meeting closed after an informal social hour during which refreshments of ice cream bars and coca-cola were provided by A. F. Amee '43 and O. M. Brawn '42.

Jack Collins' Band to Play at Pan-Hell. War Relief Dance

The Pan-Hellenic dance featuring the music of Jack Collins with proceeds going to war relief will be held tomorrow night from nine to twelve in the men's gym. Flags, bunting and streamers will make up a gay color scheme of red, white and blue to fit the patriotic nature of the dance. Posters will be made as murals for the walls by each sorority.

This is the first time this year that Jack Collins, his piano and orchestra have appeared at a regular college dance. Featured with the band will be Sandra, sweet singer of songs and Whispering Lou Ouimette. Outstanding instrumentalists will be Bernie Dailey, formerly with Paul Whiteman, Rudy Vallee and Vincent Lopez. Bob Moody, formerly with the Kearney-Kallander Orchestra, and Cliff Agnew, ex-co-leader of the New Vermonters' Band, which played for the majority of the University dances and the last three dances are also playing. Don Parker, returning from a recent Boston engagement, is the get-off tenor man. John Ingham will be slapping the bass with Paul Piche on the drums. Jack's piano, trumpet and accordion will also be prominent. The latest hit parade songs and many other novelties will be heard, so you can easily see that a treat is in store for all.

Joené Agard '42, Delta Delta Delta, is in general charge of the affair. Miriam Fiske '42, Alpha Chi Omega, is chairman of decorations. Head of the food committee is Mildred Creamer '41, Delta Delta Delta and Kay LeBaron '41, Kappa Alpha Theta, is in charge of finances. The chaperones are going to be Professor and Mrs. Bickford, and Professor and Mrs. Pond.

State and University Have Closely Related Histories

Review of Records Shows University Has Given Many Leaders to the State

The celebration of Sesquicentennial Week throughout the state this week highlights the University's own birthday, which, however, will not be observed until next year. The days set for the celebration are October 3, 4, and 5. According to Prof. Julian Ira Lindsay of the English Department, plans are already well under way with pageants, a birthday ball, speeches, the dedication of the Waterman Building, and a concert by the Boston Symphony, directed by Sergei Koussevitzky on the program.

The history of the institution closely parallels that of the state, for in November 1791, soon after Vermont's admittance to the Union, the Legislature passed an act "establishing the University at Burlington upon a liberal catholic (meaning universal), and judicious foundation." Thus was founded the twenty-fifth college in order of foundation in the United States. Harvard, Yale, Brown, and Dartmouth—only these four out of all the colleges in New England are older.

Ira Allen, whose leadership was a governing factor in the early history of the state, figures also as one of the leaders in the movement to establish a state university.

College Used by Army

In their early days both the state and the university passed through and survived events just as alarming as those we now experience. This was the era of Napoleon, and the English were threatened with invasion. Burlington was bombarded by a British flotilla which was repulsed by the guns mounted in what is now Battery Park. The college was taken over by United States troops, and all college functions were suspended for a year. The commencement exercises were omitted in 1815.

The University has played an important part in the history of the state through its graduates which have made important contributions to the outside, and through the members of its faculty who have contributed to educational thinking. Among these were President James Marsh who made America conscious of Coleridge's educational philosophy, an event of widespread effect, and Henry Jarvis Raymond, of the class of 1840, founder of the New York Times and originator of Harper's Magazine, John Dewey, distinguished American philosopher, Walter Van Tilburg Clarke, author of "The Ox-Bow Incident," a popular novel of 1941, S. Burton Heath, winner of the Pulitzer Prize for journalism, and Frances Frost, poet and novelist. These are only a few of the

Dana Whitman Speaks At Aggie Club Meeting

The annual meeting of the Aggie Club was held Tuesday evening, March 4. The co-chairmen, R. Evans '41, and R. Kopp '41, mentioned the great progress on Dean Hills' Sugar Party, which wil lbe held March 21.

A very interesting discussion was given by Mr. Dana Whitman of the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station about his trips to Yellowstone National Park. Very colorful movies of the park were also shown, which greatly added to the interest of the meeting.

Here is the original "Old Mill," built in 1801. It burned in 1824. Carefully constructed fences kept out wandering cows. See page 3 for cut of the second "Old Mill."

Nominees for Student Union Council Named

"Is the smoking rule satisfactory? Are the houses and dormitories keeping the regulations?" These were the questions raised by Dean Simpson at the mass meeting held Wednesday evening, at Southwick. Miss Simpson is going to ask each house director to report to her personally on how the rules are being observed. Each girl was asked to do nothing that would cast reproach on U. V. M. as the University needs the support of a good name in its present financial state. Dean Simpson also suggested that the saving of electricity and water and keeping the grounds of the University clean would help lower some expenses.

Information about the Vermont Church Council and blanks to fill out may be secured in the Dean's office.

This semester the number of failures in proportion to the number of students is considerably lower than before, according to Miss Simpson. Freshman girls with a 75 average or better get one more 11.15 night after spring vacation.

The meeting was opened by Laura Hawley '41, president of Student Union, who introduced Miss Simpson.

Burlington Youth To Stage Rally

Dies Investigator Principal Speaker

The Burlington City Hall, Sunday night, March 9, will be the scene of a huge rally which is being sponsored by the leading youth groups of this city. The General Committee, which is in direct charge of the affair, have stated that the theme of this rally is "rededication by the youth to the ideals of democracy and to reemphasize their faith in democratic ideals."

The committee declares it was extremely fortunate in that they were able to secure John C. Metcalfe, ace investigator of the Dies Committee on un-American Activities, as its principal speaker. Mr. Metcalfe has been in the public light many times, and he can be recalled as the personage who joined the Nazi German-American Bund for six months and was able to secure much evidence beneficial to the Dies Committee. Mr. Metcalfe recived also much fame as "undercover" man for the Chicago Daily Times.

The General Committee stated that they have secured Prof. Paul Evans who will act as chairman of this whole democracy rally and who will introduce to the audience many state and local personalities,

The First Hundred and Fifty Years

Despite campaign jokes to the contrary, Vermont is a member of the Union and this is the week when it celebrates 150 years of successful statehood. The University of Vermont also comes in for its share of attention, though its Sesquicentennial will not be celebrated till next fall. The history of a state is the development of its institutions and the changing ideas of its people. As the leading University in the State, Vermont has grown with the State and has been a factor in its history. This week's observances should emphasize more than ever the duty of the school to provide intellectual training and produce capable leaders.

Vermont has always been a conservative state. People have been known to sneer at this characteristic. But today as we look back on those one hundred and fifty years we see that Vermont has fulfilled its rôle in the history of the nation efficiently and at the same time shown a sturdy spirit of independence. Conservatism is everyone's privilege and used correctly is a healthy trait.

We only hope that in the future this conservatism will not turn to reaction. Right now a law is being pushed through the Legislature (by a Legionnaire) which would deprive minority parties of their rights. The Bristol incident of last summer and Mayor Burns' recent witch hunt are ugly reminders of what forms reaction can take. We hope that all Vermonters will recognize the danger of such attempts to weaken the ideal of freedom they have always respected. We hope Vermonters will not confuse conservatism with infringements on liberty. On their 150th birthdays may the State and the University recognize their duty to foster tolerance and freedom of thought.

Youth and Democracy

Several local youth groups are presenting a Youth and Democracy Rally this Sunday evening at the City Hall Auditorium. The aim and purpose of this rally is "the rededication of American youth to the principles and precepts of Americanism and democracy." John C. Metcalfe, a former Dies Committee investigator, is to be the main speaker, and Prof. Paul D. Evans of the U. V. M. History Department will preside.

College students are trained to lead the nation in future years; it is no less imperative that they take the leadership in youth activity today. The students of the University of Vermont should, therefore, interest themselves in all youth activity of a progressive, constructive nature, whether it be University sponsored or not: This Youth and Democracy Rally calls for the interest and attendance of all serious-minded U. V. M. students. A large group of college students in attendance will benefit the movement and the students, and will serve to unite the youth of Burlington in a forward-looking program of American democratic ideals

Allen House Is Squirrel Refuge

Did you know that Allen House is the pet campus haven for squirrels? At any time of the day, one can't fail to see at least two or three squirrels running around the back porch or dashing across the lawn. And they are quite tame, too, especially of course with Mrs. Johnson, the house mother, and with the dormitory girls and their friends.

One fond play of the squirrels is running up the fire escape which they do as if it were made on purpose for them. Last Tuesday I saw a very graceful squirrel (which is unusual since they are commonly frisky) walking slowly up the fire escape, looking around on the way, seeming to say, "Look at me, friends, aren't I grand?" As for the dormitory walls, they make wonderful climbing implements for practice for the little fellows. Why one day, one of them peered at me in the second-floor window. But trees are their most common sojourn. Climbing and jumping from branch to branch, the squirrels thoroughly enjoy their life with nature. They frisk about quickly, nimbly and attempt topmost heights, too. Indeed, I once saw one slowly munching a piece of bread (pretty nearly as big as himself) in a tree crotch, up above the height of the third-floor window. However, the back porch is the common place to find them eating. This is where Mrs. Johnson scatters peanuts for them. They, none too daintily take both paws, but the peanuts in their mouths and noisily crunch the shells to get the nuts out. But while they are filling their chops, they are continually on the watch with their bright little eyes for the enemy. But of course there is no such enemy at Allen House. We love our pets.

Youth In England

But their adherence to the Communist Party had at least one good result: it caused many of them to engage in social service while they were still at the university, where they did good and useful work, and this they have persevered with even theough their opinions have changed. At the same time there was a strong pacifist movement and large numbers of undergraduates signed declarations that in the event of war breaking out they would refuse to fight. This did not seem to me surprising. They had learned that war settled nothing and they had seen for themselves that by reason of the last war life was in every way more difficult than it had been before; there was less wealth in the country, it was harder to get a job and the future was uncertain for all of them; and they had read books that described not only the horror of war, but its miserable discomfort. In the slums of Bermondsey they held pretty much of the same ideas. "You won't catch me fightin' if there is a war," the lads used to say to me. The wretched lodgings so many of them lived in, the high rents, the lack of employment exasperated them and they had no patience with a social system that prevented them from living a decent life in security.

Then came the war and within six months compulsory service. It was accepted by the nation with amazing unanimity. But large numbers of young men, young men of all classes, had not waited for this, but had joined up of their own free will. When conscription was introduced special measures were taken to deal fairly with conscientious objectors; it appeared that there were astonishingly few of them and what is interesting is that as the older men were drafted they grew fewer and fewer. There was a small number of conscientious objectors among the lads of twenty and twenty-one, but hardly any among the men between twenty-eight and thirty-five. It seems fair to conclude that the reasons which influenced very young men who had little experience of the rough and tumble of life scarcely seemed valid to those who had the responsibilities of a wife and children, who had occupations which gave them their livelihood and who in consequence had a stake in the welfare of the country. Army life proved unexpectedly popular among the slum-dwellers. They had better clothes, better beds and better food than they had ever had before; they enjoyed the change of work and the regular and healthful exercise greatly improved their physique; and the uniform gave them prestige among their fellows when they came back on leave. I don't know how many women, wives and mothers, said to me of the son or husband who had been drafted: "It's made a man of him."

The war has been going on for eighteen months and many of the undergraduates and young men in business and in professions, who joined up or were drafted have become officers. They all spent six months in the ranks and those whom I have talked to look up on it as the happiest time of their lives. Indeed many liked it so much that they were anxious to stay and only accepted commissions on irresistible pressure.

Shakespeare didn't know the half of it!

"What's in a Name?"

The Bard of Avon was right about the rose—its name is unimportant. But if he'd had anything to do with naming telephone exchanges, he'd have learned a lot!

Names must be easy to pronounce and transmit—must not look or sound like other exchange names—must not use the same dial finger spaces.

Take MUIR and OTIS, for example. Fine!—except they dial alike! For the first two letters of each appear in the same finger spaces on the dial.

Often hundreds of names are listed, studied, discarded before one is found that meets all requirements. Such care in every phase of Bell System work helps to make your telephone service the world's finest.

Why not telephone home often? Long Distance rates to most points are lowest any night after 7 P. M. and all day Sunday.

Track Men Out For Early Practice In Gym and Cage

Coach Post's Team Weakened by Loss Of Graduating Stars

Although at present spring is far from the minds of most of us, it is not far off as Coach Archie Post, who has been working with several of his track prospects for quite some time. He refuses to be too optimistic about the outcome of a schedule he calls, "plenty stiff." With an introspective eye on the future, Coach Post hopes to get his men in condition early, so that they might make a fine showing against Williams, their first opponent.

Coach Post is confronted by gaping holes in his forces left by the loss of several outstanding men. He has lost Bud Allen in the hurdles, Johnny Davis in the pole vault, Bill Hunter in the high jump, Bob Johnstone in the weights, Elliot Pearl in the hammer, Gordy Smith in the dashes, and Davey Stowell in the half mile. Most of these men were state champs in their events last year, and their losses will be felt strongly. Dick Otis, a potential half miler, and George Babits, who was coming along fast in the hammer, have left school. Three of last year's freshman stars are unavailable. Johnny Buttles was a real loss. He had fine prospects as a javelin tosser. Bud Otto, another weight man, has left school, and likewise Wilfred Elliott.

The bulk of Coach Post's material will come from last year's varsity squad. Bill Pratt and Arnold Becker will be closing their careers in competition this year, and much is expected from these two medics in the pole vault and the high jump respectively. Jack Burgess was to be counted on in the quarter or half mile, but he is under warning and will not be available. Ed Eaton, a quarter miler, is rounding into shape. Captain Bob Kenney has a lot of work to do to get into the shape necessary to carry him across that finish line first in the high and low hurdles. Last year Bob had a bad start due to illness which cramped his style considerably all year. Captain Kenney will need a lot of conditioning since he has been working out but a short while. Coach Post is expecting good performances from Dick Clark, who was good last year in the mile; Ed Corliss, who will probably be cut down from the mile to the half mile; Walt Gage, who is staging a comeback in the shot and discus; Sherb Searl, a hard worker in the quarter and half mile; and Cliff Long, a shot and discus heaver.

It is doubtful whether or not Frank Livak will run this year. Frank is more intent on finishing up his studies and attending to the several duties that confront a busy man. Herb Long is another doubtful quantity due to his football injury of last fall, which has kicked up again. He just got out of the hospital this week and may not be able to do anything this spring on the shot or discus. Archie hopes to see Elmer Nichols boost his javelin mark of last year, perhaps to 180 feet. Ed Roby is in fine shape from his Kake Walk performance and should improve in the 440. Norm Stoddard may be pulled down to the half mile now and then from the mile event. The Webster brothers will see a lot of action this year. Fred has worked out some and Charlie is expected to report for duty this week. Coach Post may shift this pair around this season, alternating them between the mile and two-mile events based on the type of competition. They will be speeded up this year when they are in tip-top condition. Clarence Ackley may work out some on the discus as well as pitching for the baseball nine, although he will probably be depended on by Coach Gardner with Lefty Pesarik alone. Hugo Squire, who competed two years ago, will be worked on this year to perfect his hammer throw. Alex Warden is eligible for the first time since his freshman year, and he is reporting for work. He has speed and a powerful build, both assets to a shot putter.

From last year's freshman team there is Merle Crown, a distance runner; Mike Mazzolino, a broad jumper and dash man; Ralph Caccavo, who came along fast in the shot; Red Goss and Butch Earley, prospects in the pole vault; Dick Grosvenor, a high jumper; Bud Hoyt, a distance runner; and Daan Zwick, Red White and Leonard Harrington, all distance runners. Vreeland and O'Connell are coming along in fine shape in the pole vault, as is Harry Parker in the discus and shot. Bert Mott should do a great deal this year. Last year he ran the dash, quarter, hurdles, broad jump and high jump. This year he will probably run the hurdles with Bob Kenney. Hal Wood will toil on the pole vault. He did not put in too much time last year, but he still showed plenty of improvement.

The schedule is tougher than last year's, and a lot of work must be done to complete it successfully. Here's luck to Coach Archie Post and his charges in the approaching track season.

Intramural Notes

The free-throw contest that occurred last Thursday and Friday was run off successfully. Henri Beauchemin '41 emerged the winner with a score of 39 out of 50. Frankie Taylor '41 and Bob Doherty '43 were tied for second place. Larry Killick '44 took fourth place.

Last year there were team contests along with the individual free-throwing. Because that worked out very successfully, it again could be initiated this year. However, in order to do this, five teams at least must be needed to make it worth while undertaking.

The athletic calendar for the balance of March, according to the Physical Education Office, will be occupied with the interfraternity track tournament and Hexathlon. The interfraternity relays will be run off next week, March 14-15, while the Hexathlon will be run off the last week of March.

Please notice that the lists for the team relays for the interfraternity races must be handed in to Archie Post not later than Tuesday, March 11. All entries handed in after that date will not be accepted. Interfraternity councilmen, TAKE NOTICE.

In regard to the meet, the relays, the Hexathlon, and the other running events, no man will be able to compete unless he has worked out on the track at least eight times. It is imperative, therefore, that all competitors see to it that they check off with the attendant in charge, not the scrubs.

Badminton and Handball

To date there has not been much spirit shown in the badminton tournament, although the singles matches have been drawn. Due to its recent beginning, the doubles matches for badminton have not yet been chosen. Badminton is on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, and at 7.30 p.m., on Wednesday evenings at the Gym.

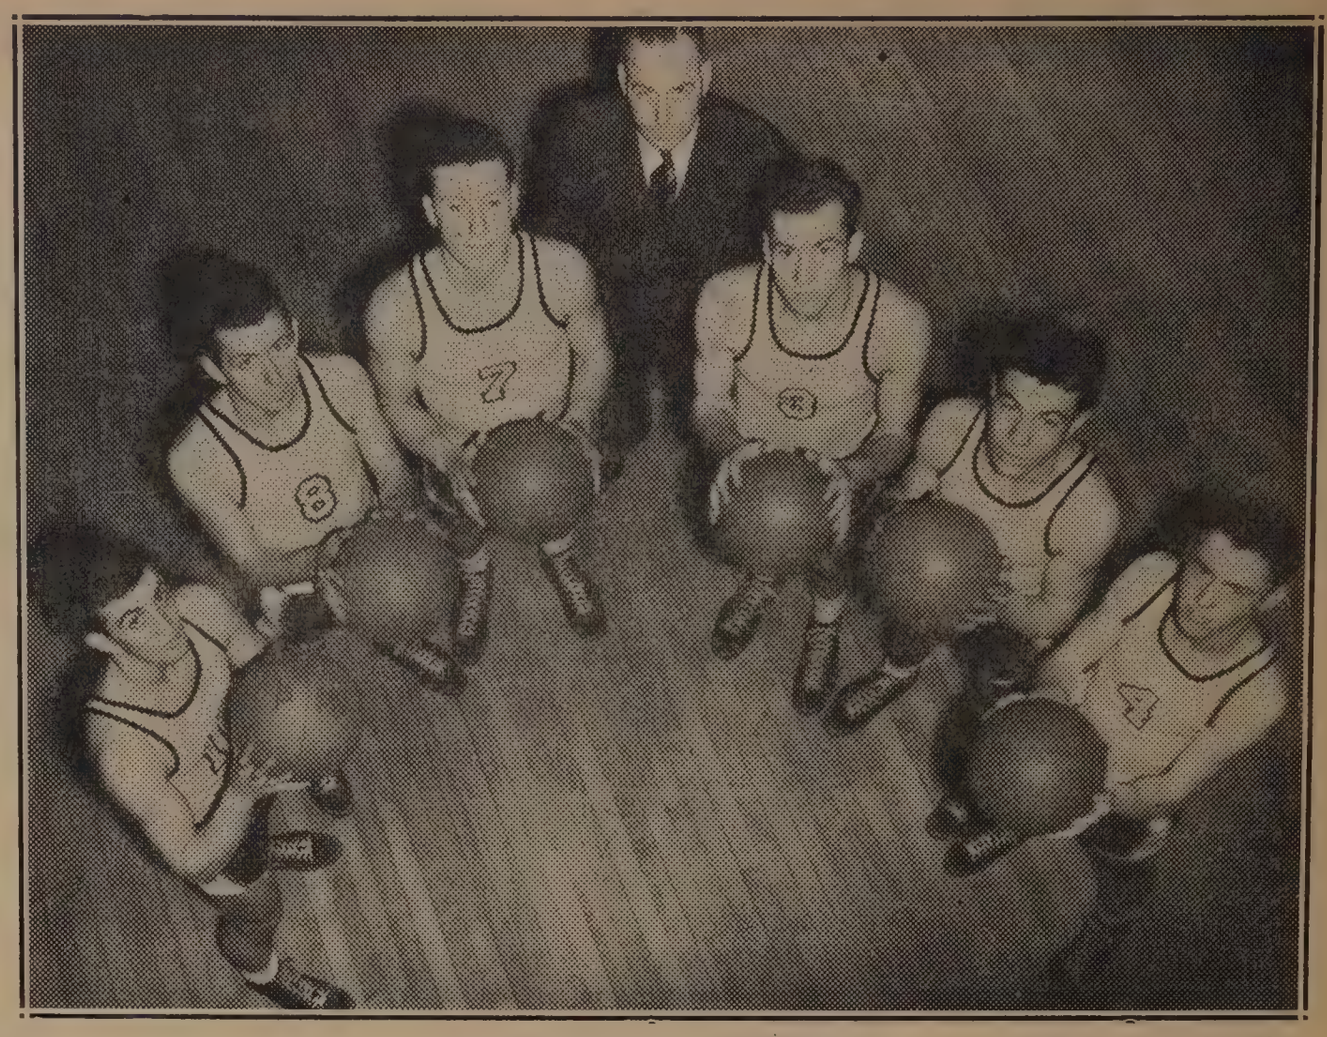
As to handball, the singles matches have been run off and also the doubles have begun. Even so, it is not too late to enter the doubles and all those who would care to enter them are urged to sign up with Archie Post.

Tennis Practice Starts for Varsity

Four Lettermen Aid Prof. Carpenter's Plans

Tennis is not only just around the corner, it's next week! All prospective varsity material should note this: Practice begins Tuesday, March 11, at 4.30 p.m. Practice sessions will take place three times a week till spring vacation, and the number of sessions after recess will be determined by how the team shapes up. Pre-vacation training will consist of conditioning and hardening the boys up, while continual practice at the nets will be the program for April.

With the absence of G. Booth, last year's captain and number one man, and L. Simpson, last year's number four man, the varsity has dwindled to J. E. Simpson, A. Wolk, S. Foti and R. Lynch. However, there are some promising sophomores from last year's frosh team willing to lend a hand, and help Professor Carpenter round out his team.



Considering the schedule and the team, we should do as well, if not better, than we did last year. Two tough teams are missing from this year's program, Colgate and Williams; but Amherst, by far our most versatile opponent, remains, and stands first on our list. The schedule is as follows:

Apr.	24	Amherst	Amherst
	25	University of Conn.	Storrs
	26	Mass. State College	Amherst
May	2	Clarkson	Potsdam
	3	St. Lawrence	Canton
	6	Union	Burlington
	9	St. Michael's	Burlington
	12	Colby	Burlington
	15	Middlebury	Middlebury
	20	Norwich	Burlington
	22	Middlebury	Burlington
	24	Trinity	Burlington

With three games facing Professor Carpenter's charges almost immediately after spring recess, the racqueteers will have to go all out in order to cop those matches.

VARSITY TENNIS—All men interested in tennis report to the Back Armory at 4.30 p.m., Tuesday, March 11, 1941. B. RYNOWECER, Assistant Manager.

Class A Basketball Tourney Opens Today

By "SCUTS"

Burlington and vicinity will live, eat and dream basketball this week-end as the Class A State Championship Basketball Tournament moves in for its annual two-day stay.

For the third time in the eighteen years of competition for the beautiful U. V. M. trophy, one team has a chance to "cop" the cup for its trophy case and never have to give it up. This time it is Cathedral's Little Indians, led by sharp-shooting "Pal" Evelti, who possess the golden opportunity which twice before in the history of the tournament has been muffed by one team, Burlington High.

According to Statistics

With a record of sixteen wins out of the season's total of eighteen games played this same Little Indian aggregation looms as a top-heavy, pre-tournament favorite. The sixteen victories were annexed consecutively after the Cathedral team lost two hard-fought games to Vermont Jr. College and to the U. V. M. Freshmen.

Next on your list place Springfield High, the Southern League winners. Although this team lost two games during the season to weaker teams, they gave Cathedral's boys one of the toughest games of the year before bowing by the score of 37-30.

Winooski High, boasting a record of thirteen wins, four losses, is not to be lightly regarded either. Here is an in-and-out team that may blossom forth with some startling surprises.

Burlington High's "Blue Boys" are ranked fourth with a record of eleven wins out of sixteen games played. Buck Hard's team has played lackadaisical ball all year, but this is tournament play and the high school team would like nothing better than to upset their highly-touted city rivals.

The other four entrants, not given much of a chance, are: Rutland, 12 wins and 6 losses; Windsor, 11 wins, 7 losses; Montpelier, 9 wins, 6 losses; and Mt. St. Joseph, 13 wins and 9 losses.

The Schedule

The tournament gets under way this afternoon, at 3 p.m., with Burlington and Winooski High providing the first play of the day. This game may well be the most exciting of the first day's competition, for both teams are pretty evenly matched.

Springfield and Cathedral draw easy opponents in their first encounters, the former meeting Rutland High at 4 p.m., and the latter facing Mt. St. Joseph at 8.30 p.m., immediately following the Montpelier-Windsor game scheduled for 7.30 p.m. this evening.

The semi-finals will be played at 1.30 and 2.30 p.m., Saturday, and the finalists will vie with each other at 9 p.m.

The officials, two excellent men, are E. B. Danzell of Greenwood, R. I., and "Shorty" Malin of Hartford, Conn.

In Retrospect

Cathedral should "walk away" according to season's record, but this is tournament play and anything can happen. Watch Springfield and those "Blue Boys" from Burlington, your favorite players.

The coaches of three teams are graduates of U. V. M., namely Baldwin of Mt. St. Joseph, Hammond of Cathedral, and Lanahan, the Winooski "Millers" leader.

Concerning Class B Tournament

As a prelude to the play starting this afternoon, Randolph High School for the second consecutive year annexed the Class B championship as a result of a victory over the highly-favored St. Michael's team of Montpelier to the tune of 26-19.

More than 2,100 paid admissions were totalled as the teams battled furiously before the largest crowd to watch a Class B tournament game.

Both teams used a zone defense and it was not until a small, tireless ball hawk, by the name of Wood, ran wild that the game was decided. This little forward, together with his teammate, Rainey, threw in 23 points of their team's 26 point total. The former annexed 13 points for himself.

In the consolation game Black River Academy beat Waterbury High School 37-28.

Shots Here, There and Everywhere

Two offers came to Vermont students from the Brooklyn Dodgers. One was to Bud Kimball, former U. V. M. athlete and third sacker for the Burlington Cardinals. This one came from the National League Baseball Club, and asked Bud to report to the Montreal Royals in Macon, Ga., on March 15. The Royals are a class "A" team in the Brooklyn farm system, and Bud is being given his big chance right away. If he doesn't make good, he will be shipped to a class "B" team in Reading, Pa. When this corner remembers how Bud threw and hit while wearing the green and gold of Vermont, we don't believe that he will be out of his class. See you in the big leagues, Bud!

The other offer went to Frank Taylor, Vermont four-letter man, and also a member of the Burlington Cardinals, but this one came from the Dodger professional football machine. It was one of those "if you look good to us" contracts, and Frank promptly forgot about it.

So Long, Ed Hickox

Eastern College Basketball lost one of its most familiar figures last week when Coach Ed Hickox of Springfield College announced his retirement. The Gymnasts gave their coach a good send off by administering the Rhole Island Rams their worst defeat of the season, 59-50, and pulling one of the major upsets in college basketball. The Rams were slated to appear at Madison Square Garden, but their defeat at the hands of the Gymnasts when coupled with their close losses to Temple anl the U. Conn. Huskies eclipsed their Garden chances. Ed must have felt sorry for Frank Kearney, the Rhodie Coach, but after Kearney's unsportsmanlike attitude in slugging Bill Coyle, referee in the U. Conn. game, this corner has no sympathy to spare.

Those Yanks

The New York Yankees who will probably finish number one in the American League standing this season (wild prediction, the first) have remodelled their infield 1941 style. Babe Dahlgren was sold to the Bees and versatile Joe Gordon, former second sacker, will be switched to the initial sack. Gerald Priddy and Phil Rizzuto who established a double play record at Kansas City last year will cooperate as the infield at third base. Listening to Al Schacht, clown Prince of Baseball, we are convinced that the Yanks really have a find for Al who tours the minors and probably sees more young ball players than any scout in baseball, predicts that the new Yankee shortstop, Phil Rizzuto, will be the number one rookie of 1941.

A. A. U. Champs

In the Clyeveland meet whose entries close today, Gregg Rice will be out to prove that he is the fastest human in the two-mile distance. On February 15, Rice traversed the distance in 8.53.4 to break the official world mark of 8.56.0 held by Miles Szabo of Hungary, but he discovered an unofficial record of 8.53.2 held by Taisto Maki of Finland. So Gregg will be trying to clip at least three-tenths of a second from his own previous record. He will be pushed by Forest Efaw, Tom Deckard of Olmypic fame, and Joe McCluskey, veteran two-mile steeplechase titlist.

Spring Program of Y. W. C. A. Released

Worship, Study and Service Aims Stressed

A spring program for YWCA has been announced by Shirley Gray '41, president. Three topics of current interest to students are to be studied: Christian Faith and Democracy, Promotion of Interfaith Tolerance, and Social Service Training. These topics are closely related to the aims of YWCA: Worship, Study, and Service.

A guest speaker will be invited for each meeting and open discussion will follow. Miss Gray emphasizes that all meetings will be short and urges that all YWCA members make an effort to attend those lectures for which they signed and as many others as possible.

The study of "Christian Faith and Democracy," the first of the topics, was begun Tuesday evening at Southwick by a group of YWCA members. Miss Charlotte Perkins '38, secretary of Vermont YWCA, read from "Christian Faith and Democracy" by Gregory Vlastos, associate professor of Philosophy at Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. Miss Perkins has met the author and finds his book interesting and easily understood. Professor Vlastos answers Sigmund Freud's accusation, "Religion is an illusion more acceptable than fairies or Santa Claus," by defining true religion. He calls it "Man's conscious relating of his own life to the reality that creates, sustains, and outlasts his life and every other life." A brief discussion followed the reading. At the other meetings, this group plans to study Professor Vlastos' explanation of the relationship between religion and democracy.

The Interfaith discussion promises to interest a large group. Representatives of the three faiths to be studied will speak at these meetings.

On March 12, the Catholic faith will be explained by a Burlington priest. On March 19 a rabbi will discuss the Jewish religion. On April 16 a Protestant speaker will give an outline of Protestant belief.

In connection with YWCA service, a course in Social Service Training is to be given by Burlington women for the members who are interested in this work. Lectures will be given on "Recreation for the Young Child," "Aspects of Child Welfare," and "Child Psychology."

Both men and women are invited, whether or not they are members of YWCA or VCA.

French Film to Be Seen at Museum

A tale of love in Spain is the theme of "Heritage," the French film to be shown at Fleming Museum on Thursday, March 13. There will be two shows, 7:30 and 9:15.

This movie based on the French play "Aux Jardins de Murcie" has been highly recommended by the critics. John Erskin says, "The picture is one of the most honest and real that I have seen. I think of it as a bit of life I was privileged to witness." The National Board of Review also praises the picture, "Powerful in its vigorous characterizations and honest emotions. Beautifully photographed and effectively acted. Especially selected."

Entirely produced in Spain without a studio, "Heritage" tells its tale of love in a manner which vividly records the lives of a courageous people. This film is the first realistic story of Spanish cviil life to reach an American screen.

Tickets for the movie may be bought from any French Club member or at the University Book Store in the Old Mill. All tickets are 25 cents.

Marcel Gras is the producer and director. The picture will be in French dialogue with English captions. The cast is as follows:

Maria .....Juanita Montenegro
Pencho .....Vital
Xavier .....Hubert Prelier
Domingo .....Marcel Deltaitre
Fuensantica .....Annette Doria
The Doctor.....Georges Mauloy

men and women who have been influential in a cultural and social way.

It was at the beginning of President Buckham's administration that women were first admitted to the University. Coeducation was no new experiment, for it had first been introduced as early as 1937 at Oberlin in Ohio. The first women to graduate from Vermont did so in 1875, and having made records which should entitle them to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, they were without hesitancy accepted and gallantly so, as a matter of course. These ladies, Ellen Eliza Hamilton (Mrs. F. E. Woodruff) and Lida A. Mason (Mrs. S. D. Hodge), were the first two of some 33,000 women who have become members of the society. Put down another first for Vermont.

Frantic War Days

Additions to the physical plant, the beginning of intercollegiate athletics, extension of scientific studies, all the familiar characteristics of the modern college came in during President Buckham's long term of forty years. The Billings Library, Engineering Building, Williams Science Hall, Converse Hall, Gymnasium, Morrill Hall, Grassmount, professors' houses at the south and north ends of the campus, the new medical building, all came at this period.

Following shortly after President Buckham's death in 1910 and during President Benton's term came the World War, with its paralyzing effects, the frantic days of the Students' Army Training Corps, which brought a lull in physical expansion although faculty and student body increased greatly. Since 1920 in President Bailey's administration the institution has expanded rapidly in physical plant and enrollment.

The Ira Allen Chapel, the Fleming Museum, Redstone, Robinson, Slade, Southwick, Campus House, Sanders Hall, and Allen House have all been added in recent years. Faculty, plant, and student body have all increased during the nearly twenty years of President Bailey's vigorous leadership.

Civilization Influence

Without our University and its civilizing influence Burlington and the State would be the poorer. Here is something the community should foster. In its infancy tradesmen, craftsmen, and laborers, besides professional men and persons of means, rallied to the University's aid, with a dollar or so or a few pounds of nails, a load of lime, even a few hours of donated labor or a jug of rum to encourage the labor of others.

All learned and unlearned, seemed to feel that the University was something the community needed. Now after a century and a half that realization is dulled from long familiarity. But the need still exists, and the need of the University is more pressing than ever. If it has any friends, now is the time for them to come forward, in this sesquicentennial birthday year, so that the future may be faced with courage and assurance and that the tradition of sound learning and service to the community so long and so honorably maintained may continue undiminished down through the years to come.

Tyler's "Present Age" Reflects Events of 1812

An interesting reflection of all these events, some of them so strikingly similar to those of our own time, is a poem called "The Present Age" written by Royall Tyler, Jr., the son of Royall Tyler who was a Justice of the Supreme Court of Vermont, trustee of the University from 1802 to 1813, and Professor of Jurisprudence, the only professor of law the University has ever had, in the years 1811 through 1814. This distinguished gentleman was also our first American writer of comedy. Altogether, you see, young Royall had a family background which helps much to explain the merits of the verses he spoke at the Sophomore Exhibition in November, 1812. He began:

Is there a theme that's more sublimely great
More suited for the Youthful Poet's song
Than those devices of stern relentless fate
Which to his own eventful age belong?

The antiquary cries, while now he gazes
Through the dark mist that covers ancient days
And strives with erring hand to solve the mazes
In which unerring Time has hid his ways;

"Oh that a Caesar's age had but been mine
Or I had lived when Alexander shone!"
But what's the difference from the Present time?
Has ere a greater Tyrant filled a throne?

Behold the slave usurp the Monarch's seat,
Now wield his sceptre o'er the astonished land
And see! the Monarch at his servant's feet
Must bow his kingly head and lick the sand.

See the great Towns which lately had the Power
Of Mighty Nations tumbled to the ground,
And those great Nations in one dreadful hour
Destroyed, and scarce one vestige to be found.

Oft have we prayed with supplicating voice
That Heaven would spare us from the scourge of war!
And has this now become our only choice?
And must we fight, or bow to foreign law?

Hark! heard I not late a voice of genius call?
(Or was it Triton's voice upon mine ear?)
Union alone can now prevent your fall;
Have Union, O my sons! be union ever dear!

Hear then, Americans, your Country's call,
Obey her voice Ye who love freedom's cause.
Unite! resist the Oppressor one and all
And then shall haughty Power respect your laws.

Mr. Louis Lisman, Burlington attorney, Mr. Catchem, head of the Hebrew Free School, and Major Frank will lead a discussion on the topic, "Better Understanding," at the Sunday night meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship on March 9. These three leaders in varied fields will give the students an opportunity for discussion and questions, and everyone is urged to attend this meeting, which will begin at 7.30 p.m., in the Parish House of the First Congregational Church.

Devotions will be led by Helen Carr '41, and refreshments will be served.

22 Enter U. V. M. Aviation School

Fourth Aviation Class Starts Instruction

Twenty-two young men and women have started their flying instruction with the University of Vermont Engineering College and the Fli-Rite School of Aviation at the Burlington Municipal Airport. This is the fourth class of aviation-minded people who have received ground training at the University Engineering College and flying instruction at the Fli-Rite School, under the supervision of Harold W. Pugh, in the large-scale C. A. A. national flying program intended to bolster national defense. When these twenty-two enrollees complete their study, and win their private pilot's licenses, the number trained through the University and C. A. A. cooperation will be ninety-nine. The flying training started a year ago last fall, in 1939, and two classes were trained during that college year. This is the second class of this year.

Two men not now in college have responded to the invitation of the engineering college, extended to young men of Burlington and vicinity who have satisfactorily completed two years of college work, to apply for flying training, even though they are not now students at the University of Vermont. They are Allen B. Burnett of Richmond, a rural mail carrier and graduate of Bay Path Business College, and John A. Hamilton, Burlington, employed at the Burlington Daily News. Hamilton is a former University of Vermont student.

Three women are also numbered among the twenty-two enrollees. Irene M. Quimby '43, Barnet; Jean M. Stewart '41, Rawal Pindi, India; and Virginia E. Weyell '41, Winsted, Conn., have passed their required tests and are starting their flying study. Nine of the twenty-two are seniors at the University, seven are sophomores, two Juniors, two are graduates, and two are not college students. Lieut. Robert J. M. Fyfe, Jr., assistant professor in the military department of the University and a 1938 graduate, has enrolled for the flying course.

The twenty-two enrollees in the present flying course are: Jerry Brill '43, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Allan B. Burnett, Richmond; Ralph M. Caccavo '43, Northfield; Gerald A. Cohen '41, New Britain, Conn.; Robert D. Copp '41, Burlington; Sumner S. Firestone '41, Dorchester, Mass.; Robert J. M. Fyfe, Jr., Burlington; Edward A. Guilbert '41, Waterbury, Conn.; John A. Hamilton, Burlington; John P. Hoyt, Jr. '43, Milton; Harold W. Kennedy '43, Waterbury; Frank H. Livak '41, Rutland; Floyd R. Olson '41, Burlington; Irene M. Quimby '43, Barnet; Judson C. Richardson, Jr. '43, Leominster, Mass.; Heath K. Riggs, Richmond; Jean M. Stewart '41, Rawal Pindi, India; A. James Taggart '41, Castleton; Charles A. Webster '42, Orleans; Virginia E. Weyell '41, Winsted, Conn.; Joseph A. White '42, Essex Fells, N. J.; John W. Williams '43, Northampton, Mass.

Professors H. G. Millington and A. D. Butterfield of the engineering college and Mr. F. E. Hartwell of Richmond, give the seventy-two hours of ground school training supplied by the University of Vermont as its part of the course. Mr. Harold W. Pugh, manager of the Burlington Municipal Airport, directs the actual flying instruction.

U. V. M. Students Attend Christian Movement Meeting

Delegates Describe Many Varied Phases of New England Conference

[EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a series of articles written by students who attended the New England Student Christian Movement Convention, held recently in East Northfield, Mass. We feel that the topic is of especial interest to students here at the University and, therefore, of sufficient importance for publication.]

What is the Student Christian Movement in New England? This question must be answered before the following articles representing the views of the U. V. M. Delegates to the Mid-Winter Conference of the New England Student Christian Movement, held at East Northfield, Mass., can be fully appreciated.

The New England Movement is made up primarily of the Christian Associations on the Campuses of New England. Thus, the V. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. here at U. V. M. are units of an organization that is world-wide, for the New England Student Christian Movement is part of the National Intercollegiate Christian Council, which in turn is part of the World Student Christian Federation. Today, this world-wide movement is being carried on even in the war-torn countries of Europe and the Far East.

This is entirely a student run and student controlled organization. The permanent staff, headed by the secretaries, Wilmer J. Kitchen, and Miss Edith Lerrigo, with offices at 167 Tremont Street, in Boston, carry out the program and policies formulated by a general committee made up of representatives from about thirty New England Colleges. Students planned and ran the Northfield Conference; it is but one of many activities of the Movement. Thus, it may be said that this is one of the greatest Christian Democratic movements in the world, building high ideals in young people, who will take their place as leaders in the world of tomorrow.

KENNETH W. JOHNSON '41.

Have you read the Bible lately? . . . . Neither had I. There was revealed by a show of hands last week-end at the Northfield Conference an amazing number of people who had not looked at the Holy Writ for eons. It certainly was rather ironical that so many of the attending students should have to confess to this sin of omission. Strangely enough however the leaders were quite aware of this unfortunate circumstance, and promptly organized a Bible group which I attended.

When I say "read," I mean trying to understand thoroughly and grasping the spiritual significance.

It was suggested and accepted as a fact that many people expect to experience a divine feeling and state of peace by merely laying their hand on the Bible. Of course, it is ridiculous to expect this attainment of an essential in religion in this manner as it requires serious and thoughtful concentration.

Even in years of study you cannot be expected to fully know your Bible, but a little more consideration to It will help. I'm going to try myself.

One of the essential points I carried away from the Northfield Conference was how little we as students of the University of Vermont knew about the necessity for European relief.

Many objections have been raised to our giving 37,000,000 people in Finland, Belgium, Holland, Norway, and Central Poland help in order to prevent them from facing certain death by starvation and disease. The information and discussion on this topic I feel should be passed on to those of you who were unable to attend Conference.

Did you know that it is the A. E. F. veterans who are backing this movement to put the Hoover Plan, used in 1917, into action again? They don't want money or ships for they have both. What they do want is to arouse public opinion in its favor. They want to answer your question:

Can this famine be prevented without helping Germany? Yes. The Hoover Plan, administered by Quakers in the last war, provides for absolute control of native and imported food by a Neutral Commission. Supplies will go directly to the hungry people for whom they are intended.

Does this plan aid Germany? No. The plan provides for only up to 140,000 tons of imported food to be on hand at one time. Germany uses ten times that much each month. If Germany committed a violation and seized the entire supply this would furnish them food for only three days and relief would end as Britain would again shut down her blockade.

Will starving people revolt against Germany? No. Military resistance is impossible when disarmament of a nation is complete. A single tank can easily subdue an entire area. It is barbarous to even suggest that naked-handed women and children could fight against modern weapons.

Would Germany keep her agreement? Yes. Pestilence, already appearing in the occupied areas respects no boundaries. Germany knows this and would keep the agreement if for no other reason than its own self interest. Agreements made by the present German government since the outbreak of war in 1939, permitting relief in Poland and other occupied areas have been scrupulously kept.

At the recent conference in Northfield Dr. T. Z. Koo, secretary of the World's Student Christian Movement, gave a very interesting interpretation of the social and religious forces dominant in the world scene today.

He attempted to show that with the breaking down of the Historical institutions that have been developing for ages, there has also been a breaking open. These institutions that have composed our civilization for decades are breaking open and through this opening the suppressed groups are, and will continue to exert their influence, and in this way take a new place in the world society and in the world of tomorrow.

The most important of these groups, he thought, were the areas tending toward nationhood such as India, the lower economic classes and the religious groups. It was through this breaking open that the churches could make their will effective and a more intense spiritual life that will lead the way towards the individuals taking their place in shaping the new society.

New Mansfield Ski Jump Will Aid Skiers

Although it was not fully complete for this season, U. V. M. has a fine ski-jump in the making at beautiful Mount Mansfield. Through a solid grove of rugged spruces, the route that the slivver stars will follow has been blazed about half way up the mountain. The background of this location makes it a truly beautiful site.

Due to high altitude, the new jump should be blessed with good snow conditions throughout the season of winter. This will make possible an ample amount of practice. The new development will compare very favorably with the facilities of neighboring colleges.

Vermont looks forward to an even more successful ski team next year, this new advantage being a contributing factor.

Trailerman Lives In Parnassus Unwheeled; Strives for Degree

DAVID OFFENSEND

The dying cow smiled sweetly and was able to die in peace for she knew that her hamburgers were to be fried by David Offensend, who is getting his Master's Degree in Education here at the University of Vermont.

Mr. Offensend is living this year in a trailer that he built himself, and is cooking all of his own meals. In the summer he and his brother collaborate and run the trailer as a hot-dog wagon. We know that the cow died easily for we were privileged to visit Mr. Offensend's abode around supper time one rainy day last week. No doubt, you remember the day. It was so slippery that you couldn't even take a stand on an issue.

The trailer, dewheeled, and resting on its haunches in one of the backyards on Pearl Street, was insulated last fall by a combination of leaves, National Biscuit cartons and the New York Times, Book Section excluded. There are wires strung up from the barn on the outside, from which many squirrels chin themselves. The refrigeratory system is much in evidence on the roof and an orange crate serves as a threshold.

Mr. Offensend is a carpenter by avocation. His living quarters are small and snug. In a space which would give most of us only room in which to exercise our little toe, he has built a bunk, a stove, numerous bookcases, desk with its open and ready typewriter and chairs. Everything is arranged very scientifically. We figured out that the only way you could place a pair of shoes on the floor was to fill them with feet.

The walls are hugged by a violin, a horseshoe crab with a red cross button on its rear end, gun and powder horn, mounted arrowheads, maps of the big world and his small world, Vermont, and a triple mirror. . . "And that doesn't mean I have three chins; because I haven't," said Mr. Offensend. . . "I only have two."

We could only make out one sturdy one. For Mr. Offensend is a wiry man, of medium stature and has Vermontish features. His eyes are distilled blue and his hair looks just like fresh corn silk. (He uses a fancy shampoo.) He carries some light shell-rimmed spectacles in his hands. His hands are strong from yanking beets from his garden, which he developed last fall, and from playing the violin. And the sweet notes of his instrument still haunt us. O, yes, there is a picture of Mischa Elman on the wall.

And on the wall, also, are pictures of Santayana and Mr. Offensend's beloved Thomas' Wolfe—from the Times book section. With his pipe as a pointer, our host pointed out a dolefully emptied whisky bottle which now bears a candle for reading late at night. We forgot to ask why there was both electricity and candle light. His pipe had a wonderful clean-smelling tobacco and his teeth fit very conveniently about the stem.

Mr. Offensend graduated from Castleton Normal School and has taught for a few years in some of Vermont's smallest schools. One of the schools, in R . . . ., was wonderful. Not a single kid with an I. Q. below 105. But in another town . . . well, they'd make rare criminals.

Sitting over a box of snapshots, he showed us picture after picture of his former pupils. The boy scout belt adorning the wall, covered with badges, also attested, along with the pictures and the stories he told us, of his love for children.

He taught for awhile in Upper and Lower Granville, or Granville Gulch. There was a feud between the two sections and due to a majority in the lower valley, he finally had to move the school down there. The kids moved with him.

After his varied teaching interlude, Mr. Offensend decided to get a further education so that he could teach in secondary schools. U. V. M. wouldn't accept Castleton credits, so last year he went to Boston University, and this year—well, here he is getting his Master's!

Bowling Tournament

The bowling tournament has progressed very satisfactorily. The results of the tournament, such as have been computed by the Physical Education Department, are as follow:

Sigma Nu leads with a total of 61½ points, A T O is close behind with 58½, and the rest in order are Delta Psi, 53; Independents, 45; Sigma Nu, 43; Phi Sigma Delta, 33½; S A E, 33; T E P, 32⅔; Faculty, 25; Owls, 17½; Phi Delta Theta, 14½; Kappa Sigma, 10.

This Friday is the final team bowling day which will decide the championship. A week from this Friday, on March 14, the 10 highest scoring bowlers will roll them for the individual championship.

Dispensary Examines Chittenden Draftees

The Burlington City Dispensary, run by the city of Burlington and the Medical College of the University of Vermont, is taking care of all draft examinations in Chittenden County Number One District. The work which is largely done by medical students who are on Dispensary service is supervised by the Director of the Dispensary, Dr. T. H. Harwood. The work done by the Dispensary has been thorough.

The draft examinations are only part of the students' duties at the Dispensary where each student stays a month. Daily examinations at the Dispensary consist of exams of six prospective draftees.

Defense Training Stressed at U. V. M.

Special Engineering Course is Started

As more wheels begin to turn in industry's vast revival to feed the growing national defense need, skilled engineers are becoming scarcer and scarcer. At the engineering college of the University of Vermont a class numbering over twenty-five workers in Vermont industries has just started a special engineering course, as the University cooperates in the nation-wide Engineering Defense Training Program recently authorized by Congress and approved by President Roosevelt, and administered by the United States Office of Education. Enormous expansion in industries, spurred on by the demand for speedy defense production, has created an acute demand for engineers with training in special fields. The plan of this Engineering Defense Training, authorized by the third session of the Seventy-sixth Congress, is intended to speed up the training of such engineering talent by short, intensive courses.

That a real and urgent demand exists and is growing for trained engineers in the country's industry is evidenced by the report of Prof. Harry L. Daasch, head of the mechanical engineering department of the University Engineering College, who has just returned from a Boston meeting in connection with the training program, bringing word of the need of over 30,000 engineers. The greatest shortage as a result of the defense preparation seems to be in the fields of mechanical design and production. The aircraft, shipbuilding, steel, and machine tool industries are being forced to greater and greater capacity.

Program Approved

Accordingly, the engineering college has organized its class of industrial workers, and the class is now meeting regularly three nights each week. The course will be completed by the middle of June. In the course of instruction which the class will receive will be studies in the production and inspection of various engineering materials, especially ferrous and non-ferrous metals. Time will be devoted to such topics as Metallurgy, Metallography, Shop Processes, Shop Inspection and Control Problems and to Specifications. The program includes lectures, recitations and laboratory work.

Facilities in the laboratories of the Mechanical Engineering Department, which include various melting and heat treating furnaces, production machinery, microscopes, metallographic and tssting devices, have been made available for the program.

All expenses incurred for materials, equipment and tuition are supported from funds allocated by the United States Office of Education for the purpose. Those enrolled are, therefore, receiving the benefits of the special instruction without any fees or expense to them. The program offered by the University of Vermont has been approved by the Commissioner of Education.

Enrollment Limited

Enrollment in the course is limited to those having the equivalent of three years of college training. The quota for the class is almost filled, but there is still opportunity for a few who are qualified to enroll if application is made promptly to the Engineering College of the University.

The training offered by this special engineering course is intensive, aiming at training these men for specific engineering tasks in which additional workers are expected to be required in the immediate future. The additional study is intended to develop them so that they may take a more important part in the defense activities of industries where they may be employed as the needs arise.

This intensive night school program supplements the normal activities of the Engineering College. A survey of last year's graduating class reveals that a large proportion of these men are engaged in Vermont industries. Indications are that this year's forthcoming graduating class, most of whom are Vermont youth, will be in great demand for employment in the accelerated commercial engineering activities of the defense boom.

Reverend Smith Urges Universal Cooperation

"Everyone is loyal to something or some mind" said Rev. Linwood Smith of Shelburne in Chapel Wednesday morning. The tone of your life depends on those things which you choose or accept. We are all part of a cooperative society in which each individual must take his part. In order to take an active part adequately one must make choices. The greatest choice one can make is God. There is a great future ahead predicted Reverend Smith. "I see a day when all nations shall live together on the basis of an international brotherhood united in God."

The meeting was closed after discussion groups in which smoking rules were talked over. Ice cream brownies were served.

Millikan Leads Round Table Talk

Democracy Is Featured By Cynic Program

Another in the series of Cynic radio broadcasts took place Wednesday, March 5, at 8.30 p.m., in which was featured a round-table discussion by Professor Millikan of the political science department and a number of advanced students in that course on the subject "Government by the People and Threats to It."

Professor Millikan opened the discussion by explaining that all conversation was unrehearsed and that the students participating were not only interested in democratic government, but also knew what they were talking about.

The first point taken up was the question of democracy's alleged inefficiency. The condition was attributed to the large number of people participating in the democratic government. But it was decided that by efficiency was meant the efficiency in governing human beings toward the "pursuit of happiness" and not the production of battleships and airplanes, so that democracy could be efficient since it values the quality of freedom and other virtues which overbalance any mechanical inefficiency.

The risk of losing democracy during the concentration of powers in a few men during a crisis was found to be groundless, since the case has happened many times before in the United States and the status quo has always been restored. Besides, in the final analysis, the leaders are still responsible to the people and dependent on them for support. If citizens are interested in democracy, have faith in it, and take an active part as a citizen, democracy will always endure.

However, the main complaints against democracy at this time are the continuation in power of one political party for a long length of time, fifth-column activities and, above all, public apathy. Not everyone takes his share in government, always relying on someone else to do the work.

In conclusion, democracy is perfectly able to save itself and deal with all kinds of situations, providing each person approaches every problem intelligently for a democratic solution and remembers he is up to him to take an active interest in that state.

Also on the program was C. Katzew '42 who gave a brief summary of campus news events. M. J. Levin '41, Cynic radio editor, conducted the program as usual.

Northwestern Opens Twenty-Story Dorm

Evanston, Ill. (IP).—Abbott, Northwestern University's new twenty-story dormitory on the Chicago campus, was formally dedicated recently. Built at a cost of $1,750,000, Abbott Hall has been occupied since the opening of the present academic year by more than 850 men.

The building is 210 feet tall and contains 2,200,000 cubic feet. Residential floors accommodate fifty-six students in double and single rooms. The building includes two restaurants, two cafeterias, an arcade of shops, a whole floor of exercise facilities, a library, a lounge on each residential floor, and a roof garden at the tenth floor level.

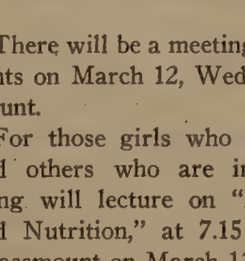
Baseball Squad Faces Heavy Slate

Coach Gardner Puts Stress on Twirling

"This year the team faces one of the finest—and toughest schedules in its history, bar none," declared Larry Gardner mentor of the baseball team. The next week or so, according to Larry, will be devoted to limbering up—getting the boys used to the small horse-hide pellet after months of duty with a basketball. Friday will see the start of intensive fielding and hitting drill, and until he can separate the chaff from the grain, Coach Gardner will venture no predictions.

Emphasizing the importance of hitting, Larry also declared that good twirling was necessary to bolster the team's defense.

The team is also going in for intensive skull practice, and Thursday night a baseball picture was shown at the Fleming Museum for the squad's edification.



Another important point for a successful season is the need of a good mental attitude. Larry declared that he would much rather see the team get off to a slow start, and then find itself and begin to click. Three years ago, he reminisced, the team made only a fair showing on the Southern tour. However, on their return they won the opening game, smothering their opponents by a formidable score.

"The boys thought they couldn't be beat, and by gosh they weren't!" he exclaimed. "And they didn't lose another game all season," Larry added.

Evidence that human beings witnessed formation of Crater Lake thousands of years ago is under study by University of Oregon scientists.

Rules for Women's Room Selections Released by Dean

More Upperclass Girls Will Have Opportunity To Room in Dorms

The following announcements have been released by the dean's office in regard to room selection for next year:

Several changes in the plans for room choosing are expected this year. With the establishing of certain houses for freshmen, more upperclass girls may live in the regular dormitories. Sophomores, in particular, will notice this change for more of them can be on campus, and more freshmen will be off campus. We anticipate using the houses operated by Mrs. Griffin, Mrs. Warner, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. Crowe as freshman houses in 1941-42. A few other private houses may be reserved for freshmen. Roberts House, although announced earlier to be for freshmen, will be available for upperclass girls. This change has been made since we do not expect to use Prospect Hall again.

In each regular dormitory we hope to have all classes represented in some recognized proportion. To bring about this desirable balance, we urge real cooperation and willingness to take a second choice, on April 11, 14, 16 and 17 when room choosing actually comes and class quotas may, by chance, be filled just before your turn to take a room—in Slade, for example.

House fellows and house presidents will again have the first choice of rooms in the dormitories. These students will be selected before the Easter recess.

Room rent for the coming year will of necessity be increased. Single rooms will be rented for $175 for the year; doubles for $135.

In Allen House and Sanders Hall half the reservations will again be made to upperclass girls. In Mrs. Moody's cooperative unit we hope to have both freshmen and upperclass girls this next year. Mrs. Moody hopes to secure a larger house nearer the campus. Dresser House will also continue as a cooperative house for fourteen girls, eight living in the house and six living in the neighborhood.

Girls who live in private houses will find a new type of contract introduced. The room deposit of $5 will be collected by the private householder in the office of the dean of women. In the past, not all girls living in these houses have paid deposits. Some have paid them at any time before June. This year the deposit must be made at the time of room choosing if a room is to be reserved. Girls should plan to have this deposit at hand when room choosing is scheduled.

We would urge girls who wish to prepare their own meals next year to visit the houses having such facilities, to study the situation, and to take time to get acquainted with the householder. A list of houses used this year has been posted in the Y room. As the University makes its contracts with householders for next year, this list will be modified and suitable announcement made. Students will note that a housekeeping unit will not be operated at Warner House next year.

Any girl who wishes to discuss some phase of her problem of residence is urged to confer with Miss Harris.

"Heritage" To Be Shown Here Thurs.

Profound Realism Is Basis of French Film

"Heritage," the French film drama of a man and woman who consummate a timeless love, will be shown at Fleming Museum on Thursday, March 13. There will be two shows, first at 7.30 and the second show at 9.15.

"Heritage" is placed in Murcie, a province in Spain. An unquenchable desire for freedom is the natural heritage of the people of this garden spot. Their struggle for water, equality and justice is a part of their lives. This film is entirely produced in Spain without the use of a studio. Its tale of love dramatically records the lives of a courageous people. The picture is in French with English captions to make it easily understood.

"A fine and moving film . . . . the characterizations and background are presented with rare truth and understanding. I have seldom seen such honest and deeply moving acting. A picture of stunning realism," says Joris Ivens. The Town and Country magazine gives its comment, "So much more than tense, gripping, stark . . . . a realism so profound as to be startling. It is a great art."

All tickets are twenty-five cents. They may be bought from any French Club member or at the University Book Store in the Old Mill.

Burlington Lawyer Heads Discussion

Mr. Louis Lisman, Burlington attorney, Mr. Catchem, head of the Hebrew Free School, and Major Frank led a discussion on the topic, "Better Understanding," at the Sunday night meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship. Major Frank spoke on "Jewish Problems," Mr. Catchem spoke on "The Jewish Religion," and Mr. Lisman spoke on "The Life of the Jews Through the Centuries." He told of how the Jewish race was suppressed when democracy was suppressed and they rose as democracy began to rise.

Helen Carr '41 led the devotions which were followed by a hymn sing. Refreshments were also served.

These meetings are held at the parish house of the First Congregational Church every Sunday evening at 7.30. Everyone is urged to come. Watch for the notice of next Sunday's program in Tuesday's Cynic.

The Home Ec Club will hold its next meeting March 19. Miss Gennette C. Davis, assistant professor of economics will be the speaker.

Each sorority will sing three numbers. These may either be two sorority songs and one secular number, or one sorority and two secular. The other rules and regulations are similar to those of last year. There will be a combined chorus of all sororities competing as a finale to the program.

Janice Spear '41, co-chairman with Betty Cole '41, announces that there is a possibility of a dance following the concert. The admission to be charged will go to the War Relief Fund.

"Judas Maccabeus Is Easter Oratorio

Prof. Bennett to Lead Chorus and Orchestra

One week from next Sunday, March 23, the music department presents the oratorio, "Judas Maccabaeus," by Handel.

The famous work has a most interesting history. At the request of Frederic, Prince of Wales, father of George III, for a heroic work celebrating the victory of the Duke of Cumberland in Scotland in 1746 Handel set himself to the task—a most unusual task—of setting unrhymed words by Thomas Morell to heroic music. Probably Morell would not be remembered had Handel not used his words. For nearly two months Handel worked on the piece, but it was not until the next year, 1747, on April 1, that the oratorio was first publicly presented at Covent Garden Theater.

The story of the oratorio tells how courageous Judas Maccabaeus at the wish of the people took over his father's task of liberating the Israelites from the tyranny of the Syrians.

The oratorio won immediate popularity and has been popular ever since. It is told, and is quite probably true, that Handel directed the work more than thirty times himself, and it was mainly responsible for his coming back into favor in England. During these times additions and changes were made, as for instance the famous chorus, "See the Conquering Hero Comes," which was originally a part of "Joshua."

It promises to be a fine concert. Prof. Howard Bennett will handle the baton; Michael Anselmo will be concertmaster; and at the organ will be Miss Miriam Natilee Marston. The choir will be augmented by a great many glee club members, students, faculty and interested persons from Burlington and vicinity to make a chorus of over eighty voices which will be accompanied by the Chapel Orchestra.

There will be several students in solo parts, but as yet the soloists have not been announced. The time of the concert will be the same as that of a vesper service, four o'clock in the afternoon.

Cynic Program to Feature Sports Talk

C. J. Katzew '42 will replace M. J. Levin '41, radio editor of the Cynic, on tonight's program.

The first feature of the program will be a talk by U. V. M.'s Czechoslovakian student, J. Katz '44 who will give a talk on the implication of the Lend-Lease Bill from the European angle. Coach Carpenter will then be interviewed concerning the forthcoming tennis season by the Cynic's sports editor, Charles Itzkowitz '42. Buck Hard, coach of B. H. S. basketball team, and Pat Huntington, the captain of the victorious quintet, will be on hand to reveal the cause of the startling upset in the Vermont state basketball tournament. The program is scheduled for the usual time, 8.30 tonight.

ATTENTION JUNIORS—There will be an important class meeting Wednesday, March 12, at 4 p.m., in Room 27, Science Hall. Everyone please attend.

Hotel Vermont to Be Scene of Block V Dinner March 15

Coaching Staffs Will Make Athletic Awards; Gala Program Planned

On Saturday evening, March 15, at 6.30 p.m., in the dining room of the Hotel Vermont, the seventh annual Block V dinner will be held. At this time the U. V. M. physical education department will make its awards to all athletes who have competed in varsity sports from the spring of 1940 to the spring of 1941. These awards will be made by the coaching staff with each coach making the awards of his particular sport. In addition to the athletes being feted, all freshman and varsity managers of sports will also be awarded.

The awards to be given will consist of letters and athletic certificates of participation to the squad members, gold or silver medals according to rank of achievement.

The Block V dinner idea originated in 1936 and its originator was Professor Adams, one of the members of the present Athletic Council.

The dinner is very symbolic since it is the only chance that the players have to meet together and talk things over in general. It is also symbolic in that it provides all participants in competitive athletics with the opportunity of being lauded for their merits and performances of their athletic "careers." With the departing of the Block V dinner a host of athletes who made fame on the gridiron or basketball court will also depart. Among those leaving us will be Frankie Taylor, captain of football and basketball, Paul Corley, captain and high scorer of the basketball team, Swede Carlson, Don Maley, Hank Beauchemin, Boots Lawrence, Bill Pye and a raft of others equally famous.

The sports for which the men will be awarded are baseball, spring track, fall cross-country, football, tennis, basketball, and rifle.

Those who are officially invited to attend are the deans of all the colleges, Mr. Kehoe, the Athletic Council, and the coaching staff. Speeches, in all probability, will be short talks by the coaches and talks by members of the council.

In the way of entertainment, there will be two professional entertainers from New York City, Alfred Skea Entertaining Agency being the providers. Willie Solar, internationally famous comic, will entertain with his antics, and Larry Collins, wizard of the slide trombone, will provide the musical aspect. There is a great possibility that the U. V. M. Medical Quartet will do its bit.

The singing of "Champlain" will close the festivities.

Men Debaters to Meet St. Patrick's

The men's debating team will meet St. Patrick's College of Ottawa in a decision debate on Thursday, March 13. The debate, open to the public, will be held in the Art Library of the Fleming Museum at 7.30. J. G. Cohen '42 and B. L. Glass '43 of Vermont will give the affirmative of "Resolved, That nations of the western hemisphere should form a permanent union for defense."

Barbara Zimmerman '44 and Penelope Easton '44 will present the affirmative of the above topic in a debate with Essex Junction High School at their auditorium tonight.

Vermont sent two teams of freshman debaters to St. Johnsbury Academy last night for a two-debate meet. The topic, "Resolved, That power of the federal government should be increased," was supported by Margaret Lillie '44 and Carolyn Brown '44, and negated by S. D. Feldman '44 and J. C. Ladenheim '44.

The Kids Grow Up

"For his teeth seem for laughing round an apple.
There lurk no claws behind his fingers supple;
And God will grow no talons at his heels,
Nor antlers through the thickness of his curls."
—Wilfred Owen.

Jackie Coogan has joined the army, so the papers say. And that in itself is a very unimportant fact. Coogan joins the army—so what. So have thousands of others. But we'd like to weave a little symbolism.

You remember "The Kid"? You remember the smooth apple cheeks, the long ragged overalls, the cap set cornerwise and nonchalant on a shock of blonde hair? Sure you do. "The Kid" was all the wistful little boys, all the saucy ragamuffins. He and Chaplin shuffled across the screen and people laughed and cried for the wistful kid and the comedian with the funny walk. People laughed and cried because the kid was something in their hearts, something sentimental and human. The kid was fun.

You remember when Remarque came back from the Western Front and wrote the "Road Back." The world was safe for democracy. And the book was about peace. About people trying to be normal again. Remarque's hero went walking in the woods. The trees were still in leaf and the birds were singing quite naturally. It was nice walking in the woods. Then the mood snapped like a twig and the sunlight wasn't very bright. "Company Attention." "Right Shoulder Arms." Some officer was shouting commands and at his words a gang of little boys responded like robots.

The kids have grown up. The kids are men now. They've given them guns and shown them how to use them. The kids are serious now. The kids aren't funny or wistful any more. Nope—there's isn't any time for that any more.

The kids have grown up. Millions of them in Germany. Millions of them in France. Millions of them in England. Millions of them in America. They have given up their lead soldiers and their scooters. And they look a lot smarter in their new uniforms—the devil-may-care cap and the baggy overalls were never very natty. Yes, the kids have grown up. Do you hear them? They've got heavy boots now and their marching has a purpose. Dunkirk and Tobruk, London and Istanbul, Berlin and Moscow, Prague and Pittsburgh—the kids are on the march.

Pacifist? No. This is just a variation on a theme. A very old theme. Maybe that's the way things should be. The kids grow up and the kids go off to fight wars. They've been doing it for a long time. Who are we to object to something so old and established as war. Pacifist? No. We're merely trying to figure out how it happened. We remember that it wasn't going to happen again—never. We remember that people were going around being happy again. We remember that it wasn't the sound of boots or cannon—it was the sound of dusty shoes, shrill laughter and marbles. And now like Winkle we're awake—Coogan joins the army. Pacifist? No. Only—"Column Left March."

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:
Dear Sir:

The Committee on Studies regrets that through error the following names did not appear on the dean's list or appeared under the wrong caption:

1942 C. Itzkowitz, Magna Cum Laude.
1941 Shirley Gray, B average.
1944 C. R. Denton, B average.

If there are any further errors or omissions, students concerned are asked to bring them to the attention of the dean.

E. Swift, Dean.

To the Members of the Women's Dramatic Club:

During the past two weeks I have called two meetings of the Women's Dramatic Club. At the first meeting less than fifty percent of the members appeared; at the second meeting, which was held yesterday, only four members were present; therefore, the selection of plays and directors could not be made.

I had hoped to innovate several plans this year and really make the Dramatic Club function as an important part of women's activities on the campus. However, this cannot be accomplished without the interest and cooperation of its members, and without attendance at meetings.

I am calling a meeting on Thursday, March 13, at 1.30 p.m. in 1 North College; failure to attend without legitimate excuse will result in termination of membership. Those who are present will decide on class plays to be given this spring and directors will be chosen. Every member of the club must attend.

Jane Lyons, President.

Lieutenant Plank, U. S. N. R., a member of the National Aviation Cadet Selection Board, and a Naval physician, plan to be in Burlington, Wednesday, March 12, and they will be glad to interview any men students interested in applying for admission to United States Naval Reserve Aviation Corps. A film showing the work and training of the Corps will be shown at the Fleming Museum on that day (Wednesday, March 12), at 4.15 p.m.

The Faith and Democracy Group scheduled to hold a meeting tonight, March 11, will not meet until Friday, March 14, at 7.30 p.m. The meeting of Interfaith Group, scheduled for Wednesday, March 12, has been postponed until further notice, due to the fact that the speaker will be unable to appear.

There will be an important meeting of the Women's Dramatic Club at 1.30 p.m., on Thursday, March 13, in 1 North College. Attendance is absolutely required.

Youth In England

I suppose this is the first time in English history that the classes have been thrown into intimate contact and the result has been, unless I am a very incompetent observer, a great dissolution of those class distinctions which have been such an unhappy feature of British civilization. To their surprise rich and poor, gentlemen's sons and the sons of artisans, discovered that they were very much the same sort of people. The common danger, the propinquity into which all are forced when they take shelter at night against bombardment, the mutual help when persons lie dead or wounded all about and houses are destroyed and all possessions lost, have united the nation in a new sympathy and comradeship. When your Mr. Kennedy said that democracy was dead in Britain he didn't know what he was talking about; democracy, not political democracy, that we have had for years, but social democracy, is just born.

Indeed we in Britain are in the midst of a revolution, but it is a peaceful one; it is revolution by consent. We know that after the war we shall have precious little money; the opulent know that they will never enjoy again their old way of life and the owners of historic houses know that they will never be able to live in them again. It would be inhuman to expect that they should not regret this, but they accept it with a shrug of the shoulders and a smile. The old order is dead and they are prepared to make the best job they can of the new. Before I left England I saw Mr. Alexander, the First Lord of the Admiralty and one of the most prominent of the Labor Leaders, and I asked him what future he foresaw for the country. "I look forward to a Britain where there are no rich people and no poor people," he said. Well, I suppose that means socialism. But the British do things slowly, and the socialization of the nation will come by degrees and it will be introduced not by violence but by successive measures which will represent the will of the people.

Since these measures will in some degree revolutionize the lives of the young men who are at the universities now or have recently left them and since they too will have a say in them, I have thought it wise to enquire how they regarded them. They are prepared to accept a new social order with good will. You have heard a great deal in this country about the exploits of the flying men, but you have heard little about those of our workmen. They have been little less heroic. They have continued to work when death was hurtling through the air, they have consented to a twelve-hour day, and they have agreed to the curtailment of liberties which they had wrung from the employers after years of struggle because they realized that this was essential to the successful prosecution of the war. Every fair-minded man must admit that they deserve the reward. These young men of whom I am especially writing are prepared to surrender the privileges of their class. They know that they will never again enjoy the advantages of wealth and station. I cannot put the socialist program in two sentences; the main points are that the essential needs of man should cease to be an occasion for private profit and that commerce should be conducted for the benefit of the community rather than for that of individuals. I have not myself found that this program aroused any undue apprehension in the eager breasts of the young men of my acquaintance.

One of the factors that has most tended in England to create a separation between the classes has been the public school system. The public schools were founded to give poor boys a good education, but in course of time they have become the preserve of the well-to-do. It cost four hundred pounds a year to keep a boy at Eton. Parents can no longer pay such sums, the public schools are faced with ruin, and their only chance of survival is that the state should take them over. Then they would become what they were originally, schools for the public, public schools as yours are, and the lord's son would sit side by side with the blacksmith's. This will surely deal the death-blow to that snobbishness which has been bred in our public schools and which I do not hesitate to say is the most deplorable failing of my fellow countrymen. This must surely destroy the class-consciousness which the war and conscription have already shaken and, by instilling into the young during their most impressionable years the notion that they are all brothers, go far to lay the strong foundations of that new Britain to which we all look forward.

ermont Farm Boys and Girls are in Defense Education

part of the great defense education ment now gaining momentum ghout the country, training more ers for the jobs which industry is ing, Vermont farm boys and girls are being given the opportunity of learnmore about mechanics, carpentry, l working and elementary electricity. instruction started February 10 in al towns, and most of the thirty-one es already approved were in operaby March 3. A special federal priation made by the Seventy-sixth gress last October made this training ram possible. The state plan was oved early in January. The State rd of Education and Commissioner ducation, Mr. Ralph E. Noble, guide direct the policies under which the ram operates. The program, known he "Out-of-School Youth Program," e phase of the total vocational educa- program operating in Vermont of h Mr. John E. Nelson is the director. he major purpose of these courses in "Out-of-School Youth Program" is reate a reservoir of individuals with sic minimum of mechanical training. courses have been approved by the inal Defense Commission. It is be- d that with the rapidly accelerating strial program it will be necessary to this reservoir of labor within a short and it is, therefore, of the utmost rtance that a training program be up that will provide these young le with a minimum of mechanical ing.

second objective of the program is rovide some semblance of equality of ational opportunity between rural and n youth. Farm and other rural youth hitherto had little or no opportunity ecure mechanical training, while urban h have had considerable superior ntages along these lines as a result n extensive trade and industrial edu- program in operation within or cent to the larger industrial centers. ese "Out-of-School Youth Program" es are located in North Bennington, ford, Bradford, Thetford, Passumpsic, Marshfield, Danville, Vergennes, Essex Junction, Derby, North Troy, Richford, Swanton, Highgate, Bristol, Fair Haven, Middlebury, Brandon, Woodstock and Hardwick. Several towns have more than one course in operation. Recently courses have been set up in Waterbury and Hinesburg.

All costs of operating the defense courses are paid from funds received by the State from the federal government so that no additional expense is required from the local community. Funds are being used to purchase some additional equipment, payment of instructors and all other expenses incident to the operation of the program. In a few cases garages or other shops are being used as places in which to give the courses.

An advisory committee consisting of representatives of farm organizations, industry and labor with consultants from the U. S. Employment Service and other related organizations is to function in an advisory capacity as the program expands and develops.

Burlington High Annexes Basketball Crown in Big Upset

Underdogs Break Little Indians' Record of Eighteen Straight Games

By Scuts

Burlington High's Sea Horses, one of the "fightinest" teams to emerge from that institution, went out on the floor of Memorial Auditorium Saturday night and before a packed, wildly shouting house annexed the state basketball championship crown and did what no team had been able to do in eighteen attempts—they beat mighty Cathedral. Decided underdogs because of their two defeats at the hands of their intracity rivals, they clampel a lid on the Little Indians and with a superb display of "guts" and teamwork came out on the long end of a 31-28 score.

The Final

When Burlington's team walked on the floor no one, not even their most ardent rooters, could visualize a victory, especially since Cathedral had shown much more in their two tournament games than had the Burlington High team.

As soon as the first whistle blew, however, all these thoughts were thrown to the winds, as the heart and determination of the Sea Horses became apparent. It was little Perl Huntington, a hero since the first tournament game with Winooski, who again provided the spark to lead his teammates to victory. Cathedral started off with a bang and soon maintained a 4-1 lead, but this boy Huntington threw in five points in a row and the battle was on.

The most any team was behind during the whole game was by five points and Burlington was on the short end of a 13-8 score at this time.

Ray Brown and Pal Evelti sparked their team to a 19-16 lead in the first half with 8 points each, but Bill Simpson and Perl Huntington with 5 and 7 points respectively stayed close behind and seemed to bide their time while they wore their opponents out. Although Cathedral's Little Indians presented a taller team, Don Prim's height kept the Burlington boys fighting for the ball off the backboard all during the game and many a Cathedral attempt was foiled because of his beautiful play at his own basket.

The second half started and so did Huntington with a sweet lay-up shot to make the score 19-18. Cathedral missed two foul shots and then Bill Simpson shot his team into the lead 20-19 with a nice pop shot as the crowd, or at least half of them, went absolutely wild. Now Burlington clung tenaciously to the lead until Ray Brown's two foul shots saw Cathedral again in the lead 23-22. Again it was a pop by Huntington and Burlington was on top 24-23. Not for long, Pal Evelti, shooting magnificently all night, tossed in a one-hander that brought the place to its feet. Then Huntington really got going. He threw in three points and Burlington was on top 27-25. A lay-up by Larivee and the score stood 29-25, Burlington, with only one and three-quarter minutes to go. A foul by Brown made it 26-29 and then it was Huntington again who, with thirty-five seconds remaining, stole the ball and put in a lay-up, making the score 31-26. Then Pal Evelti, striving desperately against time, threw in a shot making the score 31-28, Burlington, but the gun sounded right after and Burlington's Sea Horses, dropping from exhaustion, tasted the fruits of one of the sweetest victories they will ever have.

Concerning the Tournament

Place at the head of your list of tournament heroes these two names, Perley Huntington, magnificent in victory, and Pal Evelti magnificent in defeat.

The all-tournament team selections gave Cathedral the spotlight.

The first team listed: Huntington of Burlington, Miller, Evelti and Brown of Cathedral, and Spear of Windsor High School.

"The sportsmanship of all the teams," to quote Mayor Burns, "was to be commended," and the officiating also was very fine, especially in the final game when anything was bound to happen.

Other additions to your list of good basketball players should see Barron of Winooski, Birsky and Bernie Kasparovich of Springfield, Bob Percey of Rutland, and Bill Simpson and Don Prim of the champion team.

In the final game there was little difference in the two teams. Both played hard, clean ball and it was in this columnist's opinion the do or die spirit which enabled Burlington to come out on top.

Well, congratulations to both coaches, Hard and Hammond, to their fine teams, to the officials, to the tournament committee, Sabe Abell for his fine work, to all the coaches and their teams who participated and that trophy is still in competition, so we'll see you next year for a bigger and better tournament.

By ITZ

While a blizzard raged without, the Burlington High Sea Horses were staging their own private storm in the Memorial Auditorium by taking Cathedral's Little Indians into camp 31-28 and annexing the Vermont state title. Cathedral had had two legs on the championship trophy and would have gained permanent possession by a victory this year. If our memory doesn't fail us, this situation was exactly reversed three years ago, and it was the Sea Horses who were foiled when seeking their third straight triumph and permanent possession of the champ's trophy by the Little Indians of Cathedral. In passing it might be mentioned that Cathedral whipped Burlington in two previous meetings this year, but in tournament play anything may happen.

Going Up

For a long time seven feet has been to the high jumper like four minutes to the miler and nine seconds to the century-dash man, just a shade beyond human achievement. Last week Len Steers demonstrated to a crowd of hungry basketball fans that the seven-foot leap was not an impossibility. Steers who will begin his first varsity track season at the University of Oregon this spring cleared the bar at 7 feet ¼ inch —and this in tennis sneakers. As he made his exhibition jump which, incidentally, won't go down in the books to eclipse the present indoor mark of 6 feet 9¼ inches because it was an exhibition jump, Oregon's track coach, Bill Hayward, stood on the side lines and muttered, "He hasn't got the footwork right yet. He doesn't get enough right-foot leverage." He criticized a jump which had bested the present outdoor world's record by 2½ inches!

What They're Wearing

The heads of Larry McPhail's Brooklyn Dodgers will be protected this year against bean balls as the Brooklyn mentor became the first major league coach to indorse the wearing of the protective headgear by major league ball players. Larry lost the services of Ducky Medwick last year when Ducky received a cracked noggin through a wild pitch. The device which may save many headaches and may create new ones, is a light plastic model to be worn under the caps of the players. Many an old buck will balk at this device and we don't know yet if the wearing of the new hats will be compulsory or optional at the Dodger camp.

Not All Become Bond Salesmen

Sports writers and commentators whistled softly and spoke loudly when Tom Harmon, Michigan's famous footballer, turned down offers of $17,500 and $20,000 to play professional football. But Tom was no dope as evidenced by the contract he signed with Columbia Pictures last week. It is rumored that Bing Crosby was the man who started Tom on his movie career. However, Harmon has plenty of natural ability of his own. He was involved in dramatic work at school, has an excellent radio voice and sings well. What's more, he's being cast as a football hero in his first picture, and if he can't play this rôle, who can?

With the A. A. U.

Al Blozin put the shot 56½ feet, Saturday, threw in vain as far as shattering his own indoor record was concerned. Al holds the present record of 55 feet 8¾inches and it will remain as such. His Herculean heave of last Saturday, as reported by Dan Ferris of the A. A. U., will not be recognized because the shot he used was not a leather-covered indoor one, but an outdoor model.

Among the records whose confirmation is being held up by the war are many by A. A. U. stars. Cornelius Warmerdam's 15 feet 1⅛ inches pole vault, Fred Wolcott's 22.6 seconds for the 200-meter hurdles, Clyde Jeffrey's 9.4 seconds for the 100-yard dash, the 3.10.5 hung up by Stamford's mile relay team, and long John Woodruff's 1.48.0 for the 800 meters are all waiting to be confirmed by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, whose offices are in Sweden.

Intramural

There has been much progress made in the way of intramurals this week. The handball tournament has entered its last stages and this Wednesday, March 12, will mark the finis of a successful enterprise when the championship match will take place.

Round 3 has just been played. M. Cycleman beat L. Browne 21-6, 21-9; B. Rynowecer triumphed over L. Brum 21-6, 21-11; J. C. Ditore beat Basch 21-7, 21-15, this last match being very tight until the finish; and in the fourth set B. Warsaw beat S. Fieber in three close but decisive games 21-16, 16-21, 21-18.

Round four starred Cycleman and Rynowecer in one set and J. Ditore and R. Warsaw in the other. The first match was won by Warsaw as he defeated Ditore two out of three close 22-20, 14-21, 21-14. Warsaw played superb handball all the way, as he beat Ditore who was last year's champion. Rynowecer beat Cycleman 21-4, 21-10. The finals will star Rynowecer and Warsaw and will be played this Wednesday.

Badminton has gotten off to a slow start with matches just having begun this week. There were only three games played this past week and the results received by this department are as follows: W. Harvey beat P. Sutton, W. Black triumphed over S. Levine, and H. Twitchell edged out R. Norton.

Only a few of the games scheduled have been played and it is very imperative that the contestants contact their opponents and play their matches.

March 7 found the close of the bowling season with some very interesting results. First place was taken by Sigma Nu, who nosed out A T O by a narrow margin of 3 points. These teams bowled excellently throughout the season and it was only in the final sets that the Sigma Nu's edged the A T O's out of first place. Sigma Nu rolled up 68½ points to A T O's 65½ points. Third place was bitterly contested between Delta Psi and Sigma Phi, but the former finally won. Their scores respectively were 53 and 50.

The high singles matches was won by Norman Boyden '42, Sigma Nu, and the high doubles also was captured by Norm. He scored 128 points in the singles and 232 in the doubles. Cliff Long took second place with 226 and Les Brown took third with 220.

Newman Club Hears Father Michael

Last Thursday evening Father Michael explained how the Church prepares herself for the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass and how the people prepare themselves in taking part in the sacrifice. From the first century of the history of the Church the Roman Mass has been divided into two distinct parts, namely, the Mass of the Catechumens and the Mass of the Faithful. The first part is a meeting to hear the reading of the Holy Scripture and a preparation for the taking part in the Holy Sacrifice. The second division of the Mass enables the faithful to take part of the Mystical Body of Christ.

Father Michael explained in some detail the fundamental doctrine of liturgical life. Every Christian community formed around the bishop is a real representation of the Mystical Body of Christ. The Church represents this body. It is a unity and redemption of fallen humanity accomplished by the sacred body of Christ. St. Augustine says, "We are one flesh in the body of Christ."

As such a body the faithful come to hear the Holy Scripture in the Mass of the Catechumens to inspire themselves by mystical explanation of the mysteries of the Church by the Church. Then follows the confession by the people of this faith in the form of the Symbol.

Father Michael believes that to be able to carry out faithfully all the Commandments of God we must above all have a consciousness of the ultimate dignity of the Church, the Mystical Body of Christ; the dignity of humanity in participating in the Holy Sacrifice. Only when we are conscious of the great privilege which we have received as members in union with the body of Christ shall we understand the Holy Sacrifice.

Father Michael will give the second talk on the "Liturgy of Mass," Tuesday, March 11.

Mrs. John H. Perry led the discussion on "Prayer" at the Sunday evening meeting of Collegium. Refreshments were served. Everyone is cordially invited to these meetings. The program for next Sunday evening's meeting has not been definitely decided.

FANFARE

Several days ago the editors of this sheet got together and, after tossing off the customary round or two of beers which put them in a magnanimous mood, decided that the cinema, as they quaintly called it, ought to have some space devoted to it. For some time now the words "stupendous" and "colossal" have been conspicuously absent, and it is our lot to gently apply them to Hollywoodian efforts.

We appreciate the fact that motion pictures are a particular artistic medium. Also as far as this column is concerned, the slogan "Movies Are Your Best Entertainment," will be considered as gospel, notwithstanding the fact that the first letters of each word taken together spell maybe. So our standard of judgment is, "Does the film add something to its form of art by way of expanding or perfecting it, and in doing so does it provide entertainment?" Above all, we will not merit one purely for its social implications, which is the vogue at present, nor for any dexterous wielding of propaganda. Of course, the opinions expressed are merely those of one person, and may often be incorrect.

The following men will be the leaders of their fraternity at the Sing: L. Pichierri '41 for the S A E's, W. R. Barrows '41 for the Delts, J. A. White '42 for the Owls, J. J. Zellinger '42 for the Kappa Sigs, S. J. Baum '43 and R. S. Goldberg '42 for the Phi Sigs, C. F. F. Cooper '44 for the Sigma Nu's, A. L. Warden '43 for the A T O's, W. A. Glee Clubs Will Give Comic Opera

For the last fourteen years it has been customary for the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs to present an opera in the spring. Operas by Purcell, Gluck, Mozart, Gounod, Nicolai, Sullivan and others have been performed. This year, because the New England college glee club festival occurs in April instead of February, bringing the spring musical events close together, a one-act opera has been chosen, with very little work for the chorus. The first part of the program will consist of a concert by the University Orchestra, Mr. Pappoutsakis conducting. The performance is scheduled for Thursday, May 1, the evening of Founder's Day. The women's sororities have kindly changed the date of their singing contest to April 26.

The opera will be Haydn's comic opera, "The Apothecary" (Lo Speziale), Text after Goldoni. A most interesting and intriguing plot characterizes this more or less unfamiliar opera.

There will be four leading characters, Sempronio, baritone, an apothecary; Mengone, tenor, in the apothecary's service; Grilletta, soprano, Sempronio's ward; and Volpino, tenor, a rich, young dandy. Tryouts are being held this week at the Music Building as announced under Billboard in Tuesday's issue.

Local Girls Will Hostess at Dance For Army Men Sat.

Dean Simpson Chairman Of Dance Committee; Faculty to Chaperone

Three hundred U. V. M. co-eds, with an equal number of girls in business or professional positions and alumnae of local colleges and high schools, will be hostesses to about six hundred National Guardsmen from Fort Ethan Allen at a dance on Saturday, March 15, to be held at the Memorial Auditorium. The dance will start at 8.00 o'clock, but the girls are asked to be there preferably at 7.45, and will last till 11.30.

Each girl must be vouched for personally. The group has been gotten together through the University of Vermont, Women's Relief Corps, Catholic Society, Council of Jewish Women, Tri M Club, Beta Sigma Phis, Business Girls' Club and the college office.

The group of patrons and patronesses is headed by Mayor and Mrs. John Burns, Col. and Mrs. William S. Wood, Dean and Mrs. Elijah Swift, Col. and Mrs. Merrill Spalding, Dean Mary Jean Simpson and Supt. Lyman C. Hunt. There will also be forty hostesses.

No girls will be admitted without a card, which serves as her invitation also. Afternoon dresses will be worn. After everyone arrives they will be assembled into groups and be introduced.

Miss Mary Jean Simpson is chairman of the dance committee, with Miss DuBrule, Mrs. F. D. Carpenter and Mrs. Janet Adams Bickford.

New Point System Goes Into Effect

No Girl Can Hold More Than One Major Office

The following organizations are requested to hand in their next year's slate of officers or of council members to Mortar Board as soon as selections have been made: The Cynic—senior staff and new editors, Ariel, Student Union, W. A. A. Y. W. C. A., Pan-Hellenic, University Players, Home Economics Club, Classical Club, Dramatic Club, International Relations Club, French Club, John Dewey Club, Press Club, Outing Club and Women's Debating.

This is being done with the effort of making successful the new point system whereby the various duties and honors will be more evenly distributed among the women students. The number of points a position merits is based on the time involved, not the prestige of the office. A girl will be allowed only one major office and her total number of points should not exceed 25. This in no way affects club membership of the women's honor societies.

A major office consists of the offices in the first group. These offices count 15 points: Editor-in-chief of the Cynic, editor of the Ariel, managing editor of the Cynic, president and chief justice of Student Union, president of W. A. A., president of Y. W. C. A., social service chairman of Y. W. C. A.

These offices count 12 points: President of Mortar Board, president of Pan-Hellenic Council, editor of Winnowings, women's editor of Ariel, Student Union house chairman, president of sorority.

These offices and activities count 10 points: Student Union Judiciary Board, Chapel Orchestra, Choir, Glee Club, University Orchestra, president of University Players, president of Home Economics Club, president of Classical Club, president of Dramatic Club, president of International Relations Club, president of

Lest We Forget

The Dartmouth recently had the following sad story to tell: A student majoring in Democratic Institutions recently decided to change his major. He called on one of the Deans. "I want to change my major from Democratic Institutions, sir," he said, "I want to major in history now."

The Dean wanted to know why, and the student replied, "Well, sir, I honestly don't think there's any future to Democratic Institutions." He thought a minute and then he said: "As a matter of fact, sir, I don't think there's any future to history, either."

Such a tale seems to be a very sad commentary on college education. It furnishes excellent ammunition for those who are attacking the average undergraduate as a person who is not at all concerned with world affairs. If the charge is justified, then we are really in a bad way

It is for this very reason that we think it is the duty of every college student in the country today to help demonstrate that our educational system is not blind to external happenings. Today with a world at war and intolerance springing up on every side it is the undergraduate's duty to remember that the university is a place where men and women are to learn openmindedness, freedom of thought, and the means to a fuller and richer life. In order to achieve this it is not enough for a student to soak up scattered facts like a sponge. His task is harder than that—he must stand ready to back up freedom and individual rights whenever they are threatened. A nation's most precious possession is that of free thought. Where else better than in the universities can that possession be safeguarded? When the educational system loses its crusading spirit the way is open for dictators who will warp the public mind to fit their own mold.

The present crisis has already resulted in threats to democratic education. Distorted curricula, censorship of student press, banning of organizations, racial discrimination, budget cuts and conscription difficulties are reported by many colleges. Such facts demonstrate that liberal principles must be fought for and defended if they are to endure. Unless we want to give outsiders the impression that all students are in the same mental state as the student mentioned above, we must show an increasing interest in problems which go beyond our own campus. If we concentrate only on purely local and personal problems, we are running counter to the basic purpose of education.

Harvard University is making a start on the problem of national student cooperation and defense of democratic liberties by sponsoring a National Conference for Democracy in Education on March 29 and 30. Representatives will be invited from all colleges and an attempt will be made to solve some of the problems which have arisen in our educational system due to the impact of world affairs. A framework will be laid for greater communication between colleges and greater cooperation on far-reaching problems. We sincerely hope that those in charge can achieve success in their program.

Unless we as students definitely prove we are actively interested in freedom and unless we cooperate with other schools in maintaining it, the reactionaries will have their innings. To quote the University of Wyoming Branding Iron—"We do not want a morose student body that has forgotten the fun of living in the light of a foreign war. But we do not want a student body that is unconscious of the fact that the ideals of our university are being contested on the battleground."

Brickbats And Bouquets

By ROGER B. HUNTING

After a lapse of a week due to unforeseen hour exams, we return with a few more brickbats and bouquets.

A BRICKBAT to the good-hearted souls whose misled sense of patriotism has caused the organization of the highly publicized dance for the soldiers this Saturday night at which college girls will act as hostesses. We launch ourselves into a complaint about this, fully aware that the dance is to be well chaperoned, the soldiers are to be a selected group, and that "duty" calls our college girls. However, we have complaints to make on several points which we will take up individually.

First, a question arises as to just how well selected these soldiers will be. It has been reported variously that they will be chosen from the National Guard regiment now at the Fort, and that they are to be picked from a group of "draftees" who will be arriving late this week. In either case, how many men will be found who are the equal of the average junior or senior sorority girl in college? We will make no attempt to answer that question, but it seems that the average National Guardsman is not a match for the average college girl, while if draftees are taken, how many college men or their equivalent will be among them? Six hundred soldiers are to be there—bulwarks of our national defense perhaps, but mental and moral equals of our college girls? Not on your life.

Let's look at the point of view of the soldier for a minute—will they appreciate the condescension of our social upper crust in arranging this humanitarian and patriotic display of feeling for "our boys"? Will they appreciate the meeting of some nice girls for a brief evening and then being whisked off back to the Fort? The mere fact that the whole thing is so heavily chaperoned, with the boys being trucked back to camp in a body, etc., indicates that the organizers of the affair have some doubts as to the safety of the thing. Besides, even with college men, what is it that holds them in? Their home ties and associations—when they get into the army and away from home they may well relax with the boys and revert to nature—I'm very afraid that I would.

And on the other hand, are the boys at the college to be disregarded? True, we have a selfish motive, in that we want our college girls for "home consumption" so to speak—bad enough to pull off that fast one last fall of shipping them down to Norwich for the stable hands down there to date, but now you keep them right here at home and deprive the college men of their company on Saturday night, the biggest night in the week. I for one do not fancy the thought of any college girl spending her Saturday nights dancing with some "draftee" college boy who went to the University of Oshkosh for a semester on a football scholarship before he flunked out, much less do I go into ecstasies over the thought of them dancing with those lower down the scale than that—among 600 soldiers, I'm sure they will strike some real soldiers.

I guess that just about covers the subject, but I would like to say that I'm fully aware that the whole thing is an experiment, in an effort to give the boys a break, and a chance to meet and know nice girls. I think, however, that the reaction of the soldiers, the girls, and the college boys who are left behind has not been well enough considered. Will the girls turn down dates with the soldiers in weeks to come when they call up the sorority houses? Both as a college man, and from the point of view of the girls' friends and families, I hope so. What will be the reaction of the soldiers? Naturally they will be hurt and bewildered and yet whose fault will it be? Not the soldiers, not the college girls, but the ill-considered idea that the two can mix successfully. And if they do mix successfully and college girls go out with soldiers, there remains but one course of action—the administration will have to organize a group of girls from lower New York to come up and act as hostesses for the college men.

A BOUQUET to the college girls who believe it their duty, and to those who believe it a good idea, to go out and help out these soldiers who certainly do need female companionship. Good luck, girls—let's hope you don't need it.

That's that—now I'm going to enlist, 'cause I'd like to go out with some college girls this spring.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

It has come to my attention that some of our students, both men and women, but particularly the men, have expressed strong disapproval of the plan by which the college is assuming responsibility for providing hostesses for the dance to be held Saturday evening at the Auditorium. This feeling is natural but I believe arises from a lack of knowledge of the facts. In cooperating with the City Committee on this dance, we are cooperating in a national program directed by Mr. Charles P. Taft, who was appointed by the President to head a recreation program as part of Mr. Knudsen's Defense Council plan. All communities in or near army posts where National Guard or Selective Service units will train are or will be doing the same thing.

The men at Fort Ethan Allen are not regular army men but are fresh from their homes and those homes are much like those from which our own students have come. Many of the men are recent college graduates and especially need to feel that they are welcome in the churches, homes and clubs of Burlington. The college girls who have volunteered to go to the dance have done so because they believe that such a service is their contribution at this particular moment, to the program of national defense which we all must support.

No one is required to give this service but just as we would wish that the girls in other cities where our own brothers and friends may be stationed should treat them kindly, so the girls here at Vermont are willing to make some sacrifice in behalf of those boys who have been set down in our midst.

May I bespeak from the men of the University an open-minded attitude in this matter and assure them of my willingness to explain to anyone interested, in greater detail than is possible here the conditions under which the affair is to be handled which I am sure safeguard both the girls and the good name of the University.

MARY JEAN SIMPSON,
Dean of Women.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

. . . . And when is the University going to sponsor a well-chaperoned dance for the medics? It seems to be a well-established policy of the office of the dean of women to discourage co-eds from having social engagements with medical students.

It seems that the "Select" National Guard offers better opportunities for our aspiring young women than do we. We realize, of course, that we come unprepared, having spent only four years in academic and one to four years at medical school.

In other words, why does the dean encourage the girls to go out with soldiers and discourage our attention to them?

On whose responsibility does the decision rest that the much-maligned soldier makes a better playmate than the medical student?

It is now justified on the basis of patriotic duty. Where was this very liberal patriotism in years, months, and weeks past? Never before has the University assumed the responsibility of arranging for the happiness and entertainment of the enlisted men at Fort Ethan Allen.

Discontent will surely rage at the Post when 200 men are selected from a total of approximately 3,000 for this auspicious occasion.

We believe that this policy brings up more problems than it can possibly solve. The dangers and difficulties herein involved are very obvious.

We object!

Students Comment On Town Meetings

"Town Meeting Day" in Vermont, Tuesday, March 4, saw twenty-five U. V. M. students, members of Prof. Andrew E. Nuquist's classes in local government and administration, attending the traditional town meetings, singly and in groups, in various towns all over the State. When a few of these students were asked by the Nosey Newsman to give their impressions of the meetings they visited, the following comments were made:

M. Levin '41: Oh, I went to Waterbury. . . . It was the first time I had ever attended a town meeting and I was very interested. . . . I wanted to go to one before they become outmoded and disappear. . . . The roots of democracy are to be found in town meetings. . . . I noticed a preponderance of older people, only a few interested in the proceedings.

Sally Rome '42: I went to Charlotte. . . . I didn't know very much about it, but I guess it's valuable in that it gives all the people a hand in the government.

R. Hunting '42: I attended the Cambridge town meeting. . . . Suppose the chief value lies in the fact that the people in the town are given a chance to have a certain say in the government. . . . A town in Vermont is a cooperative enterprise. . . . I had been to town meetings before, but perhaps this one gave me a better knowledge of how it works. . . .

Janet Hackwell '43: I was at Charlotte. . . . The main thing I got out of the meeting was a better idea of how they're run. . . . It surprised me that the people knew so much about it. . . . I saw how the principles of good government in general apply to a town in particular. . . .

T. Huntley '41: I attended the town meeting at my home town, Morrisville. . . . This meeting was very sedate, in fact, unusual. . . . The people had evidently made up their minds before coming. . . . The Vermont town meeting is a most valuable institution. It brings to the people an actual concept of how laws are made by giving them a chance to participate in their making.

Donlin, Radio Writer, Speaks to Writers

Writing for the comparatively new field of the radio, which today requires a vast amount of scripts, was the subject of a talk by Thomas M. Donlin before members of the Burlington Writers' Club at the regular monthly meeting of the group this Monday evening, March 10. Mr. Donlin is associated with the Burlington radio station, WCAX, and has had much experience in writing for the radio. He led a clinic on this subject at the League of Vermont Writers' recent meeting held with the University of Vermont at the Southwick Building. The meeting, as usual, is at the Community Y. M. C. A.

Burlingtonians and those from surrounding communities who are interested in writing are invited to attend.

ack Squad Has arted Training r Spring Season

Good Sprinter Needed Mott To Be in Hurdles Many Promising Sophs

ring is here, the birds are chirping e trees and, accordingly, it's high that the track squad begin its work- out in the gym. Coach Archie Post ving the boys work out daily, for the season starts but a few days after er vacation.

What I need most," stated Archie, "is od sprinter. Anyone who is eligible, who thinks he can run, will be wel- ed by the coaching staff with open s." In previous years, Gordie Smith David Jones would take events like 100-yard dash and the 220, but with th gone to military academy, and no in school capable of approaching 10 nds flat for the 100, or 22.5-23 for the there is considerable question as to ether these two events, totaling 18 nts, can be taken.

tt in Hurdles

Dashes," continued Archie, "require d body condition and long training ough the use of specialized exercises sprint running. Anybody in the ken modern track realizes that the quar- the half and even the mile are no ger distance races. This results in the dency to take men who normally com- te in the shorter events, and build them for distance running, thus combining ed with endurance. The old way, not e as effective, was to take distance ners and pull them down for the rter events."

In the quarter and half there is a possi- ty of a need for additional running nt, since many squad members have e lost through graduation. This year I find Mike Roby alone in the quarter, h Ed Eaton a developing possibility. ke, with an extra year of training, uld be key man in this event. Who ll take over Dave Stowell's assignment the half is a question. There is a pos- ility of pulling the Websters down for s slot, but there is ample room for sible improvement of the lesser-known s of the squad, moving them up to the -mile position.

In the hurdles, Burt Mott and Capt. Kenney are outstanding, while ker, a carry-over from last year's rsity, is expected to come through in broad jump. Archie pins his hope Mott in the broad jump.

Bill Pratt and Dick Grosvenor, both in r last year of competition, are com- ing in pole vaulting and high jumping, pectively. Other vaulters are Ed Connell and Howard Vreeland. Butch ley and Hal Wood are also working in the cage nightly.

reatly mourned is the loss of Johnny iles, who will be unable to back up ols in the javelin-hurling event. If improves as expected, he should be for plenty of points. Although the used to be strong in the hammer w, the loss of Babits has greatly pered them in this event. Archie, ever, may count on the presence of o Squire and Phil Cheserone, who ed under Tony Kishan, former New land champ, and coach of Wilbraham demy. Illness last spring curtailed possibility for Phil getting in much k. A newcomer to the hammer-throw d is Chris Bicoulis, a 220-pounder shows possibilities.

lex Warden, number one freshman putter last year, and Harry Parker, seasoned, will be main entries in shot- ng events. Ralph Caccavo, also on year's frosh squad, will also be relied to bring home the bacon.

erb Long, out because of a physical ility, will leave Cliff Long in the s-heaving position. Walt Gage is getting into shape for the discus and Other discus men are Warden, re and Parker. Harry Thurber is ing possibilities in the javelin throw, her key event.

nie St. Marie, Bud Hoyt, Frank k and Daan Zwick are distance men will be pulled down to the shorter ts. Ned Goss and Rowe are utility in the low hurdles, also high jumpers.

Rev. C. R .Brown to Be Vespers Speaker

The Rev. Charles R. Brown, dean emeritus of Yale Divinity School, well known as an author and lecturer on religious subjects, will be the vesper speaker at the Ira Allen Chapel of the University of Vermont at four o'clock Sunday afternoon, March 16. Doctor Brown, who has appeared many times at the University and is the recipient of an honorary degree from it, is a popular vesper speaker.

Doctor Brown is the holder of numerous degrees from other institutions as well as the University of Vermont. He has served special lectureships at Leland Stanford, Yale, Cornell, Columbia, Harvard, North Carolina and other institutions. For seventeen years he was dean of Yale Divinity School. He is the author of many books.

Baseball Squad Is Shaping Up Well

Five Lettermen Back; Meet Amherst April 24

A storm of base hits inside the cage contrasts sharply with the storm outside as Coach Larry Gardner's charges are preparing for one of the most extensive baseball schedules ever drawn up at U. V. M.

The workouts thus far have been rather stereotyped as the pitchers are working for control, the batters are sharpening their eyes, and the infielders are loosening up in "pepper" games.

As things stand at present, the hitters are way ahead of the pitchers. The pitching is not up to standard so far, wildness being the chief problem. Extensive batting drills have been held all week, and steady improvement is being shown, much to the satisfaction of Coach Gardner, who thinks that the offensive potentialities of this 1941 baseball squad are better than in the past two years on the basis of this early season practice. He points out, however, that hitting outside is an entirely different story and only the games on the southern jaunt, will tell definitely.

Regular infield practice has not been held as yet, but Coach Gardner plans to hold the first drill Saturday.

The make-up of the squad for the trip south has not been determined and will not be until everyone has shown his wares. Several boys from last year's freshman team have not had ample opportunity to show what they can do. There will be a great deal of work to be done between now and spring vacation, but Coach Gardner praises the workman-like attitude of the squad and prophesies steady improvement.

High School Meet At Mt. Mansfield

Vermont Ski Champs Chosen This Week-end

This Friday and Saturday will find Mt. Mansfield and Stowe acting as hosts to the interscholastic ski meet when the schoolboys strap on those "boards" and shoot for the high school championship.

Friday's schedule for activities features the downhill race and the cross-country run. The former starts at 10.30 a.m. on the Nose Dive trail and the cross-country race will begin at 2.30 p.m. with the Toll House as starting place.

Although the casual spectator would expect only the races, there is, however, a special treat in store for them on Friday night when at 7.30 o'clock a ski movie entitled "Kanonen" and shorts will be shown.

The slalom and jumping are billed for Saturday's events. This year the S-53 trail will be the scene of the slalom and the starting time is 9.30 a.m. In the afternoon at 2.30 o'clock the Wagoon jump will attract the spectators when at that time the jumping, which is the most thrilling of all the events, will take place.

As a climax to the meet, a competitors' banquet will be served on Saturday night.

The teams competing this year are Bellows Falls, Brandon, Brattleboro, Lyndon Institute, Newport, Northfield, Rutland, St. Johnsbury, Spaulding, Stowe and Woodstock, the defending champions.

Incidentally, the Vermont Ski team sent a few representatives to the Lake Placid meet which was held last week-end. Although the boys didn't win any events, they made an admirable showing.

Coach Carpenter Optimistic About Tennis Schedule

Indoor Practice Irons Out Players' Muscles Ed Simpson, Captain;

Spring must be here now for according to the latest reports received in this office, that spring sport, tennis, has gotten off to its official start. Tuesday, Coach Carpenter, eager to begin training early, assembled his veterans and new hopefuls in the Back Armory with an official practice, the purpose of which was to get a preview of the material he is to handle.

This being the first practice, it is difficult to make any prognostics as to who will compose the squad. However, five lettermen will be back with us and they are Ed Simpson, captain of the team, Sam Foti, Art Wolk, Dick Lynch and Larry Simpson, who will be back with us again this year. However, Coach Carpenter is not dismayed since there are some promising freshman hopefuls from last year's team with which he can round out a winning squad.

The practices for the duration of the month will consist of three weekly gym workouts plus as much outside individual practice as possible. As soon as spring vacation ends, weather permitting, there will be daily practices held outside on the new clay courts. These courts, three of which were constructed last fall and three more which are scheduled to be finished this spring, are situated next to Centennial Field and it is there that the practices will be held, instead of the usual place which was on the back campus.

In a tête-à-tête with Coach Carpenter this reporter was convinced that U. V. M.'s tennis hopes for the year are bright indeed, regardless of the fact that the Vermont netmen will oppose such formidable foes as Amherst, Middlebury and Norwich. Of course there's no way in telling how predictions turn out in the end, but as long as the right spirit is shown, the tennis squad will have no fears of emerging with a poor record when the season is over.

The schedule is as follows:

Apr. 24.	Amherst	Amherst
Apr. 25.	Univ. of Connecticut	Storrs
Apr. 26.	Mass. State College	Amherst
May 2.	Clarkson	Potsdam
May 3.	St. Lawrence	Canton
May 6.	Union	Burlington
May 9.	St. Michael's	Burlington

Intramural Notes

The following is a tournament calendar:

Handball—Singles (now playing).
Handball—Doubles.
Badminton—Singles (now playing).
Badminton—Doubles.
March 14—Bowling singles—10 high men of regular season.
March 14, 15, 17, 19, 25—Relays.
March 21-22—Indoor meet.
March 24-26—The hexathlon.
Also, if it is desired, there will be a free-throw team championship. There must be at least five teams entered.

Archie T. Post, director of intramural sports, calls the attention of those entering to the fact that they must have at least eight running work-outs in the gym in order to compete in the hexathlon. All necessary information can be found in the booklet, "Vermont Intramurals."

As is shown above, handball and badminton singles are playing now. As soon as these have come to their soon-to-come close, the doubles will be played.

Seven teams are expected to participate in the relays. Their 220 and 440 races should draw considerable interest.

According to Mr. Post, men usually spend more time on the events in which they are adept than those in which they do not do so well. He expresses the desire they concentrate more on the difficult events.

As to the future of intramural sports, if one can use as a basis for judgment the recent and present success of the department, it looks as though more men will turn to this form of recreation. Of course, students must attend to their studies, but everyone turns aside occasionally for diversion. And intramural sports certainly have many points in their favor.

Leahy at Notre Dame

Frank Leahy who guided the Boston College club which beat Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl this fall and who is now replacing Elmer Layden at Notre Dame met 200 of the fighting Irish candidates at Carter Field for spring drill. The former Beantown mentor faces a difficult task at Notre Dame which has been the shrine of footballers for a long time. Layden left a record of 43 victories, 13 defeats, and 3 ties—a tough one to beat.

New England Tournament

The tournament for the Basketball Championship of New England opened at Manchester, N. H., yesterday. In the afternoon games Edward Little High of Auburn, Me., faced Windham of Connecticut, and Burlington faced Bristol of Connecticut. At the time of writing results had not been received for any of these games. The Connecticut teams are favored to clinch the title and bring it back to the Nutmeg State for the ninth year in a row. Windham won the class A Connecticut title by defeating Bristol who had previously amassed a string of 24 consecutive victories 25-24. The Windham team, itself, has been undefeated this year and by all odds should take the tournament this year. But before they can accomplish this task they will have to defeat Bristol in the semi-finals (provided that the Burlington Sea Horses don't pull another upset in round one).

Sabe Abell Thanks

Sabe Abell, graduate manager at the University of Vermont, wishes to express the appreciation of the University of Vermont Athletic Council and the Headmasters' Club of Vermont to those students and college officials who assisted so capably with the Twentieth Annual Interscholastic Basketball Tournament completed this past week-end. Sabe was Tournament Director again this year and as usual put on a good show and a smoothly-run tournament.

Ski Team Had Excellent Season; Dave Collins Only Four Event Man

Last fall Vermont's ski team conditioned by regularly playing touch football and by running. "Harv" Goodell '44 was a star frosh harrier.

The first of the four important meets of the season was held on the week-end following mid-year exams. This, for an obvious reason, accounts for the comparatively slow start at Dartmouth.

A very considerable improvement was demonstrated at the Middlebury meet. With nine large college teams competing, the Vermont men came through sixth.

The one which everyone was looking forward to was the Senior I. S. U. (Intercollegiate Ski Union). Although third in cross-country, third in combined cross-country and jumping, fourth in downhill, sixth in jumping, and seventh in both slalom and combined downhill and slalom, Vermont placed seventh. Entered in this meet were the twelve best college teams of the East. The scores of Middlebury and Williams, fifth and sixth, were virtually the same as Vermont's.

Lastly, at Norwich, Vermont came through second in cross-country and relay races. Our team finished fourth in this meet.

Reviewing the season as a whole, U. V. M. had an excellent cross-country team, composed of the following men: "Dave" Collins '41, "Sabe" Rising '41, "Ernie" St. Mary '43, "Brud" Sutton '43, "Bob" Goss '44, "Harv" Goodell '44.

The downhill slalom had very good men, however, handicapped by inexperience. They are: "Dave" Collins '41, "Brud" Sutton '43, "Art" Patterson '44, "Bud" Pierce '44, "Don" Marburg '44, "Harv" Goodell '44.

Jumping men were Collins, Rising, St. Mary, Goodell and Goss. Our ski team was undeveloped to its consummate ability due to lack of a jump to practice on. This will be remedied hereafter, because a new jump has been built on Mt. Mansfield. This will be thoroughly improvised by the time another ski season has "rolled around."

Dave Collins was the only four-event man. The team is losing him, but there is good stock in freshman and junior classes. "Bob" Goss should develop into a first-rate cross-country runner. St. Mary and Goodell are also left. Patterson, Pierce and Sutton should do well in the downhill slalom, according to Coach "Ev" Bailey.

The ski team and their able and enthusiastic coach believe that there are other benefits to be gained from skiing on competition besides winning for one's college. The contacts and acquaintances one makes are indeed heartening. Yes, there really is something in skiing, so, remembering that your "alma mater" has a splendid team, become a ski fan yourself.

Coach Hard Speaks On Cynic Program

Last Tuesday, March 11, Charles Katzew '42, substituting for Meyer Levin '41, presented an interesting and varied program over the regular U. V. M. radio broadcast. Among the guest speakers were Coach "Buck" Hard of Burlington High School, "Pat" Huntington, captain of the Burlington High basketball team, Professor Carpenter, U. V. M. tennis coach and Jacob Katz, Czechoslovakian refugee attending the University of Vermont.

"It was just another game," stated Coach Hard in reply to a question about his reactions to the recent Burlington High tournament victory over Cathedral High School.

Mr. Hard mentioned the team's splendid record this year of sixteen victories and three defeats in competition with other high schools. He said they would leave for Manchester Wednesday and that he wasn't "thinking anything about winning the New England tournament." Then Pat Huntington, captain of the victorious five, was called up to the mike and asked a few questions.

"Tennis was originally played in England," said Professor Carpenter, coach of U. V. M. tennis teams, who was next interviewed before the microphone by Charles Itzkowitz, sports editor of the CYNIC. Coach Carpenter then gave a brief but interesting history of the sport.

Jacob Katz, a Czechoslovakian student who is enrolled in the Agricultural Course at the University, was next introduced by the chairman of the program. Mr. Katz spoke on the significance of the Lease-Lend Bill from the European point of view.

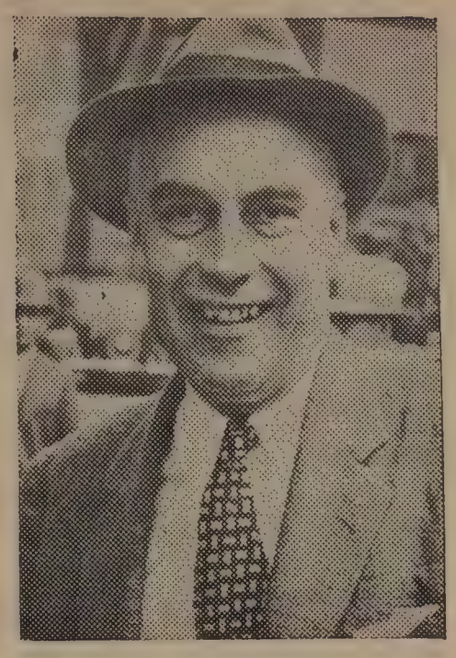
Guilbert and Gallup Senior Week Chairmen

The class of '41 held a meeting Tuesday afternoon. The few members present selected E. Guilbert '41 as the Senior Week chairman and L. Gallup '41 as the financial advisor. Further nominations may be had by petition of at least fifteen members of the senior class, three days before the scheduled meeting is to be held.

British Aid Week To Be March 17-24

New Designs To Be Displayed First Time

Supporting merchants in Vermont who, March 17, are joining those throughout the nation in introducing spring and summer fashions, created from British American symbol prints sponsored by the British American Ambulance Corps, Gov. William H. Wills urged the people of Vermont to intensify their volunteer war relief work during "British Aid Week."



"I commend the work of those lending their time, thought and energy to tasks designed to aid the sufferers from war's cruelty," Governor Wills telegraphed William V. C. Ruxton, president of the Ambulance Corps, 420 Lexington Ave., New York: "The nation is planning to intensify its efforts to assist the people of Britain in a 'British Aid Week' program from March 17-24. I urge the people of Vermont to intensify their voluntary work during this period."

During "British Aid Week" stores in Vermont, with those of other states, will introduce to the public dresses, evening gowns, playsuits, negligees, hats, handbags and other accessories created by American designers from these symbol prints. The corps receives 10 percent from all fabric sales for automobile and flying ambulances, vitamins for undernourished British children and other war relief projects. Patterns of the prints and the color shades use British and American symbols and sayings, such as the British lion, the crowns of England, and "I Am An American." Other pattern titles include "Friends Across the Sea," "Let Fredom Ring," "There'll Always Be An England," and "Good Neighbor."

Theme of the week has been announced as "Dress for Britain," and in many states society leaders are holding parties to display the new gowns for the first time.

Vermont chairmen of the British American Ambulance Corps are Mr. Louis F. Dow, Burlington; Mrs. Lincoln Isham, Dorset; and Mrs. Elmer Johnson, North Bennington.

Second Pan-Hell. Dance Held Sat.

There was a fine turnout for the Pan-Hellenic dance held at the gym last Saturday evening. Many lovely dresses were worn to good advantage. The decorations were along very patriotic lines and each sorority had painted a poster of some phase of the present state of world affairs, namely, the draft. Some of the most original ones that caught our attention were: The very clever one of Hitler carving the boot, which is Italy; the soldier running off with the bride; and the one in which the private was carrying the horse. Very few lights playing on the red, white and blue streamers added to the glamour of the situation until the last dance when a flood of lights was turned on and it was found that the Marines had the situation well in hand. Professor and Mrs. Bickford, and Professor and Mrs. Pond majored at the dance so ably managed by Joene Agard '42, Katherine Le Baron '41, Mildred Creamer '41 and Miriam Fiske '42, with the assistance of one girl from each sorority. Jack Collins and his orchestra supplied the very catchy music and many declared it to be one of the best dances held this year. All in all, this fête was as successful as last year's Pan-Hellenic dance.

It is suggested that farmers ld consult their county agricultural ts before attempting to use borax.

Supt. Warrens Tells School Convention Of Future Trends

Many U. V. M. Faculty Members Lead Separate Conference Groups

"The time is not far off when there will be one more year, maybe two, added to the high school course," Supt. Worcester Warren of Bridgeport, Conn., predicted Friday before about six hundred teachers, principals and superintendents assembled at the Burlington High School Auditorium for the thirty-sixth conference of the schools of Vermont with the University of Vermont and the Champlain Valley Teachers' Association.

Superintendent Warren based his prediction on the condition now found in many high schools, that it is "becoming increasingly difficult to prepare the high school students in the time allotted now." His topic was "Our Education—Present and Future." He went on to discuss the greater place vocational curricula are now occupying in high schools. This change he laid to the great demand for industrial skills.

Noble Also Speaker

State Commissioner of Education Ralph E. Noble shared the speaking program. His topic was "Recent Gains in Vermont Education." He cited two bills before the Vermont legislature as "tremendously significant in the development of education in Vermont." They are H-136 increasing the minimum salaries of rural teachers by two dollars weekly and H-221 increasing state support from $15 to $17 per pupil. Other gains noted by Commissioner Noble were recent changes in curricula, increased enrollment in teacher training institutions in Vermont, use of visual education aids, introduction of courses in mental hygiene, and advances in professional relationships.

The meeting was opened by an address of welcome by Dean Hills of the U. V. M. College of Agriculture, followed by a musical program in which Professor Millikan, accompanied by Elizabeth Cole '41, of U. V. M. sang.

The remainder of the convention was devoted to separate conferences of high school and elementary school teachers, and to round-table conferences on curricular subjects.

Many members of U. V. M.'s faculty were prominent at the convention and in conferences.

Professor Youngert was on the nominating committee for the Champlain Valley Teachers' Association and Prof. Sara Holbrook was chosen to serve on the executive committee of that organization.

At the secondary school conference Prof. George P. Burns was chairman of the symposium discussing "Improvement of Instruction in Vermont High Schools." Prof. Howard Prentice led the discussion on physical education.

Dean Mary Jean Simpson was chairman of the joint meeting of the secondary

Youth Congress to Sponsor Harvard Conference Mar. 29

Student Delegates to Launch Crusade for Freedom of Education

A call for a National Conference for Democracy in Education to be held at Harvard University on March 29 and 30, was issued this week by seventy-five leaders of the Student Christian Movement, presidents of student councils, college newspaper editors and educators.

Asserting that "a wave of the 1917 variety of intolerance is being fostered on the campus," the students and faculty members say "once again we must crusade for free education as the pioneers of scholarship have done whenever education was threatened."

As sponsors of the Harvard Conference they call upon students to defend "the right to the free search after truth; the right to free criticism, untramelled opinion, access to any and every book—and above all, student self-government and student organization; the principle of more and more educational opportunity for everyone regardless of race, color, creed or pocketbook; and a campus that is free from intolerance.

The sponsors propose that the Harvard Conference discuss "The Bill of Rights on the Campus," "How Free Is the Campus Press," "Notebooks and Pocketbooks" and "Students in Uniform."

The conference, which was called at the suggestion of the American Youth Congress, includes among its sponsors: Alice Stevens, co-president, National Intercollegiate Christian Council; Janet Skner, president, Middle Atlantic Region, National Student Federation of America; Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, president, Hampton Institute; Fred Riggs, president, Greater Boston Student Christian Council; Dr. Thomas Addis, Stanford University School of Medicine; Dr. A. J. Carlson, University of Chicago; Richard Bancroft, chairman, American Student Union; Leonard Detwieler, former president, National Intercollegiate Christian Council; Charlotte Feldman, editor, Vassar Miscellany News; Dr. F. O. Matheissen, Harvard University; Walter D. Wagoner, president, Dwight Hall Christian Association, Yale University; Bella Savitsky, president, Student Council, Hunter College; and Maybelle Hardie, secretary, Randolph-Macon College.

All national student organizations are being asked to send three delegates each, while regional organizations and student councils may each send two delegates. Any campus club, newspaper or magazine board may send one delegate.

Episcopal Church Sponsors Communions

St. Paul's Episcopal Church is sponsoring a series of Lenten Corporate Communions for students and faculty of the University of Vermont. These services are held each Friday morning at the Parish Chapel, St. Paul Street and Bank Street, at 7.15 a.m. Following the service, breakfast is served in the parish hall. To offset the problems of distance and early classes, transportation is being provided to take the students and faculty to the service and return in time for 8.30 classes. Cars leave Redstone gate, the Medical Building, corner of Willard and Pearl, and the corner of Willard and Main at 7.05. All Episcopalians are urged to come.

"Judas Maccabaeus" to be Presented Next Sunday

Prof. Howard Bennett to Direct The Complete Music Department

This year the music department is presenting the famous oratorio by Handel, "Judas Maccabaeus." It will be given next Sunday afternoon in the Ira Allen Chapel under the direction of Prof. Howard Bennett. Miss Miriam Natilee Marston will be organist and Mr. Michael Anselmo concertmaster.

A chorus of over eighty voices made up of the choir augmented by members of the glee clubs, other students, faculty and interested persons of Burlington and vicinity has held weekly rehearsals since the first week of November.

High School Chorus

One of the features of the concert will be a chorus of approximately forty boys and girls of the Burlington Junior High School under the direction of Miss Kathryn Heinrich, supervisor of music in the Burlington public schools. They will assist the adult chorus in the singing of the chorus, "See, the Conquering Hero Comes," and will sing the chorus, "Oh, Lovely Peace," alone.

The lead part of "Judas Maccabaeus" will be sung by Paul Poulin '41, who did such an excellent piece of work last year in Brahms' "Requiem." Mr. Poulin is a graduate of Beaman Academy and has sung in operas, Christmas and Lenten-Easter concerts.

One of the outstanding soprano soloists will be Miss Eleanor Lewis of St. Albans, graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, who is doing special work here this year.

Other Soloists

There will be three other soprano soloists: Theresa Coderre '43, a graduate of Richford High School; Earlene Jenness '43, a graduate of Barton Academy, a student in the elementary education curriculum; and A. Elizabeth Cole '41, a graduate of Spaulding High School, who was one of the soloists in last year's Christmas concert.

The contralto soloist will be Marjorie Southworth '43, a graduate of Whitcomb High School, who has sung in previous concerts at the University.

Thomas Malone, Jr., '41, well known to Vermont students, will sing the other tenor solos. A graduate of Cathedral High School, he has taken solo parts in operas and other concerts during his four years.

Singing the part of Simon will be Robert Goss '44, a graduate of Hartford High School. He has a fine baritone voice which will be heard to good advantage in his solos. Orrin Brawn '42, a graduate of Deering High School (Portland, Me.), who sang here in Handel's "Samson" and other concerts; and Keith Calkins '44, a graduate of Barton Academy, will sing the other baritone solos.

All the soloists except Miss Jenness are enrolled in the music education curriculum.

The soloists are being coached by Mme Bradish of the music faculty.

Local Girls Take Part In Army Dance

Dean Simpson, Colonel Wood Lead Grand March

What? You haven't heard about the dance for the soldiers at which some of the college girls hostessed? You mean the college boys didn't inform you of this outrage? Well, anyway, it was a very successful affair and we are sure everyone had a very good time. Each girl was in an alphabetical section containing about twenty girls, and the soldiers, also in sections, progressed in their specified groups about the hall, thus dancing with different girls each time. After the first two dances the girls were allowed to cut in, making it impossible for any girl to dance with a boy more than once unless she wished to do so.

At the very beginning of the dance the band from the Fort added to the evening's entertainment by playing several selections, and immediately following their super-swing band took over. We really mean took over, as it was the best band we have heard in a long time.

Dean Simpson and Colonel Wood led the grand march and they, as well as all the other people who helped to put this dance over and make it a success, deserve a rousing vote of congratulations for all the time and effort spent on it. Because this dance was such a great success there will be more of the same type in the near future, at which there will be more soldiers than at the one held Saturday. It seems that some of the soldiers of the first battalion didn't come because they felt that the college girls would just be out "slumming" or coming as if it were their "duty" and not because they wanted to.

Kappa Sigs and T E P's Hold Spring Dances

The Kappa Sig spring formal was held Friday night at the house to the strains of Red Dower's orchestra. John Costello '42 was in charge. Mr. and Mrs. Holden B. Bickford and Lieut. Carl H. Schofield were chaperones. Decorations carried out a St. Patrick's Day theme.

The T E P vic dance was informal. Sumner Firestone '41 was in charge. Chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. H. Levine. Mr. Levine wore under one lapel a sign which was found to read "Glad you had a good time." Later he revealed a sign under his other lapel reading "There will be a quiz tomorrow."

Newman Club to Meet

Father Michael will continue his series of talks on the "Liturgy of the Mass" tonight at Southwick at 7.30.

I. R. C. Will Discuss Lease-Lend Bill Wed.

"The Lease-Lend Bill—Peace or War?"—this is the topic for discussion at the I. R. C. meeting to be held Wednesday, March 19, at 7.30 p.m. at Southwick. There will be two lead speakers who will state their arguments, and afterwards student discussion will be welcomed. Maywood Metcalf '41 is one of the lead speakers. She will uphold her belief that the Lease-Lend Bill will lead to peace. Harold Durfee '41, the second lead speaker, will uphold his theory that the Lease-Lend Bill will lead to war. What do you think about this question of paramount interest? Come and state your opinion. All members are especially urged to be present.

Tempest in a Teapot

Now that the heavy shooting is over and the smoke of battle is beginning to clear, we see that the great military party controversy was somewhat picayunish and featured a great deal of uninformed commentary. According to latest reports the girls managed to survive despite the fact that the soldiers picked for the dance were not a very select group. Most of those girls who did not have a good time will naturally not want to go again and that should make them available for "home consumption." Provided that no attempt is made to force girls to attend from here on, matters will probably adjust themselves so that very few will be attending the dances in the future. If there are any girls who enjoyed the dances not even the best efforts of our columnists can keep them at home. And it would be foolish to hope that every girl on campus should look at nothing but college males just as it would be foolish to expect every loyal college man to stick within the confines of U. V. M. and not give other girls the slightest attention. Besides let's give U. V. M. co-eds a little bit of credit—certainly they are not all going to swoon with rapture at the sight of a uniform and refuse to recognize civilians, as some people seem to fear they will. Had they as little sense as that, they wouldn't be fit company for the "upper crust" anyhow.

Naturally we realize the fact that any plan of this type inevitably carries a bad odor. It is obviously an attempt at mass entertainment for a group living under different conditions from those to which they are accustomed. The whole idea, ideal as its originators may be, is somewhat unnatural and both the soldiers and the girls are sure to feel somewhat disappointed and uncomfortable as a result. But the question is—what are you going to do with all these new soldiers? Drafted and transported to districts utterly unfamiliar to them, the great majority find themselves avoided by civilians and cut off from normal human companionship. In many places they are shut out of amusement centers because they might be a source of disorder. Yet there were a lot of Americans who wanted a draft. There were a lot of Americans who nobly said—"We must make sacrifices to keep totalitarianism from our shores." Well you've got your conscripted army now, America, and you can't lump it you've got to like it.

Don't fool yourself—an army never was a source of high moral ideals, culture or refinement. Any army—even a democratic army—is after only one thing—to teach men the art of warfare. Any army is out to mould men into a pattern and to herd them together for concerted effort which sets the individual at a minimum. Such aims and such conditions as those army life demand are naturally bound to result in repression and repression usually makes people somewhat abnormal. The army builds you up—by breaking you down.

Today in this country we feel we need an army—a large one. But let us not kid ourselves that it is any less a problem because it is an "army for the defense of democracy." All those soldiers will have to be treated like human beings—you just can't shut them up in camps and let them play ping pong with "the boys." No—from here on the civilians are going to have to put up with the military and they're going to have to treat them as equals. We asked for it.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

"Honor to Hunting's Harem, Noble Six Hundred."

Well, well, well, Roger B. Hunting is sorely vexed. Six hundred girls have voluntarily passed him up to go to a dance. To dance with soldiers, no less. And not with R. B. Hunting.

Six hundred girls left the shelter of Mr. Hunting's Harem to risk their virtue with other men, men who are not the equals of the "average junior or senior sorority girl," men who are less than men—mere soldiers—crude and uncultured.

"Into the mouth of Hell Rode the Six Hundred."

When they could just as well have gone to the Sugar House with Roger Hunting.

And now Mr. Hunting is worried about competition in his harem. Certainly Roger Hunting, the equal of the "average junior or senior sorority girl," need fear no rivals in average National Guardsmen, or even selected draftees. Or is it the allure of the uniform he fears? Surely he can take his R. O. T. C. uniform out of mothballs and allure with the best of them.

Dean Simpson has done a very good job in assisting Mr. Hunting in caring for co-eds in the past, and I feel pretty certain that we can rest assured that Vermont co-eds will always remain willing to submit to Roger Hunting's "home consumption."

"Back from the mouth of Hell,
All that was left of them,

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

At the suggestion of the Boulder Society the University Council at a recent meeting considered scholastic requirements for admission to the men's honorary societies. Up to the present the only requirement has been that of not being under warning.

After considerable discussion regarding the exact standards to be set the following was voted by the University Council:

For admission to the Boulder Society the scholastic requirement shall be an average of a least 75 percent for the preceding three semesters, that is, for the sophomore year and the first semester of the junior year.

For admission to Key and Serpent Society the scholastic requirement shall be an average of at least 70 percent for the preceding semester, that is, the first semester of the sophomore year, and also the student must not be under warning.

For admission to the Gold Key Society the student must not be under warning.

The University Council appreciated very much Boulder's interest in the matter and believed its suggestion of setting scholastic standards was wise and timely.

Yours very truly,
E. SWIFT, Secretary.

To Whomsoever It May Concern:

The views expressed below are those of certain of my friends and myself; I believe they are also those of most of the male student body.

In free and open competition we are willing to take our chances with the boys in uniform. If we cannot hold our women, that's our tough luck and a credit to the soldiers, and it will be up to us to find other girls elsewhere. Please note that we said "free and open" competition; we come to college for an education and have to study during the week, that leaves us Saturday as our night out. We were very interested to read in the Free Press that another of these lovely dances were to be held next Saturday. All we ask is that the girls be allowed to decide for themselves whether or not they will attend; let's not force or recruit unwilling girls to go against their will. Let's not have any more of this "your patriotic duty," "sacrifices of British women," "for the democratic cause."

We do not relish a repetition of the sororities requiring their members to attend the ball. As we understand it one pretty and popular girl (who goes rather regularly with an equally popular boy) declined in writing the invitation to attend the dance, at which she received a telephone call asking what the idea was, and reminding her of her "patriotic duty." Frankly, we believe that college girls are old enough to decide things for themselves including what constitutes their duty. Henceforth let's allow girls without dates to sign up if they wish, but let's not have any more pressure brought to bear to make them do so. J. M. EVANS '41.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Although the battle over "to dance or not to dance" is distinctly not my fight, I cannot help feeling that someone should seize this opportunity to hurl a brickbat at your columnist, Mr. Hunting, for the snobbish attitude exhibited in his Friday column—an attitude which seems to be only too common among college men and women of my generation.

To deal first with the immediate question of the dance, I venture to suggest that some of Mr. Hunting's points cancel each other. For example, he asserts in the third paragraph of his article that the men from the Post are not the moral equals of our college girls, but confesses in the next paragraph that he, a typical college man, we assume, would revert to the same barbarous state under the same conditions. Thus he disposes of his own implied argument that only college men are on a high enough moral plane to go out with college girls.

I do think that Mr. Hunting makes a point with his suggestion that army men may not appreciate the spirit of condescension which may possibly motivate some of the organizers of the dance. This very statement, however, implies a certain amount of intelligence on the part of the soldiers; and Mr. Hunting does not seem to realize that the Lady Bountiful spirit which he so justly attacks is only a different manifestation of his own snobbery. One wonders whether he will enjoy finding this same attitude directed against him in case he in his turn is absorbed into the army. One also wonders whether his naive assumption that the majority of soldiers are morons is to be considered a true sample of the scientific, tolerant and liberal attitude which we are told a college education imparts.

An impression seems to have grown up among college people that after a few years at college, no matter how spent, they are in a class by themselves, a cut above the rest of the crowd. I shall never forget the surprise with which one of my friends announced her discovery that a mere high school graduate read good books and had intellectual interests on a level with her own. Perhaps hers was an extreme case, but it appears to be typical of a general impression that non-college people are incapable of appreciating The Higher Things of Life, an impression which my own experience has shown to be rather remote from fact. Surely our education has failed of its purpose if it has not made us able to recognize and respect symptoms of intelligence wherever found. Even an elementary course in psychology teaches us that there are several kinds of intelligence, all equally valuable; and I do not believe that we should consider it too great a surprise when we discover our intellectual equals among non-college people.

If this intellectually holier-than-thou attitude is truly representative of the spirit in American colleges, it does not speak well for the future of democracy. It seems to me that it is time for us to ask ourselves what justification we have for asserting our superiority and what we are doing to fulfill the obligations imposed upon us by the extra benefits we have received. An honest self-examination would be good for us all; and there is hope that it might teach us that humility which is one of the first marks of an educated person.

Very truly yours,
CONSTANCE KNIGHT '38.

To the Editor of "Brickbats and Bouquets":

You will probably be insulted when you find out that a non-fraternity man, perhaps a person who, in spite of the fact that he is a member of the senior class, is not on your high and mighty social plane, which seems to be reserved for "sorority girls" and men of selected fraternities.

It might interest you to know, Mr. Hunting, that we are trying to maintain a faltering democracy, and the creation or maintenance of such a vicious class consciousness as you so boldly present is conducive to anything but the true democracy which we are upholding against Europe's "isms."

Your first argument is how will the soldiers be selected? There's one thing you may be sure of, and that is that they'll all be American citizens, and that's enough. They may not be college graduates, or have the social polish which you may have, but I'm sure that they intend no harm, nor are they a menace to society. I am also certain that our fair co-eds will have the opportunity to refuse to dance with any soldier that she wishes. Our girls are supposed to have average or above average intelligence and I'm sure they can take care of themselves. This is 1941 and the women no longer need your strong arm for protection.

Now to look at the point of view of the soldier. Is he compelled to go to this dance? I doubt it. It will most likely be a voluntary matter. Did it ever enter your mind that some of these soldiers may be nice, and that some of our girls would be willing to accept future dates? Or is it possible that this is what is bothering you, that the girls may like the soldiers and your little monopoly of the co-eds will be smashed? A little competition may be good for the men of Vermont who just take the co-eds for granted. These men stir up a fuss every time they get outside dates. It is all right for the men to import dates for big dances, but for one of our co-eds to be imported to another campus—tut, tut—the boys don't like it.

It grieves me to think, Mr. Hunting, that all the training and care that has been expended on you to make you a moral person is all to be thrown to the winds as soon as you become a member of the army. Well, that's too bad, but don't set yourself up as an example for the rest of our American youth. I have much more faith in them than you appear to have.

Mr. Hunting, in my opinion your column is undemocratic, does not represent the opinion of the majority of the students, and is of such a nature that it would give the impression that we here at Vermont are selfish, and, what is still worse, a bunch of snobs!!

Many Professors Carry on Research

Work Goes on Behind the Scenes

With their lecture engagements, hour tests to correct, and those tricky questions to think up, you wouldn't think our professors would have time for much more than the newspaper and a pipe, would you? Yet you will find that most of your professors are conducting research in their respective fields. Instead of movies (which Professor Doane attends once a year) or dances (where most of the professors don't dance) they spend their unoccupied time in libraries or laboratories, investigating history or solving physics problems.

The economics department is working on many lines of research. Professor Groat is studying the "Judicial-Economic Development of Collective Bargaining in Industry." Professor Nulty is working on "Business Education in the Small High School," while Professor Woodard is considering "Town Proprietorship in Vermont."

Works for Degree

In the French Department we find Professor Doane has completed his thesis for a Doctor's degree, entitled "The Influences of Biological Sciences on French Literature." He has spent four years in its preparation, including one full year at the Sorbonne in Paris. To receive the Doctor's degree at the Sorbonne you must pass first a stiff written examination on your thesis and then submit to three hours of cross-examination in French by four or five members of the board of examiners. Professor Doane has passed the written examination, but since it is impossible to get a passport or even communication with occupied France, the oral examination is hanging fire—likewise the Doctor's degree.

Physics Department

To see Professor Holmes of the physics department I descended cautiously the basement stairs in the Williams Science Hall. From behind closed laboratory doors came weird buzzings and sounds like a dentist's drill when it is hurting you worst, and the odor of chlorine came drifting from chemistry laboratories as I wandered around, wondering where the south physics laboratory was. I asked a very tall, would-be scientist where, among all this, Professor Holmes could be found. He grinned and led me into the very room where the weird sounds were being made—the results of experiments with vacuum tubes and electric current, I think they told me. There sat Professor Holmes in the midst of wires, batteries and strange working equipment.

"Come with me," he invited, and took me into a smaller lab. Here he pulled out an armchair for me, and seated himself in a straight chair. Putting his feet up on a desk, he began to ask teasing questions while he lit his pipe. Then, becoming serious, Professor Holmes explained patiently some of the research that members of his department are carrying on.

Scientific Research

This is what he told me: "Mr. N. L. Walbridge is studying x-ray, by measuring small amounts of energy in x-ray beams and finding the relation between energy and the amount of electrical conductivity which it imparts to a gas. Energy in x-ray beam is allowed to fall on a very thin disc of silver. During the course of a few minutes the silver disc is warmed, perhaps a few hundredths of a degree Fahrenheit. Change in temperature of the disc is measured by a thermocouple. The thermocouple deflects a sensitive galvanometer; the spot of light from this galvanometer falling on a moving photographic film, leaves a record of the rise of temperature. The increase in the electrical conductivity of a gas receiving this same x-ray beam is subsequently measured, and a relation between the two effects is experimentally determined."

Professor Holmes gave me a lift in spelling the long words, and asked what I was grinning about when he launched into this technical dissertation: "Mr. H. W. Allen is making a study of the conduction of electricity through pure neon gas. He is taking photographs of the spectrum obtained from the tube containing the gas, and determining the voltage at various places between the two electrodes. The purpose of this work is to obtain measurements for use in the formulation of a more complete theory describing the phenomena of the conduction of electricity through a gas.

"For several years Professor Holmes" (he grinned when he said this) "has been making investigations of the electrical properties of single crystals of silenium. Various subdivisions of the problem have been selected as the subject for the thesis done by graduate students in the department of physics. At the present time Mr. C. L. Evans, a graduate student in physics, is studying the effect of temperature on the increase in electrical conductivity of a silenium crystal during the time immediately following the exposure of the crystal to light. The light falling upon the crystal causes about a three-fold increase in conductivity. The small voltage-drop across the crystal is amplified by a vacuum tube system, the output of which deflects a high-frequency galvanometer. Light from the galvanometer mirror leaves a trace on a moving photographic film and furnishes a measurement of electrical conductivity at intervals of time as short as one-hundredth of a second."

Taking a deep breath, I scribbled the last few words and sighed.

"Well, are you going to take physics next year?" asked Professor Holmes.

"I'm not sure," I answered, "but I don't think I'll ever be taking physics. It's been very kind of you to explain this for me, but I don't believe I could even pass the first hour exam."

Leaving the scientists to continue their research, I climbed the stairs and came out into the welcome sunlight.

Prof. Myrick Officiates At Educational Meeting

Prof. A. B. Myrick, who is head of the romance languages, officiated at the educational meeting held at Burlington High School on Friday, March 14. At this spring convention of the teachers of the junior and high schools of Burlington there were several round-table groups which discussed various problems and methods of instruction. Professor Myrick was also chairman of the modern language group. Prof. W. E. Aiken, assistant professor of English, was chairman of the English group.

The Latin group had as its chairman Prof. J. E. Pooley, professor of classical languages and history. There was a lecture by Prof. J. V. Kidder, associate professor of classical languages, entitled "Classical Proper Names in English," "Some Virgil Pictures" by Prof. L. M. Prindle, professor of Latin at the University, and "Teaching Devices" by Marjorie Perrin of Burlington High School.

Rev. Ralph R. Shrader of Montpelier will speak in chapel Wednesday morning.

Book Store to Sell Out Supplies At Reduced Prices

Anyone who reads the papers and listens to the radio must realize the seriousness of the age in which we are living. At no time in life do people have the high idealism and ambition to accomplish as much as when they are serious students of a mature university. In order to attain your ambitions it is necessary to have as good material equipment as is economically possible. This is where at the present time the University Stores can help.

In establishing our departmental supplies department we have purchased requisitioned items which have been later changed to more standard lines. We therefore have many of these first purchases left in small quantities which we wish to sell at greatly reduced prices. These are articles that are absolute necessities in a well-equipped office and after once being adopted by students will also become essentials to good work.

To enumerate some of these let us consider inks. We have carried fifteen-cent Waterman's and Carter's inks because we felt that customers got more for their money in these sizes. We now find that departments prefer to buy pints or quarts of this ink and students prefer the ten-cent size bottles. We have, therefore, marked down the fifteen-cent bottles to a low price of eleven cents, nearly twice as much ink for one cent more. The Carter's inks come in all colors as long as our supply lasts, the Waterman's in the good old standard blue-black.

In a similar fashion we have reduced the prices on gummed labels, index tabs, clip boards, rubber cement, mucilage, gummed tape, kraft envelopes, typing papers in ream packages, maps, pencils, and erasers, and a host of other such merchandise. On these close-outs the price will remain at the bargain rate until the merchandise is completely sold out, but remember the supplies are limited.

DON'T FORGET—Cynic Radio program tonight.

Tribune Praises Research Work of Prof. J. I. Lindsay

By Lester Frank '44

A rare collection of books recently unearthed in the Billings Library by Prof. Julian I. Lindsay in connection with his research on the history of the University of Vermont was made the subject of an article by Lawrence C. Wroth under his Notes for Bibliophiles in the Sunday, March 9, book section of the New York Herald-Tribune. The story by Mr. Wroth originated from an article by Professor Lindsay in the Dolphin, No. 4, Part II entitled "Treasure in Vermont." This magazine may now be found either in the Billings Library or University publicity office.

Found in the tower room of the library unnoticed and uncatalogued for forty years, the books date as far back as 1570 and were a gift of Benjamin Franklin Stevens, a U. V. M. graduate and one-time partner of the Chiswick Press in London. Most of the 3,000 volumes in the collection are from the libraries of the Charles Wittinghams, uncle and nephew, who were at one time owners of the Chiswick Press and avid book collectors. Part of the books consist of those published by the Wittinghams themselves while others have been collected by them as examples, in their opinion, of typographical excellence.

Some of the books of the collection mentioned in the Herald-Tribune are Plantin's Ortelius, John Daye's Euclid, a Dissertation Upon English Typographical Founders and Foundaries by Edward Mores, Character and Grants of the Company of Stationers of the City of London, and A Specimen of the Several Sorts of Letters Given to the University by Dr. John Fell (Oxford).

Mr. Wroth praises Professor Lindsay for his work in bringing these books to light by saying: "One is grateful to Professor Lindsay for sharing with us the fine excitement of his discovery and for his careful study of a collection which gives the University of Vermont Library special interest to amateurs of the history and tradition of the press."

Prof. Martin at N. J. Conference

Prof. W. Professor Martin is making two appearances at the conference, which is meeting at the Upper Freehold Township High School in Allentown, N. J.

"How Can Young Farmer Classes Function Under Present Conditions?" was the topic examined at a forum discussion led by Professor Martin during last Friday evening's session.

At a breakfast for vocational agriculture teachers, Professor Martin, with Mr. H. O. Sampson, New Jersey state supervisor of agricultural education, led another discussion which dealt with "The Function of Young Farmer Classes."

Professor Martin has set up in Vermont classes in many towns under the prodefense training movement, financed by the federal government, and has just put in operation training for more than 500 Vermont rural youths, in mechanics, carpentry, metal work, and elementary electricity.

Sea Horses Downed By Bristol In N. E. Tourney

Second Half Offensive by Future Champs Smothers Vermont Entry

The scrappy spirit of the Burlington High Sea-horses, which won a state championship for the Blue Boys, was not enough to cope with the tremendous size advantage that the Bristol boys held over them in the opening round of the New England Basketball Tournament. Bristol scored 29 points, while its tight zone defense held the Vermonters to 16.

Bristol started off with an early lead in the opening period, never once allowing the Old Edmunds' boys to threaten their lead. Paul Lowicki of the Nutmeg State opened the game by scoring on a long heave, while Joe Lynch netted a foul before Billy Simpson of B. H. S. dropped in the first Vermont score. Lynch's foul shots and twin counters by Herb Sonstroem and Johnny Utke gave the Bristol boys a 10 to 7 lead at the end of the first frame. Besides Simpson's two-pointer, a foul heave by Pat Huntington and two free throws and a goal by Bob Stafford gave the Blue its 7 point total.

In the second period, neither team could make good from the floor, and the scoring was limited to foul tallies by Poko Larivee, Stafford's replacement at center. A step shot by sky-scraping Goop Zebrowski and his charity toss were the total of Bristol's point-getting in the second quarter, leaving the Nutmeggers out in front 13-9.

The Connecticut team opened up in the third period, using its additional height to good advantage, and raced away from the Blue Boys by tossing in 14 points, while holding Burlington to a sole tally, a long heave by Dick Clairmont, thus practically assuring themselves of another victory to add to the 23 out of 24 scalps which hang from their belts.

In the final round B. H. S. outscored Bristol, but the game had been put on ice in the first period by the Nutmeggers. Huntington and Simpson dropped in two-pointers, Simpson netted a foul shot, contenting Bristol with free throws by Utke and Lynch.

The Sea-horses completely outfought their opponents, but could not make up for the tremendous handicap of size. Zebrowski, Utke, and Sonstroem were all over the six-foot mark, While Lowicki and Lynch were taller than any of the Blue Boy squad.

The Bristol zone defense deserves much credit, being the toughest ever encountered by the B. H. S. team. Pat Huntington, dynamic spark plug of the Blue, was bottled up most of the time, and only through extreme effort could he get shots off and keep the Vermont attack rolling.

Sigma Nu, Phi Delts Favored in Relays

Among the events taking place at the annual intramural indoor track meet is the three-quarter mile relay. This is the feature attraction of the meet and is always hotly contested.

Last year all of the fraternities and the Independents entered the preliminaries. The Sigma Nu, Independents, S A E and Delta Psi teams reached the semi-finals, in which the Sigma Nus defeated the Independents and the Delts took the S A E's. The final match was really tops. The Sigma Nu team, composed of Fleming, Smith, West and Stowell, whipped the Delts and established a new record of 2:52.5. In the avoirdupois (fat men's) relay the Sigma Nus defeated the Delta Psi team once more.

This year, competition will be extremely fast and the record set last March by the Sigma Nus will be threatened.

At present the entering teams are working daily, with the Sigma Nu and Phi Delt squads looking very formidable. It is still very early to make any predictions on the outcome of this three-quarter mile event, but it is a sure thing that the boys will put on a great exhibition of real running.

Woodstock Retains School Ski Title

Woodstock High School annexed another Vermont Interscholastic championship by coming from behind in the slalom and jumping to surge out in front of Northfield. Woodstock's total score in the four events was 370.81 while Northfield amassed 367.77 points to place second and Brattleboro 362.51 for third place honors.

Woodstock was led to its victory by John McNanama, an all-around skiing ace, who captured the individual combined crown with a score of 378 points. Notable among his feats was a 100-foot jump, the longest of the day.

Lyndon Institute took fourth place honors with 356.80 points, then Spaulding with 354.01, followed by Stowe, Springfield, Rutland, St. Johnsbury, Newport, and Bellows Falls finishing in that order.

Saturday evening the 130 competitors, coaches, and officials attended a dinner in the Community Church, at which time the trophies were awarded. Noteworthy of the awards given were the Vermont Headmasters' plaque and the Vermont Transit cup to Woodstock and the Headmasters' trophy to the runner-up, Northfield; the University of Vermont cup to Woodstock for downhill; the Norwich University cup for cross-country to Lyndon Institute; the B. F. Moore cup for slalom to Northfield; and the Middlebury College cup for jumping to Brattleboro.

Final team score:

1. Woodstock 370.81
2. Northfield 367.77
3. Brattleboro 362.51
4. Lyndon Institute 356.80
5. Spaulding 354.01
6. Stowe 345.21
7. Springfield 342.80
8. Rutland 332.99
9. St. Johnsbury 332.50
10. Newport 315.45
11. Bellows Falls 279.78

Columbus, Ohio (ACP).—When the new president of South Dakota State College reaches Brookings with his family they probably will have a trailer with them.

For Dr. Lyman E. Jackson, now junior dean of Ohio State University's college of agriculture and president-elect of South Dakota State, hopes presidential dignity won't make it necessary for them to give up the trailer trips they have enjoyed in recent years.

The Jacksons—father, mother and two children—have been in the habit of slipping off with their trailer for week-ends of boating and fishing.

Frosh Batterymen Answer Fuzzy's Call

Six Pitchers and Two Catchers Comprise Draft

With approximately forty-four days to go for the season opener against the Sea Horses of Burlington High, Fuzzy Evans' twirlers are well under way in their pre-season limber-ups and control practices.

Thus far only the Frosh batteries have been called owing to the lack of practice space. But the batteries, with their limited space, seem to show great improvement in the moments of training that they sneak in three times per week at the cage when the Varsity men aren't looking. Fuzzy Evans assured the press that immediately after the spring vacation when the cage will be completely at his disposal, he will make the call for volunteers to complete the Frosh baseball roster.

In the last practice six hurlers, two of whom are southpaws, went through light form and control exercises. Most of the pitchers have had baseball experience in one capacity or another. Bill Bister pitched for Jericho High (Vt.), Ed Craige annexed quite a few baseball honors as hurler at Spaulding, Steadman Huard, flashy southpaw, flipped the ball for Winooski; Carl Urie, idol of Craftsbury High, completes the list of veterans. Stan Kemler and Stan Fieber, despite inexperience, are coming along very nicely. Fuzzy Evans is expecting to induct Doug Riddell and Lloyd Hazen into pitching service real soon.

The catchers number two lonely souls Dick Desso stopped 'em for old Essex High; Joe Margulis will be a serious contender for the regular back-stop berth, scholastic circumstances permitting.

Coach Post Sees Good Track Season

As the 1941 track season rolls around, Coach Archie Post looks forward to another successful year. However, eight old reliables will be lost by graduation this June.

Capt. Bob Kenney, letterman and hurdle specialist, will be missed greatly. In spite of illness last season Bob has worked hard and deserves much credit for his past performance on the University of Vermont track team.

Bill Pratt, who specializes in the pole vault event, has been working out since mid-years. He is expected to reach the twelve-foot mark, which would be a point-getting contribution to the team. Bill has been vaulting since his freshman year and his loss will be greatly felt.

In the weight department Walt Gage will wind up his successful three-year track career at Vermont. Walt is heavier this year and has been trying hard to get into shape. Coach Post is really counting on him to produce very well this year, and there is no doubt that Walt will finish the season with points chalked up.

Frank Livak, in his fourth year of competition, has shown the team what determinimum can do. He participates in the mile and two-mile events and captained varsity track last year. Frankie will be lost to the squad by graduation this June, and may his pep and fire be passed on to the one who succeeds him.

The javelin throw is the sole occupation of Elmer Nichols. Elmer, who started his track career as a freshman, is a letterman. He copped New England intercollegiate honors last year, and with his loss Coach Post finds that he has left a mighty pair of shoes to be filled.

Arnold Becker, a high and broad jumper, will also leave this June. Arnie has been a consistent performer for the team and his loss will leave the high jump field wide open.

Mike Robey, a quarter miler and letterman, has great ability. He is now working out for the indoor meet and the team is counting on him to be a regular performer this season. Mike will be graduated this June and he is expected to wind up his career with a credible performance for Coach Archie Post this year.

Ed Eaton, a quarter miler and a first-year man, looks very formidable. Ed is expected to have a fine season and place well during his last year at Vermont.

Track has always been a favorite sport at Vermont. Under the careful tutelage of Coach Archie Post many great athletes have been produced.

New England High Champs

The Bell Town lads from Bristol, Conn., captured the New England Basketball title Saturday night sending the Bay Staters from Rindge Tech back home on the short end of a 23-16 score. The Bristol club brought Connecticut its tenth title (ninth consecutive), and also became the third Bristol quintet to ring the victory bell. Joe Lynch, lank Bristol pivot, was high scorer of the tournament with 40 points, but this total is not impressive when compared with the 80 points netted by a New Haven Commercial star a few years ago.

The best game of the tournament was the semi-final match between Windham of Connecticut and the champs. The Windy City boys held the only victory over the Bristol quintet. They stained what would have been a pure record of twenty-six straight games by their 25-24 defeat of Bristol in the Connecticut tournament. The Bristol five were out for revenge in the semi-final battle and they got it, 37-34. So for the second year in a row a Connecticut team which had successfully established its claim to the Connecticut title surrendered a prospective New England crown to the team which finished second best in the Connecticut standings. Queer things, these tournaments!

Strange to say the thing which attracted the most attention at the tourney was not a certain player, team, or game, but the indomitable spirit of the Nutmeg rooters. A crowd of 10,000 witnessed Bristol's ascendance to the throne, and a good share of these fans were migrants from Connecticut. Their unshakeable faith in their teams was remarkable. In the final match, at a time when Bristol trailed Rindge Tech by five points, a body of Nutmeggers arose with a large canvas which read, "Bristol, New England's Champs."

1941-42 Basketball Schedule Released

The new basketball schedule for next year as released by Coach Fuzzy Evans includes such teams as Hamilton, Dartmouth, Rochester, the State Circuit, Trinity, Williams, M. I. T., Tufts, and Springfield. The new schedule has been criticized in one of the local papers because it does not include enough big-name schools. However, it is of the same calibre as last year's schedule. Dartmouth remains, and Rochester, the team responsible for one of the four Big Green defeats of the past season, will replace Fordham. Tufts will replace Amherst and M. I. T. will double for Holy Cross. The team next year will be composed mostly of men lacking adequate varsity experience. The Big Five who wore the Green and Gold so creditably this year are all seniors and Fuzzy will have to build his squad next year around Captain White, Bob Dougherty and Milt Kaufman. It would be disheartening both to students and team to match these boys against opponents where they would be definitely outclassed.

Then there is the matter of spreading Vermont's name. It seems a pretty good idea to us to switch opponents who are not traditional rivals for the express purpose of spreading the name of U. V. M.

More Participants, Less Spectators

Next week will witness a winding up of the intramural indoor program for this school year, and we would like to impress the student body with the fact that they are indeed fortunate to have such a program here at Vermont. Intramural competition is open to any able-bodied male in attendance at this University. The events are varied; the choice is wide. It ranges from wrestling and handball to the hexathlon and the free throw championships, and if any group of fellows can't find anything to interest them in this varied program, why they can organize a Tiddly-Winks team and speak to Archie Post. He's very cooperative. There is no excuse for non-participation. Remember, Wellington won his Waterloo on the playing fields of Eaton!

Diamond Dust

Latest news from the Yankee dugout seems to indicate that Manager Joe McCarthy is presently consuming quite a few aspirins worrying about his pitching staff. Joe has plenty of rooky twirlers who may or may not materialize! On the veteran list is found Charlie Ruffing, who signed on the dotted line last Friday, and who, incidentally, led the pitching staff last year with fifteen wins and twelve losses. Lefty Gomez is back with a 3-3 record, Johnny Murphy, a 8-4 relief pitcher is back in uniform as is Spud Chandler with the none too impressive 1940 standing of 8-7.

Mickey Owen, Brooklyn Dodger's last holdout, finally came to terms with Dodger officials.

Ducky Medwick, of the Dodgers, ducked in time to avoid a bean ball pitch by Bob Bowman of the Giants in one of the pre-season combats.

Ducky seemed a bit more agile than on June 18 when the bean ball found its mark.

The Cardinals' striker list was reduced to four when Pitcher Clyde Shoun signed up. Still carrying More-Pay picket signs are First Baseman Johnny Mize, Catcher Don Padgett, Infielder Martin Marion, and Pitcher Hy Vandenberg.

Joe Gordon, Yankee infield veteran, will officially inherit the keystone position, vacated by Lou Gehrig and Babe Dahlgren, who was recently sold to the Bees.

Dahlgren, now with the Bees, made Manager Casey Stengel's eyes sparkle with glee by his spectacular performance at first base in an exhibition game this week.

The Campus Compass

By Saul Boyarsky '44 and Lester Frank '44

In view of the Cynic's policy of giving ress of its columns democratically to the dents of U. V. M., your inquiring reter accosted several men and women campus to ask them: "What do you ink of the dance being given for the en from the post with college and other ls as hostesses?"

L. L. Goldberg '44—Being a so-called ourgeois" and not a member of the mpus "400" society, I can readily see the vantages and benefits of such a getether. College men in my opinion are apt criteria of virtue and gentility, yway.

Mary Hoag '44—I think it is a good a and I'm going. The boys don't have ch chance for dancing and good times, d we ought to do all we can to help out.

Barbara Wilcomb '42—It's a very good a. I think they need entertainment and, ce we can't fight, well, we can do this help them.

Dot Emerson '41—It should be regarded a patriotic duty more than a social air, and it is just as important as the nting, etc., that the girls are doing, fact, more important, since it deals ectly with the people concerned in dese.

Dot McCormick '42—I think the point that most people don't realize that if y are good enough to fight for our untry, they are good enough to look er. This is one of the few opportunities ich the girls have to help in this dese program. They should be willing to ept the responsibility.

Priscilla Bennett '44—Grand idea. Com- from homes they were used to a rmal social life, they miss it here, and would be nice if we could help them . The affairs ought to be a success, don't see why not.

Hilda Lund '44—Good idea. There are me nice fellows among the bunch, and ought to help in giving them a good e.

Catherine Peterson '42—I think it is all ht. The fellows are here by themselves thout much social life, and it is our duty remedy that. The dance ought to rk out fine as long as they don't put m on too often.

Nancy Goodwin '42—I think it is a very od thing because the boys at the fort d some social life and this is the best y to provide it. It is very well orized, and the girls feel it is not only duty, but a pleasure to help entertain ys who are used to leading the same t of lives that we do.

Joan Harrison '44—I think it is a good a, and everyone I've talked it over with ms to think so also. Most of the girls k they should do their part as well everyone else by cooperating with the n and all the others who are putting on affairs.

Diantha Geer '44—It is a good idea. I k we should do something for them. the girls cooperate, there should be no ble in putting over these dances sucsfully.

Oliver F. Swift '43—I guess it is all ht, but it seems to be stirring up a fuss. sonally I don't mind.

George Goldsmith '44—You don't have e a genius to dance.

Claire Coffin '44—It is a good idea and proper since it is subscribed to by the her people.

Doris Brooks '44—I'm going, I think it be fun. But they are running it in army way, in sections, and every few kes you change sections.

1956 Document Discovered, Discloses Strange Life of Future Vermonters

You students wearily bent on your freezing way to school can now take heart. Regardless of the temperature, it's not so cold in Burlington. Proof is to be found in some fragments discovered under "the old pine tree" when it was cut down. These were written in a strange and unknown tongue and were buried under a rock now known as the Freezetta stone. When finally deciphered, they were found to be notes taken by an explorer from Broptnuk (now known as the land of everlasting cold) who was called Guk. The document was written in 1956 in the month Bakok, which apparently stands for our months from November to February, inclusive. The fragments are as follows:

"Bakok 16.

After sailing about in my Yuke for many moons, I came upon a strange land whose presence I at first noticed by a strange feeling which I find it hard to describe. This was characterized by a great dampness generating about my face and body and great drops of water which fell from my forehead. Such a feeling I had never before known but I found that to the strange persons of this place it was quite familiar.

Being in a much weakened state when I reached land I somehow managed to pull myself out of my Yuke, but as I started to walk my weakness overcame me and I dropped to the ground. There I lay for some time until I perceived some queer individuals approaching me. Their faces and skin were white, unlike our green ones, and they wore peculiar bushes of different colors on their heads. These were of all colors—red, brown, black, yellow and even white. Sometimes, as I saw later, they wore other coverings on top of these. Altogether they are a queer race, but very kind.

They helped me up and, seeing my condition, proceeded to pull off some of my clothing, all the time making strange clucking noises which I presume to be their language. The removal of clothing must be a religious ritual of theirs as I immediately felt better and regained my composure.

I was taken by two of the creatures to their dwelling, which is an odd box made of some material which is unknown to us. It has a long finger outside which points up and which smokes all the time. I took it to be their god as they are always very attentive to it and feed it at intervals by means of a mouth which is inside the box. When it is fed, its mouth becomes red and makes angry noises. At that time I feel the same sensation as when I first arrived at this place. Now I go outside the box when the ritual occurs.

Bakok 19.

I have now learned a few words of this tongue and have discovered that I gained entrance to this place by a body of water called "Lake Champlain," which is undoubtedly the largest such body in the world. Equipped with my new knowledge, I went exploring the region about my hosts' abode. As I had noticed the first day, there was some of the same substance around that is to be found in my country. However, it is of a minute quantity and no use is made of it. This material they call "snow" and the substance of which we build our homes, "ice." This is a queer and unpleasant tongue.

Bakok 20.

After further exploration I noticed what seemed to be great swellings in the earth. The huge rises were much higher than any being but it was shown to me that they could be climbed. I proceeded to do so and when I had reached the summit found the air much more like our atmosphere. By this time I wore nothing but my underbreeches as I had found this to be the most comfortable attire.

Bakok 22.

Today I found another of those boxes wherein these people dwell. From my small knowledge of their language I had discovered this to be called the "old mill," though what such may mean I do not know. Apparently it describes a place of cold temperature as I was here more comfortable than in any other place. However, it was not pleasant to remain in one place so long, so I said farewell to my kind host, and securing my discarded clothing against the time when I should again need it, set forth in my Yuke for Broptnuk, whence I had come."

Greek Courses Are Booming at Colgate

HAMILTON, N. Y.—(ACP)—Three years ago Colgate University's introductory course in Greek had only two students. This semester there's an overflow.

Accounting for the rebirth of interest are new teaching methods introduced in January 1939, by Dr. Stanley Wilcox, Cornell University graduate who came to Colgate after earning his doctorate at Yale.

"Anyone can learn a language," Doctor Wilcox declared in his preliminary announcement two years ago. To prove his statement he pointed out that all of Colgate's students had learned English. "Learning Greek will be just as easy and possibly a lot more fun," he continued.

In Doctor Wilcox's Greek 100 class, students start translating the first day, learn to know their verb and case endings by meeting them in class.

As a Cornell student ten years ago, Doctor Wilcox looked forward to becoming an advertising executive. Then, "because the teacher was known as a good guy," he enrolled in Greek. "I soon discovered that Greek was a lot more fun than advertising ever could be," he declares, "and here I am."

Dick Healy '41—I think it is a big joke and if I am ever drafted I hope they don't ever do something like that for me. When I go to a dance, I want to go to have a good time, and not because the girl is doing it as a patriotic gesture.

Bob Kenney '41—Every one of these men will be college men. It is a good idea. I'm going to be drafted next year.

John Royer '41—I feel if there will be a war we'll go too. So it is a girl's patriotic duty to go with us as well as with them. Besides I'd like to see what those girls' mothers would say. I got this from an officer: "Half of these guys haven't been through the sixth grade."

W. A. Pierce '43—I think it is a sporting gesture. The draftee is a regular American who has been called from his ordinary rôle to assist in the defense of his country. Being in the army shouldn't make him a social inferior.

Kappa Sigs Win in Hockey Playoffs

The Sigma Nu and Kappa Sigma hockey teams climaxed a highly successful interfraternity ice campaign by coming to grips in the championship tilt. Each combination had previously gone undefeated in its respective league, having won these three scheduled contests. In as an exciting a game as had been played during the short season, Kappa Sigma came from behind to triumph 2 to 1.

Both teams put on a brilliant performance, and before victory could be ascertained two five-minute overtime periods (the three regular periods being ten minutes each) and a "sudden death" were staged to determine the mythical champion.

The Sigma Nu outfit opened the scoring in the initial period when Boots Lawrence sent one of his mighty long shots crashing into the nets. The rest of the period was devoted to some fancy stick handling and skating by both sides.

Kappa Sig, undaunted, struck back in the second period when Edo Conedera tallied to even the count. This settled the scoring during the regular time, as neither side could do much in the third period.

It remained for Mickey Gilbert to produce the winning score after two five-minute overtimes were likewise scoreless. A long, difficult shot from the side of the rink was the clinching blow as the teams commenced the "sudden death."

Boots Lawrence, the two Reed brothers and Harry Parker were outstanding for the losers, while Whizzer White, Al Senuta, Mickey Gilbert and Edo Conedera contributed admirably for the victors.

Women in Sports

Swimming

The splash party held at the Burlington Community Y last Friday night March 7, was a huge success. The group was of just the right size to make the relays and games very enjoyable. Virginia Amidon '42, manager of the Swimming Club, had many novel ideas inside her cap, some of which were a candle race, butterfly race, cork race, a ping-pong and submarine relay, and a game of water croquet. In all these games there was Green and Gold competition, and the Greens emerged from the pool victorious with a score of 92 over the Golds' 40.

Badminton

The Badminton Club will again entertain the men, and several mixed matches will be played. Everyone out!

Basketball

Green and Gold basketball competition will soon be in progress. The first and second team games will be played on March 25. To be eligible for a team a girl must attend at least two out of the three practices. Attendance at these practices will count toward Basketball Club membership, and honorary varsity teams will be chosen from those girls attending both practices and matches.

Janet Dike, captain of the Gold team, announces the following practice periods: March 11, 4.15; March 18, 4.15; March 20, 4.50.

Phyllis Savage, captain of the Green team, will have practice matches on the following afternoons: March 13, 4.15; March 18, 4.50; March 20, 4.15.

This afternoon at 4.50 Allen House will play Sanders Hall at the gym.

Recreational Leadership

Last week Miss Annis Baldwin, dancing teacher of Burlington, instructed the members of the recreational leadership and elementary education classes in social dance mixers, which will be very helpful in teaching and in recreational work.

Tennis

The tennis coaches' class held their first meeting last week with ten girls present. The next meeting will be on March 24.

Skiing

All girls who are taking recreational skiing are urged to attend classes while the snow is good, and make up the classes which had to be postponed because of lack of snow.

Old 1804 Receipt Dates From Creation

More than one hundred and thirty-five years have passed since Azarias Williams carefully filed away a receipt for five dollars which he had just received from Paul Brigham. These hundred and thirty-five years are not covered by the receipt, which was dated October 24, 1804, but all the years from the creation to that date were.

This most inclusive of receipts was found among the five thousand miscellaneous documents containing information regarding the lands owned by the University of Vermont which have been collected and arranged by workers in the National Youth Administration at the University, under direction of Prof. Arthur D. Butterfield of the engineering college, head of the NYA here.

The receipt reads like this:

"Received at Montpelier October 24, 1804 of Azarias Williams, Five Dollars in full of all demands in note, Board Bill, work or on account of every name and nature whatsoever from the beginning of the world to the above date.

Rec'd. by me
Paul Brigham"

This receipt seems to have covered all possible contingencies up to its date, not leaving Paul Brigham any basis for further collections of any description.

Frank Taylor Wins Bowling Title

E. Boyden Finishes in Runner-Up Position

With the completion of the regular fraternity bowling league, the ten highest individual bowlers fought it out among themselves to determine the best of the lot. Each man bowled three strings.

Versatile Frankie Taylor added another first place to his belt by bowling the best score in the three strings, and likewise the highest single score 137.

Four points behind was E. Boyden, who over the regular season competition had the highest average in two strings, his being 232.6.

The six leaders in order of their rank during the regular season, on the basis of their average for two strings a match are:

1. N. Boyden 232.6
2. A. Warden 221.2
3. L. Gallup 213.9
4. H. Robinson 213.6
5. M. Small 212.7
6. F. Taylor 211.9

The five leaders in order of their rank for the three-string championships are:

1. F. Taylor 358
2. N. Boyden 354
3. C. Long 342
4. S. Sysko 337
5. J. Machanic 331

Wings Over The Campus

Editor's Note—Just what is the civilian pilot training program? What is its significance in development of American aviation? The Vermont Cynic presents herewith the first of a series of articles on the program, in which thousands of collegians are participating.

I.

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

The federal government is continuing on a greatly expanded scale, the nation-wide civilian pilot training program initiated in 1939 for training of young Americans as civilian airplane pilots. The program is carried on under direction of the civil aeronautics administration of the department of commerce, specifically under the civilian pilot training service of that department.

Late in December, 1938, President Roosevelt approved a plan presented by the administration (then the civil aeronautics authority) for training of civilian pilots in colleges and universities. The President at that time authorized allocation of $100,000 of national youth administration funds to conduct a practical test of such a plan.

Early in January, 1939 an experimental program was inaugurated with 330 students at 13 colleges. This experimental program, continued through the remainder of the school year, proved the feasibility of such training on a large scale, and as a result the Civilian Pilot Training Act of 1939 was passed by Congress and signed by the President early in the summer of 1939. This legislation authorized continuance of the program on a nation-wide basis for five years.

Subsequently Congress appropriated funds to carry out the training in the fiscal year 1940 (beginning July 1, 1939) and with this appropriation some 10,000 pilots were trained during the school year 1939-1940.

Even before this 1939-1940 phase ended, Congress, aroused by menacing world conditions and convinced of the program's importance to defense, appropriated funds for training of about 75,000 youths during the fiscal year 1941. With these funds the administration immediately put into operation a "summer session" and scheduled a "fall session" and a "spring session," thus providing three "classes" of trainees for each fiscal year.

23 Girls Enrolled In Nursing Course

Learn Practical Side Of Home Nursing

Twenty-three girls from all four classes are now reporting twice weekly at the Mary Fletcher Hospital for training in home nursing. Mrs. Alma B. Van Pelt, superintendent of nurses at the hospital, has charge of the Wednesday afternoon sessions which are given over to lectures and practice in what they have already learned while Miss Mae B. Spaulding presides over the practical demonstrations on Friday afternoons.

The girls use as a textbook the Red Cross booklet on home nursing by which they have by now learned to make a bed according to regulation hospital methods either empty or with a patient and to properly take a person's temperature, pulse rate and respiration. A recent demonstration was given by the head nurse of obstetrics, who showed the best way to bathe a baby, using as a subject the hospital's foster infant.

Later the girls expect to study proper diet for the sick, contagious diseases, and points to watch for in various illnesses.

Delegate Reports on Northfield Conference

By CATHRYN GRIER

To me one of the most interesting and outstanding speakers at the Northfield Conference was the Rev. Luther Tucker, who is a secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation. He suffered imprisonment in the Far East for the sake of the Gospel and for six months had absolutely nothing to do except sit in prison and read the Bible. There were no duties to perform while there and it wasn't until after the first week that they consented to give him a Bible. He had a great deal of time to think and has some splendid ideas to present to all who will listen to him.

At the end of the six months he had carved a hugh cross on the wall of the prison. Perhaps some of us would wonder why he chose this to fill his time and yet in times of strife and loneliness, isn't it natural for one to turn to God?

The topic which he chose for his speech was "Christian Action in the World of 1941" and he stated that our main task was to be the contact point between the Gospel and this world. We live in a world and society in which God acts and He should be known in the breadth and depth of the earth. There would be no church or fellowship today without the birth, work, death and return of Christ to this earth and it is our duty to read his words and interpret them to others.

"Judas Maccabaeus"

"Judas Maccabaeus," written in the middle of the eighteenth century, is of significance at this time. It deals with the heroism of Judas Maccabaeus saving the political liberty of a freedom-loving people from the oppressive Syrians.

It closes with the return of Judas from his final victory over Nicanor and his confederates, with the familiar choruses "See, the Conqu'ring Hero Comes" and "Hallelujah Amen."

Accompanying the work will be the Chapel Orchestra with Mr. Anselmo, instructor in violin, as concertmaster. The orchestra has done a great deal of work this year, playing at several Wednesday morning chapel services and Sunday Vespers, as well as the Christmas concert. The orchestra includes: Violins, Michael Anselmo, Hiram Bevins '41, Sarah Brigham '41, Ruth Cooley '42, Gerald Haines '42, Mary Lessor '43, Dorothy Moseley '42, Natalie Spear '43, Rosemary Thayer '44, Effie Winn and Nellie Herrmann '44. Violoncellos: Miss Freda Harris, John Goss '43, Robert Goss '44 and Margaret Wishart '43. Flutes: Jean Vogler '44 and Mary Davis '43. Clarinets: Saul Boyarsky '44 and John Thayer '43 Med. Assisting the orchestra for this concert are: Violas, Mr. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, instructor in public school music, and Mr. Arlington Visscher, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music; trumpets, Thomas Keighley '44 and Joseph Creed '42; trombones, Oliver Swift '43 and Ernest Stockwell '44.

Alpha Chi's Join Hostel Movement

Fifteen weeks isn't such a long time after all. At any rate it isn't too far ahead to start planning for that summer vacation and if you're looking for some good ideas, take a tip from five Alpha Chis. Next June, Ethel Shippee '42, Rosemary Brewster '44, Elizabeth Doten '44, Catherine Bodette '44 and Olive Burrington '41 will join the ever-swelling ranks of Youth hostelers who are rediscovering America by means of bicycle, horseback or on foot. The girls plan to rent English bicycles (preferably because of the shifts) and to make about twenty miles a day in traveling from one hostel to another. Starting from Burlington, they will cover northern Vermont, taking in such places as Jericho, St. Johnsbury, Stowe, etc., as far south as Windsor and parts of New Hampshire all within a week. Bunks and bedding will be supplied at the hostels but the girls will furnish their own sheets and get their own meals. The charge for sleeping arrangements will be 25 cents a night with a possible 5 cents extra for fuel. All in all the girls figure that they can cover the whole trip at approximately $15.

The American Youth Hostel is not a new movement. It originated in Europe, Germany particularly, where it has been in vogue for a number of years. Recently, however, on account of the troubled conditions, the organization in America has gained increased importance. The American headquarters is at Northfield, Mass., where for $2 one may acquire a membership card which entitles him to admission in any hostel in the country and a subscription to the quarterly, American Youth Hostel Knapsack, as well as a copy of the guidebook which includes information on routes and places of interest. You may plot out your own route.

The hostels are sometimes farmhouses where you can obtain butter and milk, old barns or simply tents with either bunks or cots. Sometimes a hayloft comprises the sleeping quarters of the Youth hostels. Candles or oil lamps supply the light while a house mother and father furnish what little chaperonage is needed. The only rules are that the guests should be in bed at 10 o'clock and that they "should leave the place better than they found it." Unless the hostels are unusually crowded you may use them as a base for short trips about the countryside.

The chapel stage has been considerably larged to accommodate the orchestra d chorus. Many Burlington people and mbers of the faculty, as well as stu-nts, are singing in this large chorus. edless to say, such an undertaking has lled for a great many rehearsals, a great al of planning, and a great deal of hard rk. The concert promises to be an-her triumph in music here at Vermont.

Play Tryouts to Be Held Next Week

Dramatic Club Also Plans Tryouts Soon

Tryouts have been announced for the class plays. Due to the fact that the Junior Week play comes somewhat in the vicinity of class plays the Women's Dramatic Club has decided to postpone tryouts until the cast for the larger play has been announced. For this reason the freshmen and sophomores are to meet in 1 North College on Tuesday afternoon, March 25, at 4.00 o'clock. Tryouts for juniors and seniors will be on Wednesday afternoon at the same time and place.

The Dramatic Club is attempting to make several innovations this year. Since all the organizations on the campus have in some way tried to direct their interests towards cooperation in the world situation the Dramatic Club is also anxious to do its part. For this reason a very nominal sum will be charged for admission and all proceeds will be turned over to the War Relief Committee.

The second innovation will be the disposal of cumbrous sets which mar rather than aid the illusion created by the play. Props and costumes will be used but a simplification of sets it is hoped will allow the imagination of the audience to have a little free play.

For the first time in many years the club will put on one play in which the women will play the parts of men. The play chosen for this does not make many demands on the women's masculine abilities since they are character parts; yet in this way it has been possible to surmount the difficulty of finding a really good play for women only.

All these plays will be enlarged on in future issues of the CYNIC. Everybody who is interested in helping may get in touch with Jane Lyons at the Pi Phi house.

I. R. C. Discusses Lease-Lend Bill

The International Relations Club met on Wednesday night to discuss the Lease-Lend Bill and its effect upon the peace of the United States. H. A. Durfee '41 gave his opinion that the bill would lead to war, and was followed by Maywood Metcalf '41, who stated her belief that it would better the chances for an allied victory without our entrance into the conflict.

Mr. Durfee supported his claim by declaring that the United States is technically at war now, and that our actual entrance will be conditioned only by Germany's desire to take on a new opponent. He does not think our material aid will be sufficient to forestall a German victory, in which case we should have to send men to protect our interests abroad.

Miss Metcalf said that the Lease-Lend Bill had no provision for sending men; it is for materials only, and materials are the primary need in a war of 1941. She cited the fact that the United States needs the British navy to support our own one-ocean navy and quoted Colonel Knox as stating that when the British Empire falls, the British navy falls.

The I. R. C. members and Prof. George L. Millikan, their faculty sponsor, carried on the discussion for the remainder of the meeting under the chairmanship of Margaret L. Drum '41.

Keep the Kettle Boiling!

If it didn't prove anything else, the recent flood of letters over the military ball demonstrated that students here at Vermont are still able to react to a situation. We believe whole-heartedly in the principle that students should express their ideas in the columns of the campus newspaper. Only in this way can intelligent and constructive plans for improvements be formulated.

During the past year there has been a decided slump in student spirit. Certainly this cannot be attributed to a dearth of problems. There are many matters upon which the students should take a stand, should express an opinion, should force action. The dramatic clubs, for instance, have been very inactive. Yet we have heard few students demanding some explanation for this inactivity. The University is suffering a financial crisis. Yet we have had no suggestions from the student body on the matter. Certainly on so vital an issue someone should be forthcoming with ideas on how the students can cooperate and what steps, if any, should be taken toward a fair curtailment of expenses. In the larger field of national events the I. R. C. is the one lone voice trying to foster an interest in current affairs. The War Relief Committee is very seldom discussed; nor are suggestions made about its work. We could list other problems but that would be overworking a point that seems sufficiently clear.

Students are sent to college, theoretically, to learn how to think and express themselves on the vast pattern of life. How will they ever be able to do so when they graduate if they do not bother to make a start in college? The universities have always been centers of advanced thought and progressive ideas. Now is no time to let such a tradition deteriorate.

It's up to us all to keep the kettle boiling. Let's hope that the recent expression of student opinion was not a mere sporadic outburst but the beginning of a revival in school spirit here at the University. Not school spirit in the narrow sense of blind enthusiasm and occasional cheering for things athletic and social but a sustained interest in the improvement of the University, a desire to foster educational freedom and a growing awareness of the larger world beyond the narrow confines of our own campus.

Story With Moral

The Christian Science Monitor recently carried the strange and rather terrifying story about a "former Cambridge student, now a Nazi flier, who comes machine-gunning nearby villages and making the rounds of this center of logic and classical lore." A native of the town laughs and remarks, "But that isn't saying some of our chaps who attended Heidelberg aren't getting in some licks there," and there you have it—the whole tragedy of the world today.

And the pedant in us points the obvious moral—the war is with us and we cannot ignore it. The war is with us and there's no alternative but to wage it. But in the smoke and the shouting let us not lose our direction. This is not a war to be fought for one creed, one faith, one nation. Paradoxically enough, it must be a war whose every battle undermines war. Its ideal should go beyond narrow national democracy to the higher purpose of internationalism. If when the nations lay down their arms there does not result a world big enough for the dreams and aspirations of all men we needn't bother to rebuild Cambridge or Heidelberg. We won't need them.

Sgt. Connor Returns To Military Department

A few days ago, Sergeant Connor, formerly instructor in the military science curriculum at the University, returned for active duty. He retired last June after nineteen years of constant service.

Colonel Holden, head of the military department from 1919 to 1927, who claimed the distinction of "discovering" the sergeant when he was a corporal in the U. S. Cavalry, brought him to U. V. M. as an instructor.

Last May Sergeant Connor was given a dinner in recognition of his splendid service. At this dinner he was presented with a testimonial, encased in gold-embossed leather signed by the late President Bailey and several prominent army officers. This is sufficient proof of the esteem in which he was held by the University and his return will be a definite asset to the department.

Brickbats And Bouquets

By Roger B. Hunting

It is not our intention to devote the columns of the Cynic to a personal defense of our observations in last Friday's Cynic. Enough "sound and fury, signifying nothing" has been written on the subject already. However, we shall check off a few points in the arguments which have been raised.

In reply to the reams of material on the outraged democracy of our fair land may we make this point—democracy has never been defined as saying that all men are equal—all men are created with an equal start—a large number of factors, however, from then on make men far from equal. Physical, mental, environmental and economic factors all take a hand, and the final results are far from equal. Thus we have a social scale, which should be apparent even to the most idealistic, and two levels of this social scale, in our humble opinion, should not, and cannot, successfully be mixed. Conversations with hostesses at the Saturday night dance bear out this point. Your columnist neither invented nor will he die to maintain this social scale. We merely point out its existence and leave it to you to make your own conclusions.

Aside from that point, the possibility for mutual enjoyment and profit from the dances, we will make only one other observation. It seems as though the attitude of the public toward the soldiers is exactly that expressed by Kipling in his poem, "Tommy Atkins." Since it seems to be the style of our most verbose and amateurish opposition to launch himself into flights of ill-applied quotation, may we quote Kipling who sums up the civilian attitude toward the soldiery thus:

It's "Tommy this," and "Tommy that,"
And "Tommy, step aside,"
But it's "Special train for Atkins"
When the troop ship's on the tide.

How enjoyable this attitude is to the soldier, and how much he appreciates the magnanimous gestures of the civilian population we cannot say. We have expressed our opinion, you are entitled to yours.

A BOUQUET to Johnny Spasyk and Whizzer White on their election as co-chairmen of Junior Week. We are sure that a gala week will be forthcoming with these two men at the helm.

Also equal bouquets to Eddie Guilbert and Linney Gallup for their election to the posts of Senior Week chairmen. Let's go, fellows.

A BOUQUET to all those who have taken their pens, pencils, typewriters and telephones in hand to express their opinions on the aforementioned army dance. It indicates that the students on the Vermont campus are not dead—they're just unconscious, and can be aroused if prodded hard enough. And our sincere apologies to all those whose feelings have been hurt and whose ideals of democracy and decency have been disregarded. NOW will you quit ringing our phone bell 'cause I'm not changing my mind?

By Saul Boyarsky '44 and

"What do you think of the recent passage of the Lease-Lend Bill?" was the question with which these people were brusquely accosted. Of those asked it may be seen that opinion is preponderantly in favor of the new law.

Bernard Glass '43—It's a strong step in the right direction. I'm all for it.

Doctor Nuquist—It's the only thing they could do under the circumstances. They should have passed it sooner.

Arthur Kehoe '44—It's the only way for us to protect our defenses.

Maywood Metcalf '41—I'm heartily in favor of it. It's the only thing we could have done. Material aid not including manpower to the British who are fighting for our democracy which is precious to Americans as well, will probably help us avoid active participation later by giving us time to build our defenses. Also the British Navy plays a part in guarding our shores and trade in the Atlantic of which some people don't realize the importance. The basis of our way of life and government is on trial; an isolationist policy is out of the question since we are so tied up by cultural trade and historical bonds with England.

Professor Millikan—It's the logical result of our determined policy to aid Britain. It makes the possibility of war greater insofar that it indicates we are more committed to Britain. It puts us in the position of backing England to the finish.

Doctor Nichols—It's going to commit us to backing one belligerent against another which may lead to war. We may be getting ourselves into war by our own act.

Jack Machanic '44—The best thing that ever happened for democracy.

Kappa Phi Kappa Hears Dr. Holmes

Dr. R. M. Holmes, head of the physics department, spoke to the members of Kappa Phi Kappa, honorary education fraternity, Wednesday evening on the "Battle of Lake Champlain."

In line with his hobby of ships and seamanship, Doctor Holmes explained the battle between British and American ships near Plattsburg in the War of 1812 and showed that by superior seamanship the American commander in the flagship "Saratoga" was able to win a victory over the British in the flagship "Confiance." Even though the Americans encountered much larger forces than their own, by an ingenious way of laying anchor the American commander was able to turn the tide of the battle.

After this very interesting talk refreshments were served and a discussion followed in which Doctor Holmes explained how the British were able to defeat the "Graf Spee" in the present war.

It was decided that the next meeting would be an open meeting to come shortly after the Easter vacation.

There will be an important meeting of the University Players, Friday afternoon, March 21, at 3.30, in 3 North College.

Final Exam for telephones

THIS electrical mouth at Bell Telephone Laboratories is putting a new telephone to one of its final tests. Over and over, it can repeat these odd sentences without the slightest variation. They contain all the fundamental sounds that contribute to the loudness of sound in our speech. This mouth can also make tests with simple tones of known pitch and intensity.

At the same time other telephones are being steamed, baked, frozen, lifted and dropped into their cradles by tireless machines. All this is part of a carefully planned curriculum that makes every piece of telephone equipment prove it is capable of giving you the best possible service—under any and all conditions.

ee distinct categories of correlated d and flight training courses were d under the CAA flight training am during 1940. These included: Pilot training courses to qualify ed trainees for pilot's certificates of etency. (2) Instructor training es to qualify experienced pilots as instructors, and (3) Pilot refresher es enabling already trained pilots ng either active or inactive certifi- to brush up on their flying and their knowledge and technic up to ent-day standards.

the pilot training category there e two courses—the private and the ndary—both providing a specified imum number of hours of ground ol instruction and flight instruction. he private course qualified the student a private pilot certificate of compe- y. This course was in two phases: ege and non-college. The ground ol work of the college phase was ducted by established educational in- tions and that of the non-college phase under the sponsorship of selected civic anizations. In both phases actual flight truction was given by established local ht operators.

he secondary course, available only the college phase, provided additional more advanced ground and flight ning to selected graduates of the ate course. As in the private course, ground school training was given at the educational institution and flight instruction by established local flight operators. The flight training in this course was given on larger, heavier aircraft than those used in the private course.

Three instructor training courses were carried on. These were the student instructor course for trainees who had completed both the private and secondary courses; the instructor refresher course for already certificated pilots, which qualified them to instruct in the civilian training pilot training private course; and the secondary instructor refresher course for already certificated instructors which qualified them to instruct in the secondary phase of the civilian pilot training program. These courses were given by selected flying schools under contract with the CAA administrator.

Under the pilot refresher category, only one course was offered during the year. This was the commercial refresher course which provided additional training to specially qualified applicants who already had considerable piloting experience. Like the instructor courses, this was given by selected flying schools under contract with the administrator.

More than 25,000 trainees completed the private course and received their private pilots' certificates in 1940. As the year ended, another group of nearly 15,000 trainees was about to finish the private course. Several thousand graduates of the private course in the 1939-1940 school year completed secondary training and many more trainees who had received initial training in the summer session of 1940 were about to be graduated from the secondary course as the year ended. The various instructor training courses and the commercial refresher course turned out many additional graduates.

Of civilian pilot training program trained flight instructors alone, by the end of the year, more than 500 had been absorbed by the armed forces or the airlines. The program is providing a vast reservoir of civilian pilots available, if necessary, for advanced training as military pilots by the armed services. As a matter of record, by the end of the year, the program had already fed more than 2,600 of its trainees to army and navy training centers.

Kappa Sig Tea To Be Unique Military Affair

Kappa Sigma fraternity will hold a tea dance Saturday, March 22, at their house, which promises to be a rather unique affair.

According to the chairman of the affair, the dance will be a "military" tea dance. All the girls who will attend the affair have to be invited and vouched for by certain authorities to be appointed by the chairman. The dance will be out in plenty of time for the girls to attend the wrestling matches at the Auditorium the same evening.

The Kappa Sigs will be at the house "en masse" in their best khaki and the girls will draw numbers before they meet the "future draftees."

The girls are going into this in a purely voluntary manner and the humanitarian ideals must be borne in mind when they meet these gentlemen; all the Kappa Sigs have received diplomas from grammar school and can boast of possessing good dancers and intelligent conversationalists.

Scribes Planning Second Cynic Page

Please note: There will be no meeting of the Scribes until after vacation. We feel that with mid-year exams and other activities, members have not had ample time to prepare their manuscripts. All you who are interested in Scribes please be thinking of some article to write for the Scribes' page in the CYNIC. Come to the meeting, prepared for another Scribes' page. We want extra good material for the page. The exact date of the meeting has not as yet been decided. Keep an eye open for the announcement.

For all you who do not know exactly what Scribes is: Jean Young '42, organized this group two years ago, patterned after a similar one she joined in high school. Anybody may attend the meetings and read his manuscript. The members then discuss it and make friendly criticisms. Professor Myrick is the faculty advisor. Huddee Zwick '43 is president.

Interfraternity Sing To Be Held March 27

Plans for the interfraternity sing are progressing rapidly with the final date still set for March 27. All the fraternities on the campus will be competing with the exception of Tau Epsilon Phi. Two of them have already announced their programs which are as follows: Kappa Sigs, "Rain and the River" by Oscar J. Fox; "Dance, My Comrades" by Richard Bennett. Phi Sigs, "Phi Sigma Delta Forever" and "All of the Time."

Play Ball!

At the present time we do not envy Coach Larry Gardner his job. Out of a group of thirty-five to forty hard-working baseballers Larry must select fourteen men to make the southern trip. This trip down to the sunny southland is the heart's desire of every man who aspires a position on the varsity nine. When we say "sunny southland," however, it is with perhaps a certain amount of wishful thinking. As we recall, last year's trip was marked by many a wet and windswept diamond.

Under the watchful eye of Coach Carpenter, the tennis team is working out daily on the hard surface of the gym floor. The boys are distinctly at a disadvantage in having to practice there, but once again the weather man is the master. There are many complaints about not being able to see the ball well and by the time the tennis men get used to this, outdoor practice will probably begin.

Much Ado

In the quarter-finals of the national invitational tournament held at Madison Square Garden mighty Duquesne was subdued in masterful fashion by Ohio University (not State). C. C. N. Y. squelched a fighting U. of Virginia team 64-35 in another game. The Phi Delta Theta relay team showed real stuff in beating the S A E's Wednesday—the other fraternities take note, three of the four men are freshmen. Tune in on tonight's Simon-Louis fight. We won't dare predict an upset, but, after all, Napoleon had his Waterloo. Our prediction for the outstanding rookie pitcher of the year is Art Johnson of the Boston Bees. While on the same limb, we'll take the Dodgers in the National League and the Yankees in the junior loop. Whoops, my dear, what is that cracking noise I hear?

Baseball Squad To Go South Soon

The year of 1941 will mark the twenty-first consecutive invasion of the southland by the University of Vermont baseball squad.

The boys have been getting into shape for several weeks and really look very promising. Coach Gardner is looking forward to another banner year on the diamond.

The annual southern jaunt serves as an incentive for men to try out for baseball, as it offers wide opportunities to the player, by enabling him to visit the large centers of the South, and puts him into a good spring work-out. Baseball holds many educational values and it has a broad scope, for there are approximately 200 men who will participate in this sport at Vermont before the 1941 season is terminated.

The Vermont baseball team made its first trip to the South in 1892, while several others were scattered between that year and 1920, when the consecutive string of twenty-one began. However, our college boasted of a ball club in 1866. The great nine of 1893 was selected to play at the Chicago World's Fair in an exhibition game with the mighty men from Yale. Our squad encountered difficulty in meeting its numerous opponents that season and traveled about the East in box cars, in order to fulfill its schedule properly; knocking off all opposition en route. The boys from Vermont pulled into the Windy City on the noon of the Fourth of July, on which day the big game was scheduled. In a lusty slugfest, the Vermonters took the boys of Eli by a margin of 14-12, before a stupified crowd of 2,000 fans. On their southern journey, this great team of 1893 enjoyed a successful and eventful compaign. In a game contested at Washington, D. C., during an eventful fourth inning, the scorer found his official position "too burdensome" for continuation and retired to a secluded position in the grandstand. Consequently, no official score was available on the game. However, the Washington Post stated, "These Vermont ball players are a stalwart set of young fellows, whose brawn and athletic ability speak well for the quality of the Green Mountain air, and they have enjoyed their trip as no one but collegians on a trip could." Incidentally, in the games played on this trip, our hurlers whiffed a total of 67 opposing batsmen in the six games played!

As Coach Gardner stated several years ago, "The Southern Trip furthers the educational viewpoint of the squad members and maintains the active interest of the alumni and general public in the educational institution through a field of great common interest and appeal."

Post Worried Over Track Campaign

Webster Boys to Carry Burden in Distances

There was a worried frown in evidence on the brow of Coach Archie Post as he was asked for new developments on the track situation. After hearing his first few explanatory words it was quite plain that he was not worried without just cause. "To begin with," he pointed out, "the 100, 200, 440 and 880 are question marks. I haven't any outstanding men that I can count on to garner points in these events." This is a bad state of affairs, because it necessitates a great deal of power in the other events—power that is not as yet in evidence. Ed Eaton, who was new last year, is the only quarter-mile prospect with any experience. Jack Burgess may be ready for work after Easter vacation, but he will have a lot to do to fill Stowell's shoes.

One ray of sunshine in this brief interview was provided in the discussion of the shot-put and discus. It seems that there is little ground for worry there with a number of candidates of fairly equal ability. This stimulates competition and pushes them to greater effort.

Clouds blotted out the sunshine again when the subject of the pole vault, high jump and broad jump was mentioned. None of the pole vaulters have clipped twelve feet yet and need a lot of work in order to compete with such teams that appear on this spring's schedule. High jumpers Becker and Grosvenor must improve to be classed as point-getters.

The distance runs present another problem to Mr. Post. The Webster boys will, doubtless, carry most of the burden there, but they cannot be overworked. There are a number of distance runners who will be switched around, and until actual trials have been made it is difficult to tell what they can do. Norm Stoddard, who has not done much running so far, is being counted on for some good performances. He will be brought down from the mile to the half as a trial. "The half is no longer a distance run," says Coach Post. "A fellow must have speed to run a two-minute half mile, and not necessarily a great deal of endurance." Stoddard should be a good half miler.

Aid for Democracies

Frances Wilkinson of Smith College will be on campus this week-end to confer with campus leaders on the Hoover Plan for Relief of the Five Small Democracies. She will meet on Friday night at 8.00 and Saturday, March 22, at Southwick at 2.00 p.m. with representatives of Y. W. C. A., War Relief Committee, International Relations Club, the various honorary societies, V. C. A. and other organizations which are interested in discussing the question of relief. Inquiries may be made through Elizabeth T. Cooper '42.

Prof. Harry Daash On Cynic Program

Tells Importance of Engineers in Defense

With Meyer Levin '41 as master of ceremonies, four interesting speakers were introduced on the regular U. V. M. Radio Program Tuesday evening. The first speaker, Prof. Harry L. Daash of the engineering college, gave a very interesting and factual summary of the rôle that civilians, especially engineers, play in our vast scheme of national defense.

"Recently," he stated, "Congress called for civilian training for service in defense industries of more than 700,000 workers. The program was developed along four major lines: First, training in strictly vocational fields by establishing trades, industries and vocational schools was planned. A second phase was concerned with the at-home training of rural and non-rural youth for mechanical occupations. Third, young people employed on work projects of the NYA were to be given instruction and vocational training. And fourth, short courses in engineering schools and colleges were to be established to meet the shortage of engineers in fields essential to national defense."

Since he is most closely connected with the last phase, his speech dealt mainly with the development of this work with special reference to local activities. "The primary purpose is to train an engineering personnel" he ventured and proceeded to tell of the growing demand for skilled artisans, which has become eight to ten times greater than was expected.

He spoke of the Engineering Council for Professional Development which has been very active in engineering education during past years. "The University of Vermont is the only fully accredited school for giving civil, electrical and mechanical engineering degrees in this section of New England and the graduates of the regular full-time engineering courses are now finding a wealth of opportunities. Many of the forthcoming graduates of next June have already made employment contracts with industrial organizations.

Jean M. Evans '41, the next speaker, gave sincere thanks on behalf of the U. V. M. War Relief Committee to the junior class for their splendid show of spirit and self-sacrifice in the form of a gift of $100 (to come from the Junior Prom orchestra money) which had been voted in a recent class meeting. He remarked on the sums received from the sale of Greek War Relief buttons, the "Dutch Treat" and joint Pan-Hellenic dances, and the anticipated profits from future Razz-Dazz dances and a possible production by the University Players.

Dean Hills' Annual Sugar Party was enticingly described by Ralph Evans '41 of the Agricultural College, who accompanied his description with a "thumbnail sketch" of Dean Hills who has never ceased in his fifty-four years at U. V. M. to better the part of the "Aggie" student. He mentioned that an added feature of the Sugar Party would be a speech by Governor Wills.

Myrna French '42, Managing Editor of the Cynic, brought the varied program to a close by presenting a calendar of events which are pertinent to campus life, notably stressing the forthcoming performance of "Judas Maccabaeus." In closing Meyer Levin '41 announced that the next broadcast would feature Malcom W. Maclay of the economics department who will talk on "Consumer's Cooperatives."

Newman Club Hears Lecture on Mass

After their preparation for the partaking in the Holy Sacrifice and the people have offered their gifts to God, which in the early history of the Church consisted of anything the faithful had to offer, the priest recites the prayers of the Preface and of the Canon. These two prayers are considered as daily gifts to God by the people of the Church as a whole. The origin of these two prayers can be traced back to those expressed by the Jews to God in their offerings. The motives of these prayers are thanksgiving for the creation of the universe and the praise of God. Their whole nature is shown to us as animated.

There are two spiritual movements which have influenced the liturgy of the Mass, that of the Jews and that of the Greek philosophers. Father Michael considered the problem of the Jews as the chosen people of God: In the Gospel of St. Paul to the Romans it is surprising to find that at some time the Jews will all have entered the Christian Church. Until then we must await the second coming of Christ.

This completes the series of lectures on the Liturgy of the Mass given by Father Michael of St. Michael's College.

Engineering Society to Hold Aviation Program

An aviation program sponsored by the Student Branch of the A. S. M. E. will be presented in the Fleming Museum, Friday evening at 7.30. Mr. Raymond C. Thompson, state inspector of aeronautics will speak on experiments in aviation. A film entitled "Safe Flying" will also be presented. Everyone is most cordially invited.

The Pi Beta Phis announce that their spring formal will be held April 25 at Oakledge Manor with "The Collegians" playing. Carolyn Trask '41 and Janet Hackwell '43 are in charge.

The Delta Phi Epsilon sorority is to have a formal of which Jean Blume '43 and Clara Griffel '41 are in charge.

Other sororities which are having spring formals on the twenty-fifth of April are Alpha Xi Delta and Alpha Chi Omega. Further plans for these sororities and also for Kappa Alpha Theta have not been made.

The Tri-Delt formal, which is being planned by a committee with Lucille Clark in charge of it, is to take place on the Hotel Vermont Roof on April 25. The orchestra will be "The Grenadiers" from Norwich University and the chaperones will be Professor and Mrs. Pond.

Dean Hills Honored at Sugar Party; Governor Wills Speaks

Upper row, left to right—E. E. Gifford, Jr., winner of the Dean J. L. Hills cup and best U. V. M. student judge of all dairy products; J. L. Hills, Dean, College of Agriculture, University of Vermont; K. J. Estey, winner of the H. B. Ellenberger cup as the best U. V. M. student judge of dairy cattle, all breeds. Bottom row—R. P. Davis, winner of the C. F. Weinreich cup as the best U. V. M. student judge of butter; E. E. Gifford, Jr., winner of the C. E. Beardslee cup as the best U. V. M. student judge of cheese; and R. F. Evans, winner of the A. W. Smith cup as the best U. V. M. student judge of milk.

Several hundred students, faculty members, alumni and townspeople gathered in the University gymnasium last Friday evening, March 21, to attend the fifth annual sugar party given in honor of Dean Hills. The guest speaker of the evening was Gov. William B. Wills, who praised the Agricultural College and complimented Dean Hills on the way he has built up the school. Then a large loving cup was presented to Dean Hills from "his loyal friends, members of the Vermont Dairy Plant Operators' and Managers' Association." This cup is to be known as the Dean J. L. Hills Cup and is to be awarded for "Annual Recognition to the Best U. V. M. Student Judge of All Dairy Products." It was presented to Dean Hills by Dr. H. B. Ellenberger on behalf of the Vermont Dairy Plant Operators' and Managers' Association of which he is secretary. Dean Hills in turn presented it to E. E. Gifford, Jr., '41, of East Bethel, Vt., of the class of 1941, who has been ranked as the best student judge of all dairy products for the year 1940, his record in classes and in Intercollegiate judging contests being taken into consideration.

Other cups presented at this time included:

The Smith cup for "Annual Recognition of the Best U. V. M. Student Judge of Milk," donated by A. W. Smith, Manager of the United Dairy System, Springfield, Mass., and awarded to R. F. Evans '41 of Groton, Vt.

The Weinreich cup for "Annual Recognition of the Best U. V. M. Student Judge of Butter," donated by C. F. Weinreich of the Cherry-Burrell Corporation, Chicago Ill. This cup was won by R. P. Davis '41 of Morrisville, Vt.

The Beardslee cup for "Annual Recognition of the Best U. V. M. Student Judge of Cheese," donated by C. E. Beardslee, vice-president of the Borden Company, New York City, and won by E. E. Gifford, Jr., '41, of East Bethel, Vt.

The Ellenberger cup, donated by Dr. H. B. Ellenberger, head of the Department of Animal and Dairy Husbandry, University of Vermont, and presented by him to K. J. Estey '41 of Hinesburg, Vt., for "Annual Recognition of the Best U. V. M. Student Judge of Dairy Cattle, All Breeds."

Tryouts Are Announced For Junior Week Play

"You Can't Take It With You" is the play finally decided on by the University Players for their spring presentation.

Tryouts will be held in No. 1 North College on Tuesday afternoon, and with such a large cast needed there is a fine opportunity for many aspiring actors in this well-known and well-loved play.

Independents Draw Up Joint Program

Men & Women Combine On Permanent Plans

The Independent men and women of U. V. M. have decided to form a permanent joint organization, open to all students who are not members of Greek-letter fraternities, and have drawn up the following joint program:

I. The organization shall be open to all students in the three academic colleges who are not affiliated with Greek-letter social organizations. It will in no wise act as a "bloc" in campus politics. Substitution for, or taking part in, a Greek-letter organization is not contemplated.

Goal: To create a strong bond between all people in the institution, both students and faculty, to the end that in later years the individual will feel himself or herself to be a member of the University as a whole rather than of a clique or group.

Purpose; To promote participation as individuals of all non-fraternity men and women in campus activities.

Objective: To further the intellectual, cooperative, social and athletic life of its members.

II. Intellectual.

A. To form a study committee which shall make accessible to students information as to tutoring, study habits, desirable lighting and other conditions conducive to facility in study.

B. To secure educational speakers, moving pictures, debates and discussion of vital social and political problems at business and social meetings.

C. To afford to individual students practice in parliamentary procedure and in group discussions.

D. To afford to individual students practice in public speaking and secure for them access to information concerning correct speech.

E. To sponsor and stimulate individual participation in literary, musical and athletic groups, clubs and activities on the campus, e.g., by required attendance at and presentation of short reviews of University lectures and concerts, athletic contests, etc.

III. Cooperation.

A. To improve student attitude and college spirit by fostering the learning of University cheers and songs and practicing them at the meetings.

B. To cooperate with other groups in the development of a democratic way of life on the campus.

C. To promote good-will and fellowship among the students of the three academic colleges and between the University and other collegiate institutions.

IV. Social.

A. To promote social meetings and entertainments for non-fraternity students.

B. To secure speakers and promote informal discussions on poise, courtesy, social and business etiquette, etc., and to put the same into practice at business and social meetings.

EDITORIALS

Somewhat Rhetorical

When spring rolls around you can do one of two things—you can grow lyrical or you can go cynical. You can look out and see only the sunshine, a hint of bloom and a slow stir of lazy wind. You can look out and see only mud, guns rolling and hate being sown in the furrows of men's lives. Neither is very satisfying either for a passing thought or an editorial. The dissatisfaction suggests something deeper. Call it man's hope, or man's faith. Or better still, leave it unnamed.

It's there—it's always there somewhere mixed with the hate, the bitter strife, the ceaseless dying. And spring only serves to quicken its beating pulse because it is the season when man comes close again to something simple and beautiful. You can't stop its slow work because it's a subversive element with an international influence. And in the end that hope and faith will have triumphed again.

A little confused this and slightly emotional perhaps. But it's a hard thing to write about. You know it exists, you can trace it through history. Man has come down the centuries blundering, groping in the carnage of war, questioning the meaning of life. Man has cursed and hated. Yet something in him has risen above the sound and the fury. Something in him has looked up to a beauty and a dream of fellowship which will not acknowledge defeat.

There's a lot of talk being done today about ideologies. There's a concentrated attempt to whip everyone in line—to a brutal fascism, to an all-powerful communism, to a—yes even to a limited democracy. It's been tried before, this violent attempt to herd men into the cramped shelter of a narrow faith. But somehow the human soul is constantly bursting those bonds and reaching out for something more satisfying. Like the chambered nautilus, man's soul seeks larger and larger chambers in which to live. Even in the thick of war the process goes on. The armies of China, the international brigades of Spain, the growing liberality of the English—all point the moral.

So when we look out on the spring we think of that expanding ideal that is constantly finding a new birth. We do not despair at the sight of marching men, at the hoarse shouts of demagogues, at the rank poison of nationalistic hate—for unfortunately we are optimists. We see something deep and unquenchable which is stronger than all the destructive forces of this world. We can still have faith that when the time comes mankind will say as it has always said—

"Yet is my mind my own,
Yet is my heart a cry toward something dim
In distance, which is higher than I am
And makes me emporor of the endless dark."

More Power to You

Elsewhere in this issue is a copy of the joint program recently drawn up by the men and women Independents, which speak well for the high aims of the two groups. Since independent students are in the majority here at Vermont some program which aims to weld them into a cooperative group is highly necessary. We hope that this program will not remain merely a printed statement but will form the basis for some active constructive achievements. We also hope that all independents will cooperate with those students who were responsible for this statement.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Due to lack of space we have found it impossible to run all the letters received on the military ball issue. We hope that those whose letters have not been used will understand that there is nothing personal in the refusal. We do appreciate the interest of the students and their excellent response and hope we will continue to receive expressions of student opinion on vital problems.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In regard to the "co-ed versus boys in khaki" controversy, there seem to be a number of people who are completely misinformed as to the status of our friends across the river. In the first place, they are not draftees! They are members of the National Guard which is a separate and distinct organization! We quote from a recent interview in the CYNIC: "Every one of these men will be college men." This is a typical example. It leads one to wonder whether the sponsors of this dance were misinformed or not!

"Patriotic and civic duty" are very nice sounding and flowery phrases, but the girls were made to feel that if they did not enter wholeheartedly into this plan they were not "doing their bit." That seems entirely wrong. If all the girls, on their own volition, are willing to go to these dances, all well and good, but why force them?

Why all the "fire and brimstone" heaped on friendless Roger's head? He was merely one of a large group in his opinions, but he had the means to express them.

We have spoken to several of the boys at the Fort and, according to them, the co-eds are not doing them any favor by going to the dance. Also several of them who did go, were definitely not going to another. As far as the "selected men" goes—tsk! tsk! Another selling point, certainly not a fact.

Interesting point—12 percent of the men at the Fort have criminal records.

Yours for more intelligent arguments,
HENRI L. PACHE, II,
FREDERICK P. LOGAN.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In almost six years at the University of Vermont, four as an undergraduate and the rest in Medical School, nothing has so immediately directed me to become a "letter to the editor writer" as has Mr. Hunting's "Brickbat" of March 14. If this is the only letter expressing dismay and consternation with Mr. Hunting's views that reaches your desk, I shall be even more concerned because such an absence of campus reaction would indicate that the students actually agree with the gentleman and approve of his remarks. I can't bring myself to believe that such is the case; rather, on first reading I was firmly convinced that here was a hasty personal opinion, certainly not based on fact and just as certainly entirely unrepresentative of the student body of the University.

My own opinion is surely just as personal, and the above criticism may well apply to my ideas on the subject. So that my remarks might be absolutely based on fact, I've spent the last three hours calling every dorm, fraternity and sorority listed in the directory. In all cases but three I spoke directly to the house president and in his absence talked with a senior. The question asked was this, "What is the house opinion on the dance being held Saturday night for the army men?"

The results of this little poll lie before me here and I'm overjoyed to be able to say—with the irrefutable support of cold, hard fact—that this campus has gone on record overwhelmingly in favor of doing the human, decent thing; of making every endeavor to help the newly inducted army men—many not so long ago college boys, Mr. Hunting. Yes, this campus is in favor of having a dance for them, and, amazingly enough, this opinion coincides with that of Burlington, the various states of the Union, and the national government. As a matter of fact, this campus is interested in doing whatever it can in the matter, whether it be a dance Saturday night or any other detail of a general policy of good-fellowship.

Let's have the figures on this evening's poll. In the following table each figure (+, —, ± or 0) represents a fraternity, sorority or dorm. We'll leave the names out. They lined up like this:

Women ++++++++++++++++
Men + + + — — — — ± ± 0

+ = approval, desire to cooperate.
— = disapproval.
0 = no opinion.

It is immediately obvious that the girls are behind this thing and the boys are doing most of the worrying. Two of the men's groups registering a negative objected because they didn't want the girls occupied on Saturday night, certainly a reason quite divorced from Mr. Hunting's fear of the army.

Actually, the girls alone are involved in this question; their opinion alone, then, should, by all democratic principles, determine their action. Well, they have spoken and the unbroken line of +'s in the poll eloquently signifies what they are doing about it. Those are the facts.

I must now mention a related matter briefly but very emphatically. Someone wrote a letter to the CYNIC editor and signed it "Students in the College of Medicine." I'm apologizing right now for whoever did that. We're a rather closely knit family over here and no one of us heard anything whatsoever about that letter until it appeared in print. No one was given authority at any time to represent opinion of our student body. That, too, is fact. While I must agree with the unknown writer in his complaint against the popular conception, "Medics as Wolves"—we're not so bad, honest—the rest of his letter no more reflects medic opinion than does Mr. Hunting's article speak for the undergraduate student body. Let that be clearly understood.

Mr. Editor, I've taken a lot of space, but many of the students of the University are having their say here so I don't feel that I'm imposing. Let us hope that we will all rise above petty differences and together redouble and intensify our efforts to show the world that these United States are now more than ever the stronghold of tolerance, peace and good-will in these war-torn times.

MURRAY N. LEVIN, Med. '43.

The Campus Compass

By SAUL BOYARSKY '44

We recently approached several students on campus to find out their reasons for cutting classes.

We asked, "Do you cut classes? Why?"

Some interpreted "cut" to mean any kind of absence, while others thought it meant to miss class without an excuse.

Here are the answers:

Claire Coffin '44—No. While I'm here in the building, I feel I might as well show up. Besides I like some of my profs.

John Royer '41—Just when necessary. The few unexcused cuts I have piled up in my last four years, I regret, have been due to oversleeping.

Alice Needham '43—Once in a while. It's too much trouble to catch up on what I miss. It's good psychology, too.

Margaret Palmer '44—Not all the time. Sometimes I'm not in the mood for class.

Alfred Amee '43—Never. I always try to be there, as a matter of principle.

Harriet Koble '41—For practical purposes, yes; for the purpose of pleasure, rarely; for no purpose at all, never.

Rosemary Warren '44—No. I don't dare.

Margaret Fake '44—Yes. Intentionally to work or something; unintentionally, when someone forgets to wake me up.

Betty Smith '44—No. In engineering there's too much work to make up if we do.

Dave Sawyer '42—I've been known to. Because I'm tired usually.

June Hoffman '43—Yes. To study for hour tests.

Bob Burns '43—Yes. To study for other courses before an hour exam.

Roger Hunting '42—Yes. Usually before an exam or when I have more important work, or when it's a beautiful day and I should be out enjoying it.

Taze Huntley '41—Yes. If I'm sleepy I figure I'm too sleepy to get much out of class. I'd rather sleep and enjoy it. In certain classes if I haven't done my assignment there's no sense in going. Also, to study for tests.

Iz Goodman '41—Rarely. Just once in a while if I'm bored or sick.

Three professors were approached to give their opinions on a cut system.

Professor Aiken spoke well for a new cut system which might work better than the one now in use.

Professor Witham—I'd be in favor of a cut system. For instance, allowing as many cuts a semester as there are hours a week in the course and giving zero for all other cuts. Of course excuses for sickness should be substantiated. It's a farce now.

Professor Carleton is in favor of a system giving a definite number of cuts a semester with any cuts past the quota immediately putting the student on cut probation. Seniors and honor students could have a larger alllowance, but, "I don't favor giving unlimited cuts for them because of the difficulty of keeping track of their whereabouts."

Phi Delts Triumph In Interfrat Track Meet

Zan Warden Sets New Mark in Shot Put; Bert Mott Leads Delts With Three Wins

Intramural track came to a close Saturday with the Phi Delts, who copped six first places in ten events, well out in front. In the field, Squire boosted the Independents' interests with a heave of 40' in the 35-lb. weight throw. Chesarone, A T O, Parker, Sigma Nu, and Warden, A T O, were the remaining point makers. Warden, A T O, broke the 16-lb. shotput record with a toss of 41'-4½", which proved too much for the runners-up. Gage, Independents, and Sedlis and Savin, S P. There was a three-way tie in the pole vault. Spasyk, Phi Delt, O'Connell, S A E, and Vreeland, S A E, all reaching 9'-6". Paterson, Delta Psi, was just under that. The Phi Delts took three places out of four in the high jump, with Mott placing first with 5'-8". Grosvenor, S A E, was in a tie for second with Pratt, Phi Delts, while Walgren, the last of the Phi Delt trio, took the remaining point. The running broad jump was copped by Mott, Phi Delt, with a leap of 10'-2", while Taylor, S A E, Burgess, Sigma Phi, and Becker, Phi Sig, followed close behind.

On the track, O'Connell came through for the S A E's to win the 440 in 0:60.1. Pulleyn, Phi Delta, Burgess, Sigma Phi, and Davis, Delta Psi, followed. F. Webster, Independent, easily won the mile in 5:09.3, with Hoyt, Sigma Nu, Corlis, Delta Psi, and Clark, Sigma Nu, coming far behind. Mott came through again for the Phi Delts to win the 30-yard high hurdles in 0:04.5. Allen, Sigma Phi, Pratt, Phi Delt, and Shortle, Phi Delt, followed. Spasyk and Shortle, both Phi Delts, tied for the 30-yard dash in 0:03.8. Sweeney, Delta Psi, and Pulleyn, Phi Delt, were close behind. Lockwood, Phi Delt freshman, broke the 880 record with a clocking of 2:15.2, while Burgess, Sigma Phi, C. Webster, Independent, and Pulleyn, Phi Delt, were well behind.

The teams finished as follows:

Team	Points
Phi Delta Theta	42⅝
Sigma Alpha Epsilon	17⅛
Independents	15
Sigma Phi	10
Alpha Tau Omega	9
Delta Psi	6
Sigma Nu	6
Tau Epsilon Phi	3
Phi Sigma Delta	1
Kappa Sigma	0
Lambda Iota	0

Keep Working Says Post

"Practice makes perfect," is the keynote to Archie Post's pre-season track sessions. Track requires a man to be in the acme of condition and much effort must be given by the aspirant. There now remains but one week before spring recess within which the candidates can limber up before commencing the outdoor practices.

"It has been the tendency in the past few years," stated Coach Archie Post, "for the men to take it easy after the completion of the indoor track meet. A great deal of valuable time is then lost since the spring vacation interrupts the practices following the interfraternity meet. Following vacation there are but two short weeks before the first meet with Williams. As it stands the track men need all the preparatory workouts they can possibly receive. An idler is as welcome as "shin splints."

Many of the positions are wide open as a result of graduation. This should be an encouraging factor for the sophomores who will be able to procure experience for future campaigns.

V. Athletic.

A. To provide an organization through which non-fraternity men may participate in intramural and campus athletics and to coordinate their participation in these activities.

B. To foster intramural athletics under the aegis of the Intramural Council.

Sunny South for Progressive Cats

Pitching Staff Strong; University of Pa. Opener

"Progress" seems to be the best descriptive adjective which reveals the results of a month's hard training in the cage for the 1941 edition of the Catamount baseball squad. The drills will be speeded up this week with every candidate trying his utmost to grab off a seat on the train when the squad leaves for the Sunny South on Friday morning. Out of the forty candidates struggling for a position only fifteen will be selected for the jaunt down south.

Coach Gardner should have some difficulty in choosing five pitchers from twelve of the outstanding candidates. This group consists of Bob Carlson, Clarence Akley, Norm Strassburg, Al Shaw, John Zellinger, Roy Alberghini, Dick Clausing, All Caldwell, Walt Dorian, Dick Iby, Larry Agan and Larry Burgess.

John Spasyk, Jim Corbett and Pontiff Cain are the leading catching candidates. Charlie Smith also looks good behind the platter. Spasyk and Smith are both capable of handling other positions with equal ease.

Of the infield race, Coach Gardner says, "There seems to be more infield material this year than we have had in a long time." In every position men are two and three deep. The outfield is in a very similar state. The presence of several fly chasers keeps competition keen and everybody working.

This last week there have been numerous infield drills, and the hustle displayed has Coach Gardner pleased. If the spirit continues Vermont will field a snappy nine on Saturday when they tee off against the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

On the following Monday the Cats face George Washington University. On April 1 the team will take a two-day stand against the University of Virginia. They meet the powerful University of Maryland on April 3 and Navy on the following day. The itinerant nine returns to Pennsylvania for two days to engage Lehigh at Bethlehem and Villanova at Villanova. The nine-game trip closes on April 8 at New Haven with a contest against Yale University.

Will Frank Repeat?

Yesterday marked the opening of the annual hexathlon competition for the James E. Donahue trophy and the title of the school's number one all-around athlete. The events which are selected from track and field include the 100-yard dash, the rope climb, the mile run (Monday's events), the high jump, the broad jump, and the shotput. The last three of these events will be held tomorrow. Scoring in the hex is accomplished by setting a certain time or distance as the event may warrant, as average and adding or subtracting points from the competitor's score according to his comparison with the average. As far as we know, in the last decade Bud Budzyna was the only man to win the title of hexathlon champion more than once. Frank Taylor, upon whose athletic versatility we do not have to expound, this year has a chance to share with Bud the distinction of winning the title for a second time. Frank finished way out in front last year, but it will be no easy matter for him to repeat this year. The physical education office announces that competition is stiff!

Going South!

Coach Larry Gardner has but four days in which to select his fourteen candidates from a roster of forty for a trip through Dixie. Of these fourteen chosen ones, five will be pitchers, eight will fill regular positions, and one will be a utility man. Larry is lucky in that many of his candidates show a great deal of versatility, and this fact may aid him in his selection of material. Johnny Spasyk, who may do most of the catching, can also hold his own in the infield, having played all of last year around the keystone sack. Carlson and Shaw, two of the foremost pitching aspirants, are pretty good with the hickory and can be used as gardners if they're needed. Bob Doherty is as much at home on second as at the initial sack, and Conrad can be utilized at any position.

Mostly a Conditioner

The trek southward should not be looked upon as a northern invasion designed to bring back southern scalps. The trip is essentially a conditioner for more important battles to be fought later, up north. The boys will absorb a little southern sunshine, the outfielders will get a chance to shag a few flies, and with nine games under their belts the team will return veterans ready for all future competition.

The conditioning competition begins on March 29, when the Cats open against a powerful Pennsylvanian aggregation, seven of whom faced the Cats last year. From here the tour leads to Washington, Virginia, Maryland, Navy, Lehigh Villanova and Yale. Bon voyage!

Phi Delts Mop Up

Saturday's interfraternity track meet in which the Phi Delts accomplished a general mopping up may be some indication of Coach Archie Post's strength in field events this year. Zan Warden cracked the existing shotput record with a toss of 41 feet 4½ inches. He also throws the discus and with constant training he may develop into a formidable opponent in both these events. Hugo Squires lofted the 35-pound hammer 40 feet. We don't know what this predicts for the 16-pound hammer or the discus, but it sure shows that plenty of power exists there. Bert Mott, from last year's frosh track team, annexed first places in the high jump, broad jump and high hurdles. Johnny Spasyk also gained a couple of first-place ties, one in the 30-yard dash and another in the pole vault. Watch out for your second sacker, Larry!

W. A. A. Notes

The Members' Party, a unique feature in the winter program of W. A. A. will be held at Southwick tonight. This year there will be the initiation of the new cabinet, the final game of the Green and Gold first teams, and a rotation party. Refreshments will be served. Attractive invitations have been sent out, and remembering the huge success of last year's party, we expect a large crowd. Barbara Gallagher '42, Catherine Peterson '42, and Nancy Goodwin '42 will be in charge.

Basketball

The second team Green and Gold basketball game will be held Tuesday at 4.15.

There will be a Gold Key meeting at the Phi Sigma Delta House Thursday, March 27 at 8 p.m.

Burning Building Beholden to Bum

"He's no bum!"

So agreed members of the Burlington fire department last Wednesday morning when they learned that it was the seven-year-old Chow dog, "Bum," of Sgt. and Mrs. James A. Pickett, 106 Colchester Ave., which woke up his owners when an electric refrigerator became overheated and caught fire.

The Picketts heard the dog barking and scratching on their bedroom door from the hallway and they got up to investigate. They found the kitchen filled with smoke.

The fire department was summoned at 5.48 a.m., and upon arrival discovered the mechanical part of the refrigeraator afire. The flames spread to the kitchen wall and ceiling, doing much damage there before being extinguished by the department.

Mrs. Pickett said the fire might have gained much more headway had she and her husband not been awakened by their Chow dog, "Bum."

Aside from the tremendous task of supervising operation of civilian pilot training program during 1940—a task complicated by the sudden "speedup" when the program was greatly expanded almost overnight in the middle of the year—a large part of the civil aeronautics administration's energy was devoted to "streamlining" the ground and flight curricula. This was done to make them more adaptable to the requirements of participating academic institutions and flying schools. Operating procedures were simplified, and a comprehensive set of textbooks was issued.

As experience was gained in the conduct of the program, necessary changes and revisions were made in both ground and flight curricula. Procedures for participants and various report forms were simplified in so far as possible.

Ten books covering all subjects taught in both ground and flight portions of the courses were prepared. Eight of these books were student texts and the other two were instructor's manuals in the various subjects: aircraft operation and flight maneuvers; civil air regulations; navigation; meteorology; radio, aerodynamics; aircraft; and powerplants. Arrangements were made whereby the various books were made available to the general public at a low cost by the superintendent of documents, Government Printing Office.

The ten pilot training books are:

Flight Instructor's Manual (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 5).

Digest of Civil Air Regulations for Pilots (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 22).

Civil Pilot Training Manual (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 23).

Practical Air Navigation (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 24).

Meteorology for Pilots (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 25).

Aerodynamics for Pilots (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 26).

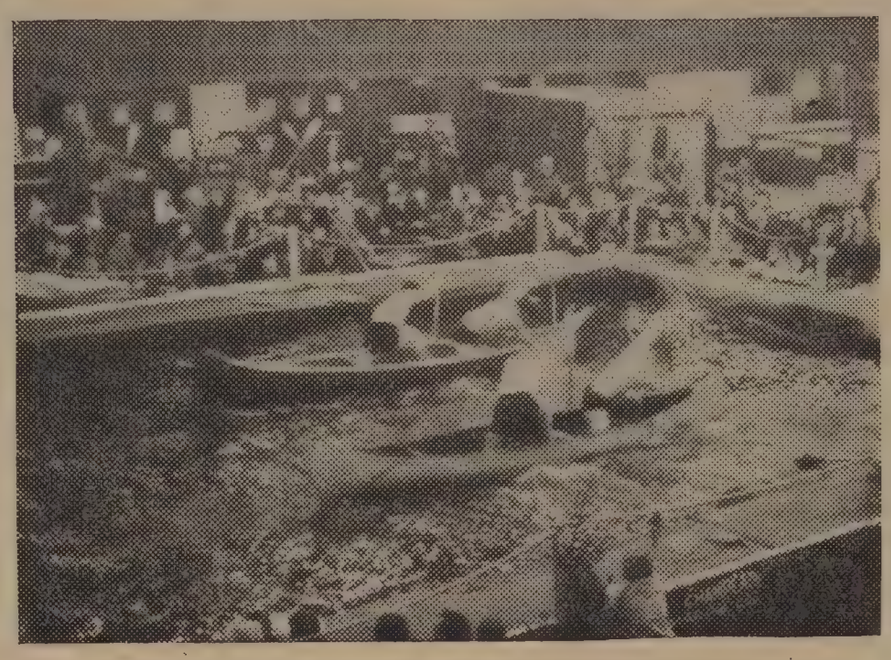
Pilots' Airplane Manual (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 27).

Pilots' Powerplant Manual (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 28).

Pilots' Radio Manual (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 29).

Ground Instructor's Manual (Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 30).

All of these were prepared by the civil aeronautics administration except "Practical Air Navigation," which was prepared for the administration by the coast and geodetic survey, and "Meteorology for Pilots," prepared by the Weather Bureau.



The complete set, in conjunction with the curricula of ground and flight courses developed by the administration for the civilian pilot training program, embodies the government's recommendations and suggestions, based on extensive research of its many qualified experts, for teaching ground school subjects which the good pilot should know, and aiding in teaching of various flight maneuvers.

Vermont Sportsmen's Show to Open Wednesday at Memorial Auditorium

American Canoe Association experts compete in series of novel events in big indoor pool at Burlington Memorial Auditorium this week.

Sponsored by the Chittenden County Fish and Game Club, Inc., the seventh annual Vermont Sportsmen's Show opens in Burlington Memorial Auditorium next Wednesday afternoon with its own indoor pool, larger than that used last year, and a pageant of the sports of all seasons. A featured attraction every afternoon and evening will be the canoe tug-of-war and tilting competitions and exhibitions of canoe handling by expert teams representing the American Canoe Association, national governing body of this amateur sport. An added feature each evening is a stage-and-runway parade around the pool presenting the sports of all seasons, from skiing to swimming, badminton to basketball. Other attractions will be exhibitions of archery and rifle shooting, log rolling acrobatics, fly and bait casting and other activities. Among the exhibits which fill the building are the Vermont State exhibit direct from the Boston, New York and Philadelphia Sportsmen's Shows, and displays of live trout, pheasants, waterfowl and game animals. Boats of all types are displayed around the pool and an automobile show fills the lower floor. Talking motion pictures are also shown at every performance.

The proceeds of the Vermont Sportsmen's Show each year are returned to the public through additional propagation, purchase and stocking of fish and game in open waters and covers by the Chittenden County Fish and Game Club, Inc.

A HAPPY SPRING VACATION

VOL. 59 BURLINGTON, VERMONT, FRIDAY, MARCH 28, 1941 NUMBER 45

Diamond Squad Heads South Today; Capt. Taylor Benched By Hand Injury

Team Shapes Up as Strong Unit Despite Lack of Outdoor Practice

Five Hurlers Picked for Trip

The hopes of a successful Southern jaunt were dealt a severe blow when the Green and Gold captain and star performer, Frankie Taylor, injured his left hand in a rough-house scuffle at the S A E house, Tuesday evening. The injury was especially inopportune due to the fact that it will prevent Frank from successfully defending his hexathlon title, as well as the baseball setback. His left hand is strapped up after having been X-rayed to determine the extent of the injury. According to Dr. E. W. Pike, who is caring for Taylor, the slight fracture is not too serious. It seems that the injury turned out to be a slight fracture and separation in the bone at the base of the fleshy part of the thumb, near the wrist. It may be a good six weeks before Frank is in the harness again.

One of the most outstanding and spontaneous examples of true sportsmanship this reporter has had the pleasure of encountering occurred when Coach Gardner gave Frank Taylor the opportunity to make the trip South even though he could not be in uniform. Despite the fact that the 1,600-mile tour is the goal of every baseball player in the school, Frank turned it down of his own free volition to let some other fellow have the chance to go South. Frankie was afraid that he would be "deadwood," and wanted someone else to secure the benefit from the jaunt. That one incident speaks volumes for the character of one Frank Taylor.

Coach Gardner has selected the fourteen men who, by dint of hard work and a display of outstanding ability, are to leave Friday morning for the sunny Southland. The tentative line-up will be something like this when the Cats tee off against the University of Pennsylvania on Saturday afternoon: Hank Beauchemin, first base; Johnny Spasyk, second base; Dick Healy, shortstop; Hazen Wood, third base; Sig Sysko, Bob Doherty, and Don Maley in the outfield; Charlie Smith behind the plate; and the pitchers, Bob Carlson, Clarence Akley, Red Dorian, Al Shaw and Roy Alberghini. Conrad will be used as utility inasmuch as he is versatile and can fill in most anywhere.

On paper this squad measures up to standard. It has a lot of pepper, a will to win, and a good deal of ability. That veteran infield should go out and get a number of well-hit balls and should be of invaluable aid to the pitchers. The hitting has been very good in the cage, but it will be hard to tell definitely what kind of a hitting team Coach Gardner has until they are outside. The pitching is an unknown quantity as yet, but potentially there are some very good throwers out there. Bob Carlson is the only pitcher to see any great amount of experience.

SAE's Win Cup In Interfraternity Sing Third Time

Delta Psi Takes Second Place Honors; Fred Logan, Director

For the third time in a row, Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity won the Carroll Trophy presented by Prof. Daniel Carroll in the annual interfraternity sing held Thursday, March 27 at Southwick. Delta Psi received honorable mention.

The winning fraternity's selections were "Give Thanks and Sing," "The Musical Trust," and "Violets" (not in competition). Delta Psi, runners-up, offered "Winter Song," and "The Silent Night." Other selections on the program were "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" and "The Dungeon Song" by Alpha Tau Omega; "What Shall We Do With the Drunken Sailor?" and "Jolly-olly-oh" by Sigma Chi; "Eight Bells" and "Toast to Phi Delta Theta" by Phi Delta Theta; "Rain On the River" and "Dance My Comrades" by Kappa Sigma, and "All of the Time" and "Vermont, My Vermont" by Phi Sigma Delta.

The Independents, though not allowed to enter competition, nevertheless participated with "The Hunter's Farewell" and "Dear Land of Home."

Following the main part of the program, the audience joined in with all the singers in singing "I've Been Working on the Railroad," "There's a Long, Long Trail A'Winding" and "Keep the Home Fires Burning" (sung at the same time), several rounds of "Three Blind Mice," and "John Brown Had a Little Indian."

Director of the Sing was Fred Logan '41 and judges of the evening were Prof. Earl G. Bennett and Mr. I. Pappoutsakis of the music department and Mr. Joe Mahnyr, leader of the R. O. T. C. Band. The Interfraternity Sing Committee consisted of John Costello in charge of seating; Charles Shortle, awards; Meyers Reynolds and Robert Thayer, programs, and Paul Corley, publicity.

Contrary to last year's rules, each fraternity was allowed to choose any song. This arrangement provided more varying entertainment to the large audience present, since no selections were repeated this year. Some of the fraternities took the opportunity to present their fraternity songs, while others offered musical novelties.

Taylor Elected to Boulder Society

Frankie Taylor '41, a Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and one of U. V. M.'s most outstanding athletes, has been elected to Boulder, senior men's honorary society.

This year Frankie has captained football and baseball. He has competed in Interfraternity Athletics and has won this year's Interfraterniay Bowling Contest.

The student body extend their congratulations to Frank and his election to Boulder.

The prize for the best essay is to be $100, and results will be announced sometime before the close of school in June. The essay may be written on any type or phase of history, and there is no set length. The paper must be a scholarly presentation of the material, showing a mastery of the subject. The only provisions are that it must be typewritten on standard size paper and double-spaced; also it must be signed anonymously. As a key, in a sealed envelope the real name and pen name of the contestant will be given.

This prize is awarded by an anonymous donor in the memory of Prof. Samuel E. Emerson, who was head of the History Department of the University of Vermont for many years.

Professor Evans states that from all reports many students have been working on essays, and that he believes the contest will be a success.

Something About Democracy

Elsewhere in this issue will be found an article written by one of the refugee students here at the University. The title of the article is significant—"The Future of Democracy." Despite all the threats to liberty the writer has witnessed; despite the existing world situation, he can still express a faith in the ideals of individual freedom. To American students viewing with perplexity the present trend of events, no carload of rhetoric could be half as inspiring as those four words—"The Future of Democracy."

Certainly we in America today have no excuse for overlooking attacks on freedom. We have watched the process by which it was undermined in other countries. Today we have countless refugees in this country who constantly impress upon us the importance of fighting for our principles. We must not look tolerantly upon such individuals as lucky people enjoying our generous hospitality, but as equals bearing us a vital message and strengthening our aspirations to an ordered world.

More than that, we in America today have no excuse for narrow prejudices and an idea of democracy which includes only a few nations and the maintenance of outworn principles. The people of other nations now residing in this country are constant reminders that democracy is not a purely American product like apple pie or hot dogs. Let us not make democracy an Anglo-Saxton virtue. Democracy in its broadest sense—continual progress and international harmony—is the property of all intelligent minds. Democracy is everybody's battle. Once we have arrived at that understanding we can never doubt the continuance of democracy. For when your idea of democracy is an all-embracing principle and not something material vested in destructible institutions no one can destroy that faith. Certainly those refugees who are now seeking shelter in all corners of the world have nothing material to bolster their faith—their government is gone, their homes are gone, all traces of their former life and liberty have been swept away—yet that faith is no weaker. A faith is something you have inside yourself and can look for when the symbols for it are gone. We, who still have those symbols, must realize this, lest eventually the faith vanishes and only a shell remains.

Homeward Bound

The spring vacation beginning tomorrow marks the beginning of the end of another school year. After next week things move pretty fast and June is not very far off. Homeward bound it would perhaps be profitable for all of us to speculate a little on just what vacation means—a chance to rest up and come back fresh for the last round, a chance to think about the things learned in the past few months, a chance to renew contacts with one's family. Not very important? Perhaps. But then it's the little things that count. So make the most of it. Happy spring vacation.

Brickbats And Bouquets

By Roger B. Hunting

A Bouquet.—To Frankie Taylor, on his recent election to the Boulder Society. Frank merited this honor as much as any man at the University of Vermont ever did, and his election is certain to have the approval of everybody on the campus and in the state generally. Bouquet also to Frank for his attitude in stepping aside from having a tourist's berth on the Southern trip—few would have turned down the opportunity to go, but Frank felt that a man with two hands to work with would be of more use.

Bouquet, in passing, to the Boulder Society for its election of Frank—it is a common failing of those who have been elevated to high rank to try to see as few as possible share that rank with them. Boulder is to be commended for its action.

A Bouquet—To "old man weather" for the arrival of spring-like days—they are welcome after the long hard winter—Brickbats though—to those who fail to clear off their sidewalks—making hapless males, who don't wear rubbberboots, slap along in the slush.

Brickbats—To those professors who assign hour exams for the week after vacation. Why can't the students be allowed one carefree week without looking forward to an hour exam hanging over them the week they get back to school.

A Bouquet—To Phi Delta Theta for its cleansweep victory in the Interfraternity Track Meet and in the Relays. With that powerful freshman crew the Phi Delts stand good chances of repeating for several years to come—would it be partisan of me to award bouquets to the S A E's for coming in a good second in both events?

And Brickbats—To the rest of the fraternities who, feeling that one fraternity seems to dominate the field, fail to enter teams and make an effort to win. Only four teams entered the relays—the competition was of the best however, and the Phi Delts came within .1 of a second of breaking the record. More teams would have made the relays more interesting, though. The track meet competition was even better, but most of the entrants were from two, or three, fraternities, with only isolated entrants from the other houses. Remember—upsets have been known to occur—so let's keep teams in there even when the chances seem slim.

A Bouquet—To the members of Battery B, 258th Field Artillery at Fort Ethan Allen. The comments we received in a letter from them were far more intelligent and constructive than any arguments put up by any of the letters from other sources. In general the writers opposed our views on the subject of the dances—but they did so with good reasons—also may we quote a passage which we think adds strength to our argument.

". . . none of them expected to be treated like children, as they were. Had they known what was to take place at the conclusion of the dance, not one of them would have shown up."

To the boys at Fort Ethan Allen go my compliments and my sympathy.

Well, that's that for this issue—have a good vacation—and we'll see you the week after next.

Lieut. Rogers To Revisit Campus

"Lieut. L. M. Rogers, U. S. Marine Corps Recruiting Officer, will be at the University of Vermont for his second visit on Thursday and Friday, March 27 and 28. Lieutenant Rogers will be here for the purpose of obtaining seniors to take special training at Quantico, Va., leading to a commission as Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve.

On Thursday morning there will be a group meeting of all seniors who are interested and, later in the day, there will be an opportunity for individual interviews. Information regarding the time and place of the group meeting may be had at the military department.

The Marine Corps program offers an excellent chance to college seniors who are not enrolled in the R. O. T. C. Any man accepted for enlistment in the Marine Corps training school is not eligible for call under the Selective Service Act. All seniors who are interested in a commission in the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve should meet Lieutenant Rogers on Thursday morning."

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

Passing hasty judgment on the Lease-Lend Bill in last Friday's Cynic was a wee bit too much for me to stomach. This so-called "Campus Compass" column erroneously stated that opinion is "preponderantly in favor of the new law." I wonder? It is interesting to note that two of the three professors interviewed skillfully evaded the question and the third said that he favored it strongly, but gave no basis for his reasoning. As for the students questioned, how much do they actually know about this bill? Have they discussed it and truly considered the inevitable consequences? Were these students picked at random or merely because they favored the bill? I object strenuously to this bill and set forth the following answers to the objectionable support of this bill:

1. The passage of this bill was certainly a strong step—but not in the right direction! Our generation will pay for this bill in blood and future generations in taxes.

2. It is definitely not the only thing they could have done under the circumstances. They could have not passed it and this they should have done.

3. We present material aid now and if there be one so foolish as to think that manpower is not included in this Lease-Lend Bill, let him reconsider that the passage of this bill was an inevitable step to the declaration of war. In fact, if the title had been changed to Declaration of War in place of the subtler Lease-Lend it would have fitted the bill much more appropriately. Instead of avoiding active participation in the present world conflict we are now actively participating. And how, may I ask, is Britain fighting for "our democracy"? How does the British navy guard our shores and trade in the Atlantic? Does this infer that we have two rowboats and a punt for a navy? How can we build up our own defenses when we are tossing all the power of both labor and capital into the pot for the aid of Britain? Are we tied up by "historical bonds" and "cultural trade" with Britain in any other way but that once we fought and won a war against this very empire which we are now so ardently supporting? We fought this war, I remind you, to throw off the "historical bonds" of English slavery and the "cultural trade" of excess taxation without representation. If this so-called "cultural trade" means, however, that British culture is manifest on this continent, may I again remind you. that America has her own culture and is dependent upon no nation or nations for the advancement of her culture.

4. If it is democracy we are fighting for, why didn't our government throw her coals on the fire when the domination of democratic China by imperialistic Japan began some four years ago—or before Nazi Germany had swallowed up the majority of the tiny, defenseless democracies in Europe? Czechoslovakia, Finland, Poland and many other helpless nations of Europe fell under the terrible blows of the German sword while the United States sat back and did no more than feel sorry for the poor guys!

5. Mention of the unprecedented magnanimous power that this bill granted to our President was conspicuously absent from all comments. Isn't this a rather important factor in passing judgment on this bill? Is it democracy that places so much power in the hands of one man? Quoting a well-known authority on political science, "It is not that I do not trust the honesty, integrity and good intentions of our President, I merely distrust his judgment," he said.

I recommend a little more consideration of such important topics before passing judgment.

The Future of Democracy

By Jacob Katz '44

I cannot understand how students can think that "there isn't any future to democratic institutions." Can't they see from the earliest beginning of history up to the present time the continuous strife of mankind for democracy and freedom? Our stand towards attempts to extinguish the flame of liberty should be our greater efforts to preserve it and not admitting a defeat which is not real. Don't they see that democracy, that freedom, cannot die? That the fight for the free development of the human personality cannot cease? Freedom and democracy can be suppressed for a time in certain places, but different conditions in various countries make it possible to begin the struggle again and there is no power in the world which can stop the passing of ideas, especially of freedom and democracy, across frontiers. The fight will continue—it cannot be stopped—and that it continues is already the fundamental condition of its final triumph. Civilization cannot be destroyed; it is a moral concept and as long as the human spirit progresses the fight for a better future will go on.

As soon as we realize that we will not hear any more: "Who are we to object to something so old and established as war?" We should object, not by false pacifism, of course, but by making those conditions possible which will give us security. There are possibilities and, even if there are not any at the present time, such statements admit defeat and youth should never think anything impossible. Youth is dynamic and if it is dynamic it will find a solution; if not today then tomorrow. If we try, we will go ahead; if we give up in the beginning already, we will never succeed.

We can see, therefore, that we have to take a stand on the events in the world and not shelve the issues with "we are far away." No one expressed this better than the poet John Donne when he wrote: "No man is an island entire in itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main . . . . any man's death diminishes me because I am involved in mankind."

It will be my task now to interpret to you important events of Europe, it will be your task to react and show that you are part of dynamic democracy, even in a people of 140 millions the chain is only as strong as its weakest link.

Many college newspapers discussed during the last weeks the pros and cons of food shipments to countries occupied by Germany. It is rather hard to give a clear yes or no to this issue. Mr. Hoover is of the opinion that arrangements can be made which will prevent the passing of these food materials into German hands. The English are of different opinion and there must be some reason behind it, because I cannot understand why Britain would like to see those nations weakened which are, in spite of what had happened, her friends. English opinion is fostered by reports from Czechoslovakia and Belgium. From Czechoslovakia letters arrived which stated that no food should be sent to them. They would rather want to starve a bit more than to help Germany indirectly with the food shipments received. From Belgium reports are saying that perhaps the major share of food sent from the United States to Belgium during World War 1 was diverted to feed the Germans.

I think we should try to work out an agreement between England and Germany which will allow shipments of small quantities of food, but only if it is definitely assured that the English blockade will not be harmed. We have total war today and total war means almost unbearable sufferings for the nations involved. Unfortunately they have to face these hardships so that victory may be won. I hope that with our help to England we will shorten the length of this war considerably and prevent tears being shed for children, fathers and mothers, killed by the great enemy, hunger. We have to realize, however, that in a continent whose background is concentration camps, oppression, and war, life has lost its meaning for the conquered as long as they remain in their miserable position. Wives give their blessing to husbands and mothers to their children who risk their lives in sabotage against the common enemy. They know that time has stopped for them as long as they are not free and that the death of some of them is worth while if happiness and freedom can again be secured.

America has shown her responsibility to the present situation in a magnificent way when it passed the Lease-Lend Bill. Already today we can see the results. England starts to blaze away at the invasion ports and industrial centers of Germany, the first step towards a total knockout. Yet we must not be too optimistic. Germany's power is still not broken. We have a long way to go.

Governor Wills declared the week March 17-24 as "British Aid Week"; let us help as much as we can. England is the main thing because it is active for the cause of freedom; but we should not forget the nations now under German rule and try to make some arrangements which will make them a bit happier (if they can be made happier at all). We have to show these nations our efforts to help them, so that they will stay with us and remain ready for the final battle of democracy. After all, "it is not hunger which conquers, but food; not hate, but love; not force, but freedom."

STARK RATIONS—A Day's Food in Belgium

The plate contains a piece of potato, a scrap of meat, and a dab of fat. On the table we see a hunk of bread and some tiny lumps of sugar.

New York (Special)—What you see above does not depict a meal. It shows what a Belgian gets to eat during an entire day.

He gets:—eight ounces of bread and one-third of one ounce of fat. He gets an ounce and one-half of meat, no bigger than a third of a package of cigarettes and not even one whole potato. Then he has an ounce and three-quarters of sugar.

This photograph was taken in New York City, but is based upon authentic information from overseas, sent to the National Committee on Food for the Small Democracies, of which Mr. Herbert Hoover is honorary chairman. Three famine experts whom he ordered into Belgium reported on the true situation.

Theoretically, rations are larger. For instance, there should be five potatoes in the above picture, also a tiny heap of beans, a bit of oatmeal and some "ersatz" coffee. But food to supply even these terribly restricted rations simply does not exist. What you see in the picture is what a Belgian actually gets and must live upon—today.

What does this mean?

A human needs 2400 calories daily to exist—3600 if he works.

The food values on the plate represent only 1038 calories.

Slow starvation, this. Literally! But worse is to come!

By February's end the bread ration will disappear from the picture—because bread grain stocks will be exhausted and can be replaced only from overseas.

By early March, slow starvation in Belgium is certain to become outright famine.

In the last war, America sent a billion dollars worth of food into stricken Europe. Not a single pound was lost, or diverted into any hands other than those of the people for whom it was intended.

Smith Student for Hoover Food Plan

Discusses Plans With Vermont Student Group

On March 21 and 22 Miss Frances Wilkinson of Smith College held several meetings with University of Vermont students to arouse interest in the work of the National Committee on Food for the Small Democracies. Other interested young people as well as representatives from the Y. W. C. A. and V. C. A. attended these gatherings. Miss Wilkinson explained the plan suggested by this Committee of which Herbert Hoover is chairman. Aroused by the sad plight of thirty-seven million people in the five small democracies, Finland, Belgium, Holland, Norway and Central Poland, this humanitarian organization is asking not for money, supplies or ships but an aroused public conscience to the terrible conditions which exist abroad. Miss Wilkinson answered many queries on the subject; she stated that the Hoover plan, which operated effectively in the last war, provides for absolute control of native and imported food by a Neutral Commission, thus preventing famine without helping Germany. Furthermore the plan would aid the Allies, she pointed out, because feeding these democratic peoples would "maintain their courage, sustain allegiance to ideals, rebuild morale, increase England's prestige as a humanitarian nation, and salvage native supplies from absorption." Germany would not profit if it broke the agreement because the plan provides for only 120,000 tons of imported food to be on hand at one time and if Germany should seize the entire supply it would furnish her with food for only three days, and relief would end.

Miss Wilkinson mentioned the fact that the British Government at first only reluctantly supported feeding in occupied Belgium during the last war but that after "searching investigation had proved that no supplies were diverted to Germany they described relief operations as a miracle of organization." Today if the peoples in the Low Countries and in occupied France are given food now through British and American auspices they will be potential allies when the tide of battle has turned.

At the conclusions of the meetings, Miss Wilkinson presented those who attended with a letter and several articles published by the National Committee on Food for the Small Democracies. The speaker earnestly expressed the hope that the free people of America would speak in behalf of the millions of helpless people who are enforcedly silent in these small dominated countries.

Students Want No War Intervention

By Student Opinion Surveys

Austin, Texas, March 28.—Let's keep out of war!—College youth have demanded this consistently during recent years, and last week those interviewed by Student Opinion Surveys of America in a national sampling again expressed the desire that the United States should keep away from the battle fronts. Nearly six out of every ten of those included in the survey say they do not want the U. S. Navy to intervene if Japan decides to attack British Singapore and the Dutch East Indies.

Although 10 percent of the nation's students were undecided on this issue, the remainder are divided in this fashion:

U. S. should intervene.....41 percent
U. S. should NOT intervene...59 percent

Singapore, as one of the largest naval bases in the world, and the Dutch East Indies would be strategically advantageous to Japan's Far East sea operations.

The present survey appears significant in that it shows American youth of college age still cling to the hope of keeping out of war, even on the face of ever-growing aid to England. Last November collegians asserted that averting war was more important even than helping Britain. The same decision was reached in February, 1940, the Surveys found, and during that same month students opposed compulsory military training. Even back in October, 1939, majorities declared they would not volunteer should the U. S. send troops to help England, and opposed changing the neutrality law to allow any belligerent to buy American supplies.

Despite these efforts of college students to steer clear of any foreign entanglements, a slight majority last month admitted through the Student Opinion Surveys poll, that they felt the United States could not stay out of the European conflict.

The present survey reveals that the nearer to the geographical center of the United States a student attends school, the more emphatic he is that the U. S. avoid war. This same trend has been noticed before, last month more students in the interior than along the coasts appearing more certain we could avoid the conflict.

Yale Students Are Lectured on Style

Right Dress! Present Arms! Yale student trainees preparing for the President's Review, in which all units of the Yale R. O. T. C. parade before Pres. Charles Seymour of Yale University, were cautioned and advised in a curt official order on the amenities of behavior and correct dress.

As issued the order was a far cry from the independent dress habits of Yale men who are accustomed to wearing clothes that effect a studied nonchalance and an air of insouciance.

The order read as follows: "All hands will insure cap covers, collars and shirts are clean and fit properly. Black leather shoes must be worn and must be shined. The narrow "Duncan" style collar is recommended as being of good cut and proper weight. Have your uniforms cleaned and pressed this week. Leggings will be worn for this review. Every man must realize his own responsibility for: The correct execution of movements, dress in line and marching in file, and for the correct position and alignment of his rifle. Remember the instructions you have received and carry them out."

Though this notice proved to be a blow to the student devotees of the bulging Hoover-type, button-down collar, the promulgators of odd trouser and coat combinations, the non-hat wearers, the advocates of white and two-toned dirty shoes, all nevertheless happily conformed to the pattern. The order was followed to the letter and mustering proceeded as scheduled, despite the soul-searing effects of this regulation upon the more sensitive Yale style leaders who take pride in their individuality in clothing.

W. A. A. Revels at Annual Fun Party

Faculty Competes With Picked Student Team

Tuesday night, March 25, at Southwick, W. A. A. gave its big annual fun party under the leadership of Catherine Peterson '42, Nancy Goodwin '42 and Barbara Gallagher '42.

Upon arrival the members were divided into teams, and these teams competed in ths various games. Betsey Roberts '44, and Nancy Fawcett '44 won first and second prizes respectively for the highest scores.

Immediately after the games, the women's faculty competed with a student team in a game packed full of laughs for all. The members of the faculty team were dressed in odd costumes of all sorts providing the audience with side-splitting humor.

Next came the game of the season between the Green and Gold teams with Phyllis Savage '43 and Janet Dike '43 as leaders respectively. The game was fast and thrilling for the onlookers, as the Gold gave the Green a run for their money. The final score was 18-17 in one of the best games of recent years.

The team line-ups were as follows:

GREEN

	Pts.
Barbara Lane '44, l.f.	11
Marie Scutakes '43, c.f.	6
Mary E. Metcalf '44, r.f.	2
Phyllis Savage '43, c.g.	0
Catherine Peterson '42, r.g.	0

GOLD

Following the game the installation of the new officers of W. A. A. took place. They are: President, Catherine Peterson '42; vice-president, Phyllis Savage '43; treasurer, Alice Needham '43; corresponding secretary, Betsey Roberts '44; recording secretary, Barbara Burns '43; sophomore representative, Nancy Fawcett '44; handbook and scrap book, Harriet Nelson '42; social chairman, Marjorie Abell '43; council at large, Cathryn Grier '42; publicity, Nancy Goodwin '42; health council, Natalie Spear '43; senior representative, Sally Rome '42; junior representative, Esther Gove '43.

Refreshments were then served, and the party adjourned.

Spring Track Work Coming Along Well

Archie Post says that spring practice is coming along well. On March 16, 1941, he gave his team a few pointers. The four key words to success in track as well as other athletic competition are: (1) training; (2) practice; (3) sleep; (4) diet. All members with any natural ability for some track event should develop themselves to be outstanding in that class by practice. To give one's best, the sleep angle should be watched closely because it takes more effort to be just mediocre when tired. Finally as to food he said that members of the team should eat lightly before training and try to make their third meal of the day the heavy meal.

When asked what should be eaten before going into competition he said, "About three hours before competing the following should be consumed: one lamb chop, peas, small amount of potato, little water, and dessert.

Looking over the opposition, Mr. Post is hoping for a good year. He sees strong resistance at Williams as they have been in training on an outdoor track. Union he feels will not offer much competition. Middlebury, who offered little fight last year, is expected to do better.

Whizzer White, onetime All-American halfback at Colorado University and later a Rhodes scholar, stood second in his Yale Law School class.

Racquet Wielders Practicing Daily

At present the University varsity tennis team is having its workout periods three times a week. Every spring the team has its practice sessions in the gymnasium during the period previous to the reconditioning of out-of-door courts.

Freshman racquet-swingers are anticipating their season which opens officially immediately following the spring recess.

New Tennis Courts Soon To Be Ready

To Be Used by Tennis Squad in First Match

According to Coach Carpenter, the U. V. M. tennis teams will probably play their first home match (against Union on May 6) on the new tennis courts near Centennial Field. There are six new courts and a huge parking area here which have been developed in the last few years under direction of the National Youth Administration.

In an interview with Professor Carpenter, coach of tennis for sixteen years at U. V.M., he mentioned that he has been looking forward to good facilities such as these new courts for many years. "In the past we have had only three courts for about 900 male students," he declared. He then mentioned other colleges, whose teams the University players often meet in competition, who have many more tennis courts at their disposal. He said that this season all the varsity and freshman team members will be able to practice at the same time. Also it will allow the use of a "ranking method" whereby challenge matches will be continually in play between varsity squad members and thus more men will have the chance to earn a place on the first team. When asked about the construction of the courts, Coach Carpenter replied that they had been well built by students working under the National Youth Administration which is in charge of Prof. A. D. Butterfield. Crushed stone has been placed underneath and the playing surface is of high quality clay with a very small amount of sand. One reason for the present location of the courts is the fact that the drainage there is naturally good. Three of the six courts were practically finished last fall and the others will soon be completed.

Professor Carpenter was very pleased with having the additional fine tennis courts and he expressed the hope that they were "only a start."

Women in Sports

Badminton

The State Badminton Tournament is now in swing at the "Y." Several U. V. M. students have been playing in the matches. Patricia Crowley '44 defeated Mrs. Weidman in point 11-6, 11-6 games, but in turn was defeated by Alta Knight 11-1, 11-3. In the doubles matches Eleanor Bayley and Jean Stewart '41 defeated Margaret Fake '44 and Shirley Price '44, and Mr. Chadman and Miss Barbara Crowe were victorious over Patricia Crowley and Margaret Moody '41, with an 8 and a 6 point lead in the final score. Miss Barbara Crowe of the Physical Education Department is to play in the ladies' singles and the mixed doubles finals. Also Edward Keenan, Jr., '42 is playing in the quarter finals of the mixed doubles, and the finals of the men's doubles.

The final matches to be held this week are open to the public, but the dates are not definitely set, and everyone is requested to watch the sport's page of the Burlington Free Press.

Sports Cast

By G. LITTLE

Fourteen members of the Vermont baseball squad plus Coach Gardner and Manager Slack started their annual Southern training trip this noon. Among those missing from this select group was Capt. Frank Taylor who relinquished his slot because of an injured thumb which he incurred in a friendly fraternity-house scuffle. This injury may keep Taylor inactive on the diamond for several weeks and has necessitated his dropping out of the hexathlon competition, thus losing a chance to tie Ted Budzyna's record of two consecutive wins in this event. This misfortune may also hinder Frank's chances of having another four-letter year.

Coach Archie Post has his track and field men working out daily. At present no definite prophecy as to the relative merits of the team can be made, but the squad is gradually rounding into shape. Capt. Bob Kenney and several other tracksters plan to remain on the hill over vacation for conditioning purposes.

What other Greek-letter group could have matched a 1940 Phi Delta Theta backfield of Tom Harmon, Michigan; Don Scott, Ohio State; George Franck, Minnesota, and Norm Standlee, Stanford? Understand Hank Greenberg is not kicking about giving up a prospective $21 a month job in the army for his $50,000 per year in baseball. If Hank is called in the draft his replacement will be Ned Harris, up from the Texas League. Harris, who is familiar to all Burlington and Northern League fans, played in the outfield for Rutland in 1938 and walked off with batting honors that year with a neat .416 average. Long Island University walked off with the Madison Square Garden invitation basketball title over the week-end, by soundly trouncing Ohio University; while out in Madison, Wis., Dartmouth after receiving an early defeat at hands of Wisconsin, eventual winner, came in strong in their last two games and annexed third place in National Collegiate Tournament (Eastern Division).

Intramural Notes

With the hexathlon meet already past the half way point, the handball tournament finished, and the badminton doubles tournament drawing to a successful close, Vermont's winter-term sports bid adieu by fading from the spotlight. Competition was extremely keen, and the students who participated in these extra-curriculum activities had to demonstrate some fine performances before producing the "bacon" in their respective entrances.

As this page goes to press, the final results have not been tabulated in the hexathlon meet. Commencing with five entries, the field was narrowed to only four determined men, when last year's champion, Frankie Taylor, dropped out. Frankie had to withdraw after injuring his left thumb in a friendly fraternity house tussle. X-ray pictures showed no broken bones, but a muscle strain which would prove bothersome if he participated further in the scheduled hexathlon events. Although he was in fourth place at the time the injury was sustained, the next three events were his strongest. He was 373 points behind the leader, Bob Lockwood.

The freshman leader, Bob Lockwood, is currently ahead of his nearest rival, Eddie O'Connell by 50 points. Bob won the mile run and placed second in the rope climb and high jump. The other two contestants, Howard Vreeland and Bert Mott, last year freshman track star, are in third and fifth place respectively.

The summary (not including shot put and broad jump): 110-yard dash, average 14 seconds: Taylor 13.2, O'Connell 13.3, Mott 13.4, Lockwood 13.8, and Vreeland 13.9.

Rope climb, average 12 seconds: Vreeland 8.4, Lockwood 9.2, O'Connell 9.6, Taylor 13.5, Mott 0.0.

One mile run, average 5 minutes, 30 seconds: Lockwood 5:20.8, Taylor 5:39.8, O'Connell 5:45, Mott 5:58.4, and Vreeland 6:22.9.

Running high jump: Mott, first; tie for second between Vreeland and Lockwood; O'Connell, fourth.

Four teams entered the handball doubles tournament. The team composed of Bob Warsaw and Stan Fieber won the elimination tourney by defeating Milt Kaufman and Sid Cycleman in two out of a three game match, 21-19, 21-19, The games were played on a three-wall court with the contestants making their own arrangements for playing.

The winners were subjected to two games of furious handball, and as the scores indicate the victories were close.

B. Rynowecer captured both the badminton singles and handball singles title. From a field of eighteen entrants Rynowecer emerged victorious by beating Bob Warsaw in handball 21-13, 21-15. Matches were played on a four-wall court. He procured the badminton title by defeating D. Dana.

Results of the badminton doubles tournament are not complete, since the team of Keenan and Dana have to play the winner of Goss-Kaufman vs. Doherty-Browne. The championship game will be played this Friday night.

Conscription Hits Medical College

Draft Board Must Decide About Freshmen

When the Selective Service Bill was passed, the intention of its originators was clear to all, and approved by the majority: the training of an army for defense. With the passing of the bill, many problems arose, some of which were quickly solved, and others of which are still pending solution. Among the latter is the question of the status of medical students.

Provision has been made whereby college students who have registered for the draft have been deferred until the end of the school year, or July 1. They are now in class II. At the end of this period, however, they must be reclassified, and at that point the problem begins.

An attempt has been made by Dean Kemp, and other influential persons, to convince the local draft board that students studying medicine are necessary to national health and so eligible for deferment to class IIA. This question has been left entirely to the local boards and must be decided according to their discretion. In New York City, the board has decided that medical students and internes are necessary to national health and has allowed deferment, but the question here in Vermont is not yet settled.

As for the number of students in the Medical School who are affected, practically all of the first two classes are involved. The College has a medical unit of the R. O. T. C. which almost all junior and senior students join, automatically becoming First Lieutenants in the Medical Reserve and free from the draft. The unit has a quota of 28:32 so that not every man who wants to join is able to. However, if the sophomore class survives this next call, it will become part of the reserve unit next year, and so free from conscription. Next year's freshman class will be too young to have registered, so that the present freshman class is the main worry.

Nothing will be done until July, but if the draft board fails to see the issue, what will be the result? An army is necessary—yes, but a doctor doesn't operate with a bayonet or amputate with a machine gun. An army moves on its stomach—but it depends on the doctors whether it moves at all, and if medical students and internes are drafted—where will the army doctors be?

High I. Q. No Longer Criterion for Genius

State College, Pa.—(ACP)—So-called "intellectuals" who know all the answers oftentimes are "unintelligent," a University of Iowa psychology professor told the American Psychological Association here.

"When carried to extremes, mental stunts such as cross-word puzzles and question-and-answer superficiality have the effect of making a waste-basket of the human mind," said Dr. George D. Stoddard. "Sheer accumulation of information is the antithesis of intelligent activity."

Dr. Stoddard charged that present intelligence tests overlook "originality," and "measure only items which have been overlearned and do not show what new solutions or original patterns a child or an adult can produce.

"Therefore, an I.Q. of 140 or even more can no longer be considered an evidence of genius."

New Book Corner . .

The lending library in the College Bookstore and the University library are constantly receiving new books which should enable students to keep abreast of modern fiction. The following short reviews give the highlights of new books in the lending library.

Out of the Night—Jan Valtin

This is the moving and powerful story of a young professional revolutionist whose activities extended all over the world, although they were centered in Germany, the land of his birth. It covers his life from his youth, when he became involved in Communist insurrections, down to the present time. After many years of Communist activity he fell into the clutches of the Gestapo, where after several months of cruel, inhuman treatment he managed to escape to this country. Here in the safety of the United States he has written the tragic story of his life.

The World's Great Letters—Edited by M. Lincoln Shuster

This book contains the most historic dramatic and memorable letters of the past twenty years. Each letter is prefaced by a biographical prelude giving significant facts about the life and personality of the writer, and the person to whom it was addressed. Following each letter is an epilogue giving the result of the correspondence. Here are love letters, travel letters, shocking letters, passionate letters, and letters that made history.

Sapphira and the Slave Girl—Willa Cather

This is a beautiful story written in quiet tone, of an escape from human slavery. The setting is in Virginia in 1856. The main characters are a miller's family and Nancy, a negro slave. This is a story of danger, a prison, a villainous plot, and finally an escape, written in an exciting manner with a strangely mellow quality, as only Willa Cather can write.

Embezzled Heaven—Franz Werfel

Old Teta, a strong, shrewd, ignorant, human, craftily attempts to buy a sure place for herself in heaven. Expectation grows as the old woman roams the Bohemian countryside in search of her nephew. The story does not end when he is found, but there begins exquisite spiritual beauty as Teta with her fellow pilgrims visit the Vatican.

For Whom the Bell Tolls—Ernest Hemingway

This book pictures the Spanish Civil War as a romance of human nature quite apart from and above its environment of war. Striking personalities of the Spanish type become especially intimate due to Hemingway's power of dramatization in dialogue. The plot is the attempt of a young American in Republican forces to blow up a steel bridge at the beginning of a major attack.

Mrs. Miniver—Jan Struther

This is a perfect portrait of the twentieth century's only humane achievement, the civilized woman. Mrs. Miniver is the wife of an architect and the mother of three children. Her life with its fullness, her delightful sense of humor, as well as the homely atmosphere of the entire book, make up a novel that you will not forget, and one that you will enjoy from beginning to end.

Dean Kemp Makes Gift of Historical Material to College of Medicine

Two gifts, one of them making available important historical material from medical science's discoveries in the physiology of digestion, and the other adding extensive publication reference material on immunology, have come to the Medical Library of the College of Medicine of the University of Vermont, through Dean Hardy A. Kemp.

A complete file of 37 volumes of the Journal of Immunology, beginning with Volume 1, 1916, is the gift to the library of Dr. J. H. Black of Dallas, Texas.

Twenty-seven photostats from the rare William Beaumont collection of the Washington University School of Medicine Library, St. Louis, Missouri, have been sent to the Vermont Medical Library by Miss Ella B. Laurence, librarian at the Missouri Medical School.

The photostats include title pages of the different editions of "Experiments and Observations of Gastric Juice and the Physiology of Digestion," Doctor Beaumont's pioneer work, based upon his experiments with Alexis St. Martin, who had by accident received a bullet wound in the wall of his stomach, leaving an opening which allowed observation of the action of the stomach in digestion.

Notes on St. Martin's Stomach

There is a copy of a page from Doctor Beaumont's notebook giving the account of Alexis St. Martin's accident. Other photostats of Doctor Beaumont's notes include a manuscript page with an account of numerous experiments on St. Martin's stomach, and a page from the doctor's notebook, kept during the War of 1812, describing the battle of Little York, now Toronto.

Beaumont's license to practice medicine, granted June, 1812, by the Third Medical Society of the State of Vermont, is of State interest.

There are facsimiles of five pages of articles of agreement between Doctor Beaumont and Alexis St. Martin, made October, 1832, in which St. Martin agreed to submit to the experiments of Doctor Beaumont under conditions which were fully set forth.

Letters Tell of Honors

Several of the letters and documents tell of honors coming to Doctor Beaumont. There is a notice of election to honorary membership in the Medical Society of the Territory of Michigan, March 3, 1825. There is Doctor Beaumont's commission as surgeon of the United States Army, signed by President John Quincy Adams, February 15, 1828. There is a copy of the letter informing Doctor Beaumont of his election to the chair of surgery of the Medical Department of St. Louis University, dated October 4, 1936, and coming from William G. Eliot, Jr., secretary of the board of trustees of the Medical Department and founder of Washington University in St. Louis, whence came to the University of Vermont's Medical Library these records of one of medical history's pioneers.

A copy of the Chester Harding portrait of William Beaumont, a certificate of copyright of the first edition of Doctor Beaumont's book, and four pages of the first four experiments, are among the Beaumont documents which have now become available for medical students and physicians at the Medical Library.

Museum Exhibits Modern Paintings

A wide range of paintings by a group of modern American artists was opened for public exhibition in the art gallery of the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont on Saturday, March 22. The collection came to the Museum from the Wood Art Gallery in Montpelier, and is scheduled to remain until April 10. Many of the artists whose paintings are shown are Vermont residents during all or part of the year. Many have exhibited at either the Northern or Southern Vermont art shows.

Artists who are represented include E. W. Dickinson, Herbert Meyer, Hilda Belcher, Warren Newcomb, Wallace Fahnestock, Harriet S. Miller, John Lillie, H. E. Schnakenberg, Mary S. Powers, Phil Dyke, Paul Sample (well known from many local exhibitions), Millard Sheets, H. Giles, Arnold Blanch, Joseph Stella, Dorothy Varian, Sydney Laufman, Karl Fortess, Georgina Klitgaard, Austin Mecklem, Reginald Marsh, Horace Brown.

Around the second-floor balcony are dilsplayed the pick of the Museum's collection of Old Vermont Buildings photographs, which have been used in illustrations for the book, "Old Vermont Houses," published last year with Mr. H. W. Congdon of Arlington as author, as a fruit of the Museum's extensive survey of the architecture of Vermont. The collection of old Vermont buildings photographs has been exhibited on loan from the Museum in many parts of Vermont and also in a number of communities in other states.

English Students Use Magazine As Textbook

Austin, Texas—(ACP)—Freshmen students of English can now reach for a magazine instead of a textbook.

Designed in illustrated magazine format the Freshman Prose Annual—hailed by publishers as the first new idea in textbooks in fifteen years—was edited by Mrs. Mody C. Boatright, University of Texas; Robert M. Gay, Simmons college, Boston, and George S. Wykoff, Purdue, Lafayette, Indiana.

Material is grouped under five sections, college life, problems of social adjustment, democracy and war, science, and art literature—all illustrated with snap-shots, cartoons and masterpiece reproductions.

The magazine-text, introduced this fall, is already in its second printing.

Associated Students of the University of Idaho last year spent $107,031 and finished the year $1,080 in the black.

Dr. Soule Opens Easter Seal Drive

Funds to Benefit Crippled in Vermont

The annual Easter Seal Sale appeal to raise funds for the work for the crippled of the State was opened on March 21 by Dr. A. Bradley Soule, Jr., of Burlington, president of the Vermont Association for the Crippled, the organization of public spirited individuals who wholeheartedly support this work and carry on the program. Flora J. Coutts of Newport has been appointed Seal Sale Director for the State. She will be assisted by a County Chairman in each county who in turn will have the assistance of a Town Chairman for each town in the county.

The general plan for the 1941 appeal is the Easter Seal Sale made by mail beginning March 21 and carrying through until Easter. As thought at Christmas time is given by the nation as a whole to aid in the fight against tuberculosis so at Easter time does the whole country rally round the cause of the crippled. As Vermont swings into her fifth annual appeal, other states too are giving similar thought, to gain support to carry on and expand the work for the crippled children of America. Easter, the season of hope, is a time eagerly looked forward to by many of the crippled of Vermont, especially crippled young people, because there will then be funds for more work in a program which is meeting a great need. It is through the sale of Easter Seals each year that the work of the Vermont Association for the Crippled, dedicated to the needs for corrective treatment, recreation, education and vocational aid for the crippled of Vermont is financed. The officers and directors of the Vermont Association for the Crippled give as generously as they can of their time and efforts in promoting this needed program but they need the interest and understanding and the financial support of the people of Vermont to make the program as effective as there is need for it to be. They assure the people of Vermont of a wise use of the money received through the annual appeal to help the largest number of the most deserving for the greatest good. Close cooperation with all the other agencies avoids duplication and insures help to those who will most benefit. The 1941 Easter Seal Appeal is made for the crippled of Vermont. The appeal is made to every home in Vermont. A generous response is invited.

Dr. Stultz Lectures Freehand Art Class

During the past six weeks the freehand drawing class under Professor Colburn has been accorded a very unusual and much appreciated privilege when Dr. W. A. Stultz, Professor of Anatomy of the College of Medicine has given a series of lectures on the general structure of the skeleton and muscles of the body.

According to Doctor Stultz the aim of the lectures was "to give a general understanding of the structure and the mechanics of the bony framework of the body together with the position, arrangement and movement of those muscles which are particularly important to the artists in sketching the human figure."

Doctor Stultz's lectures were heightened by skeletal material, charts and models as well as by the clever comments, drawings, and narratives which he introduced in a fascinating manner. The successor to the skeleton would be, in the words of Professor Colburn, "a man particularly fitted for the honor." This apparently refers to a model whose bones are sufficiently close to the surface and who is otherwise particularly fitted to illustrate the lessons learned in the professional atmosphere of the Medical College.

The Art Department is intently busy in its usual manner working out the final proof for the Art Bulletin of the Summer Session.

The department is sponsoring an exhibition at the Fleming Museum Art Gallery replacing the group of historical prints. These are a magnificant collection of contemporary paintings in water color and oil of a wide variety of subjects. They are loaned to the University by the Wood Art Gallery of Montpelier.

Alpha Zeta Holds Initiation and Banquet

The initiation of the new men who have been pledged to Alpha Zeta was held on Thursday, March 27, at Fleming Museum. The annual initiation banquet followed at the Oakledge Manor Gate House on Lake Champlain. The toastmaster of the evening was Brother C. L. Park, Jr., Instructor in Agricultural Education at the University of Vermont. Welcome to the initiates was made by Chancellor Kenneth Estey and the response by Robert Bickford. The principal speaker of the evening was Dr. M. H. Campbell, Professor of Dairy Production at the University of Vermont, who delivered the address to the initiates.

Prof. Maclay Heard On Cynic Program

Discusses Attributes Of Coop. Movement

Concluding the series of CYNIC radio programs before the Easter recess, Malcolm W. Maclay of the University Economics Department presented a discussion of the Cooperative Movement on Tuesday evening, March 25, over station WCAX. Stressing the supreme importance of cooperation, Mr. Maclay described how either faulty or coercive cooperation can easily be misleading or damaging. In the present economic order, we have an individualistic, competitive society in which the bounds have been overflowed resulting in the application of considerable restriction. Approaching the ideal, it was started in the movement in Sweden where the flux of restriction is eliminated by the self-policing of the movement itself. Here in the United States, intense competition has made this impossible. As an example of the practicality of the idea, Mr. Maclay discussed the movement as it flourishes in England. In the 1860's, in a small town called Rochdale, a small group of weavers formulated and put into effect what was to become termed at a later time the so-called "Rochdale Principles." Some of the more important of these points are:

1. Open and voluntary membership to all.
2. The one man—one vote principle; no proxy voting.
3. Cash sales only, at the prevailing market prices.
4. All profits are returned to the consumers on the basis of patronage.
5. Constant cooperative education and expansion.
6. Regular and frequent membership meetings.

As an answer to the question: "Why should we in the United States be concerned with consumer's cooperatives?" Mr. Maclay brought forth several points. First, it is the only democratic way to do business. It is also the only form of business where the ownership and control can actually stay in the community. Furthermore, the existence of monopolies as such is eliminated. And finally, Mr. Maclay stated that cooperatives affixed the solution to the ever-present problem of scarcity. In conclusion, Mr. Maclay emphasized that cooperatives do not offer a panacea to society. They involve the hard, but the most real way—learning by doing.

Next on the program was Margaret Delano '44, a student living in a cooperative house, who discussed the development of student cooperatives on this campus from the beginning in 1939, when Rand House was opened, to the present year and including next year's plan.

Concluding, Charles Katzew '42 presented a revue of University news and sports events.

Alumni Meet

responding secretary; F. Tobey Churchill '35, treasurer.

The quick call for another meeting, at which an even larger attendance is expected, comes from the imperative nature of the business to be considered. Several committee, appointed as the result of the first meeting, will report at this time.

The officers of the newly organized Burlington Alumni Association of the University of Vermont report that over 1,000 potential members reside in Burlington and urge that as many as possible be present at the Monday night meeting March 31. Many who were unable to attend the first meeting, they say, have expressed their interest in the organization.

"It should be the pleasant duty of every man or woman connected with the University," they say, "to be present and be inscribed on the rolls as a charter member of an organization that will be a credit to the University of Vermont, the community and themselves."

Debaters Capture Three Out Of Four In Southern Jaunt

Huntley, Durfee And Cohen Are Back From Deep South

Having traversed 4,000 miles of our ir Southland in a doubtful vehicle, the ile contingent of U. V. M. debaters, mposed of Taze Huntley '41, Harold urfee '41 and Julius Cohen '42, is back dely with three victories and one defeat present to the student body.

In the initial contest against Brothers' llege, Drew University, Madison, J., Taze Huntley and Julius Cohen quired the laurel wreath by virtue of ir convincing arguments on the reso- ion "that the nations of the western misphere should form a permanent ion." Next came a couple of non- ision debates against the University North Carolina and Emory University Atlanta, Ga.

At the University of Alabama, Harold rfee and Taze Huntley met with a prising defeat in an unique debate h a "change of opinion" decision. This e of decision is based upon the number people who change their opinion of the stion involved after having revealed ir prejudices before the commence- nt of the debate. U. V. M. found it- f at the short end of an 18-17 verdict. The Forensic Society then encountered uisiana State, Tulane and University Mississippi, all non-decision.

On April 1, ironically enough, Durfee d Cohen kept the Green and Gold mers flying to a double victory over ion College of Jackson, Tenn., scores ding 3-0 and 2-1.

On the following day the University Kentucky was Vermont's opponent in on-decision debate.

This "blitzkrieg" expedition was con- mated with debates against the West rginia Wesleyan College and the Uni- sity of Pittsburgh.

April 9 Chapel Service To Be Entirely Musical

Wednesday morning, April 9, the Chapel Service will be devoted entirely to music. The University Choir and Chapel Orchestra under Professor Bennett will present music by Palestrina and Mozart.

The soloists in Mozart number will be Theresa Coderre '43, Marjorie Southworth '43, T. K. Malone, Jr. '41, G. L. Millikan.

Evening Concert To Be Given On Easter

Mixed Glee Clubs and Soloists to Take Part

With Professor Bennett conducting, the Mixed Glee Clubs will present an evening concert on Easter Sunday at the Ira Allen Chapel. The concert will be in two parts, the first part the Gloria, Sanctus and Benedictus from the "Mass in F Major" by Mozart and the second part the "Cantata No. 4 for Easter; Christ Lay in Death Enshrouded" by J. S. Bach. The work will feature the solo voices of several students singing in solo and solo quartet parts.

Assisting the Glee Club will be the University Choir; the Chapel Orchestra with Michael Anselmo as concertmaster will play the accompaniment. Miss Marston will be organist.

Attention is brought to the time of the concert which will be 8.45 p.m. This time has been selected so as not to conflict with the downtown Easter services.

Soloists will be Theresa Coderre '43, Marjorie Southworth '43, Thomas K. Malone '41, Prof. G. L. Millikan, Earlene Jenness '43, Paul Poulin '41.

Of the Mozart Mass it has been said that "The disarmingly direct and simple appeal of this music precludes any attempt to describe its character or spirit. Only Mozart spoke the language in which that

Tuition Changes

Tuition in the academic colleges of U. V. M. next year will be $350 for Vermonters and the same for out-of-staters. In the medical school $400 will be the annual charge with $550 for out-of-staters.

Secretarial course and commercial teaching students will pay $192.50 a semester and special students will be charged $11.75 per semester hour of study.

This represents a $15 increase in tuition except for medical, commercial and special students. The student activities fee will remain the same.

Notices pertaining to the new tuition rates have been posted on official bulletin boards.

Cast for Freshman Class Play is Selected

"Two Against the Gods," a melodrama in one act by Albert Mannerheim, Jr., is the play selected for presentation by the freshman class in the annual class play contest, the date for which has not been definitely set.

As a result of tryouts held the week preceding vacation, three freshman girls were chosen to take part in this play. The cast of characters is as follows:

Dr. Prince.....Elizabeth Vosburg
Mary Paley.....Ita Casey
Hathor-Amen.....Dorothy Arnault

The other class plays have not been cast as yet, but further tryouts will be held this week. All those interested are requested to watch the bulletin boards for notice of tryouts.

DRAMATIC CLUB TRYOUTS—There will be further tryouts for Sophomore, Junior and Senior Class plays sometime this week. Watch the bulletin board in the Y Room closely.

The Scribes will meet Thursday, April 10, in the South Lounge at Southwick.

who wrenched his knee in the Penn game and was benched, but may play today.

Pounding out three runs in the first frame, Larry Gardner's Catamounts let the lead slip and fell prey 5-4 in their inaugural appearance of the 1941 season to the diamondmen of the University of Pennsylvania, who featured the all-American football player, Frank X. Reagan, in the fourth batting slot.

Behind Clarence Akley's extraordinary hurling, the Cats tied up the score in the seventh inning. It was a see-saw battle from that juncture till the tenth, when Penn scored on a walk with bases loaded. Akley went the whole distance assisted only by the Green and Gold fielding and slugging prowess.

Two days later on March 31 it was a different story. With Shaw flinging the apple the Catamounts went to town, mopping up George Washington University to the tune of 10-3. Besides Shaw's pitching, which was very much in evidence, although it was his first appearance as a college pitcher, Doherty's and Beauchemin's batting was quite an instrumental factor in the Green and Gold victory, each of the latter two being credited with a three bagger.

The first of a two-game series with the Cavaliers of Virginia was cancelled because the God of Rain was working overtime. On the morrow the formidable Cavaliers picked up the lead in the second bracket and kept it all the way. Johnny Spasyk's home run, scoring Carlson ahead of him, accounted for the Cats' tallies. Final score, 3-2.

The Vermonters were driven to Waterloo at the hands of the Maryland University drivers, the last pitch whistling a 11-0 shellacking.

Owing to weak pitching and batting, Larry Gardner's charges met with another debacle in their tilt with the Middies of Navy. The final score was 12-3, which is ample proof of the brand of ball displayed by both teams.

The encounter with Lehigh University was called due to rain, giving the Cats sufficient time to rest up for their foray with the University of Villanova.

State Legislature Attempting To Aid U.V.M. In Crisis

Guy M. Page and Rep. Asa Bloomer, Trustees Work on Relief Measures

A meeting of trustees of U. V. M. with Governor Wills was held April 4 in the executive office to consider a substitute plan for the bill now in the hands of the house committee to authorize the University to issue up to $1,200,000 in bonds with state credit backing.

The house committee on corporations and franchises to which the original bill was referred suspended consideration of the measure pending a decision on introduction of a substitute.

This meeting has suspended a series of hearings on the bill introduced by Rep. Asa S. Bloomer of West Rutland, also a trustee of U. V. M., at which University officers and trustees spoke.

Guy M. Page, trustee, spoke on March 27 before the house committee on corpoations and franchises explaining the bill. He said that the state would never have to pay for the bonds; the backing of the state was necessary only to make them more marketable.

Others who spoke at this hearing and subsequent ones were Rep. Asa S. Bloomer, William C. Walker, and Donald A. Heminway, trustees, and F. W. Kehoe, comptroller and Edwin Abbott, accountant of U. V. M.

The second University bill introduced by Representative Bloomer was the $150,000 relief appropriation. After study it was reported favorably by a majority of the house committee on education. A minority of the committee reported the bill favorably with amendment. It is now in the hands of the appropriations committee.

The amendment would provide for $75,000 annually as a loan which would be permitted to remain outstanding during satisfactory operation of the financial affairs of the University.

Poultry Bill Rejected

The Vermont House rejected March 31 a $20,000 bill providing for a department of poultry husbandry at U. V. M.

The bill was defeated after a warning by Rep. Charles C. Morse of Randolph that not all appropriations pending could be approved without raising new revenues, possibly by a direct state tax.

Previously Rep. Albert L. Douglas of Worcester, contending that the poultry business is the second most important agricultural pursuit in Vermont, urged passage of this bill, the "chicken coop"

Two Artists Join Summer Art Staff

Sample, Myers, to Teach U. V. M. Summer Session

Two distinguished American artists, one already well known to Burlington, one a newcomer, have been secured and are announced as new faculty members for this summer's art section of the University of Vermont Summer Session by Prof. Elizabeth V. Colburn, head of the art department at the University. Paul Sample, nationally known artist, formerly of California, who now spends the regular university year as an artist in residence at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H., will come to the University each Monday during the Summer Session to teach a group of advanced painters. Mr. Sample has frequently exhibited his work locally and is known throughout New England as well as across the continent. Much of his work has a New England flavor.

Eugene E. Myers of Teachers College, Columbia University, teacher, writer, lecturer, and creative artist, who is particularly known for his work in art education, will conduct a workshop and discussion course in art for public school teachers. This course is especially planned to help teachers of one-room and graded schools. Mr. Myers will also offer a new course in "Education and the Arts," especially planned for school superintendents, princi-

F. B. I. Intervenes in Riotous "You Can't Take It With You"

"You Can't Take It With You" by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, the play selected by the University Players for presentation during Junior Week, was first produced in December, 1936. Its plot is the familiar tale of two young lovers nearly parted because of their families, but upon this well-worn framework the authors have built a riotous network of daffy characters and farcical situations.

Grandpa Vanderhof's loony tribe is described thus by the Theatre Arts Monthly (February, 1937):

"There is not a single ounce of rational thinking or acting in them—from Grandfather Martin Vanderhof who gave up business years ago because he wanted to relax and who has never paid an income tax because he doesn't believe in it, to his daughter Mrs. Penelope Sycamore who writes plays because eight years ago somebody left a typewriter at her house by mistake, or her husband who manufactures fireworks in the cellar with a visiting milkman for helper, or their children who dance and play the xylophone and manufacture candies . . . ."

Unfortunately, Alice Sycamore, the youngest daughter, is quite sane. She realizes their extreme eccentricity when she and the son of her wealthy and highly conventional boss fall in love. His family vastly disapprove. At a dinner party given by the Sycamores for the hero's family, the stiff-necked Kirbys, hilarious interruptions follow each other to the last hair-brained episode when a party of raiders arrive from the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The necessary solution of problems and softening of hearts comes about, but the plot is decidedly a subordinate to the comic situations of the play. Grandpa Vanderhof, the chief madman leads his lunatic family through their slap-happy existence. His activities range from attending commencement exercises to jeer at orators, hunting snakes, throwing darts at targets and visiting zoos. Henry Travers created the rôle of Grandpa, with Margot Stevenson as Alice Sycamore, the heroine.

Highly successful as a play, when Columbia Studios presented "You Can't Take It With You" on the screen, Director Frank Capra received his third award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for his inspired direction.

Lionel Barrymore as Grandpa Vanderhof, Jean Arthur as Alice Sycamore and James Stewart as Tony Kirby headed the well-chosen cast, whose performance made the production one of 1938's best motion pictures.

The University Players have selected a fine play for presentation. It is an ambitious undertaking and a fitting to their past production which include: "The Three-Cornered Moon," "Night Must Fall," and "What a Life."

Conscription and Education

With conscription now an accepted fact in this country and thousands already in camps all over the country, it would perhaps be worth while to examine some of the problems and dangers to education which has grown out of it.

In many sections of the country students are faced with the possibility of being drafted in the very middle of an academic year. This does not seem necessary nor just. Naturally it cannot be expected that college students be deferred until their entire education is completed. But a ruling which permitted deferment until July 1 of students called during the academic year would save those affected a great deal of time and expense. For a student to drop out of college in the middle of the regular school term is equivalent to a total loss.

Another problem which should be untangled is that of students in such professions as medicine. Actual cases have been found where medical students drafted into the army have been given some routine task while utterly untrained draftees have been placed in the medical corps. This holds true of others with special training. We feel that an effort should be made to place those drafted in positions where they can use their talents to best advantage. Furthermore, we oppose the interruption of a medical student's studies because a nation is in constant need of good doctors. Making soldiers out of medical men is no help either to the defense program or the nation's health.

If we are to make any claims to fairness, we must see that the Selective Service Act is administered with true impartiality. We oppose any discrimination or favoritism in granting student deferment according to academic standing, "citizenship" qualifications, or solely upon the recommendation of school administrators. This has happened in some cases and is a bad argufy for the academic freedom of our colleges.

Looking at the situation from a broader prospective, we find that the war and the increasing emphasis on national defense have been responsible in part for a growing tendency to regiment thought and learning. This is not compatible with the American spirit which has always fought tenaciously for free thought and the extension of culture. This country must oppose vigorously all covert or open attempts to deny access to any book, source of information or cause of study in our schools. There must be no warping of education to fit military regulation and control. Liberal arts or scientific courses should not be sacrificed to vocational training or military drill. Any proposals to reduce college courses to cover four years in three, or to institute military training as a required part of the college course are contrary to democratic education. The spirit of free inquiry and scientific learning must be maintained at all costs.

Nineteen seventeen was a warning—let us not have a repetition of the hysteria which swept the country at that time. Our democratic system should have no place for the Napp-Couderts, Tenneys, Robeys and Stokes that are springing up on all sides covered by the false cloak of patriotism. We must see that the ideal of democracic education—to serve mankind, our country and its fine institutions—continues to live.

Mortar Board Dance To Be Held Saturday

On Easter eve, April 12, the annual Mortar Board dance will usher in the Easter season with a flourish, as the girls of U. V. M. dance with the men of their choice in the ballroom at Southwick. The affair will be, as usual, semi-formal, giving the girls a chance to display their new spring evening gowns. Tickets may be purchased from any Mortar Board member. Further details of this dance will appear in Friday's issue of the CYNIC.

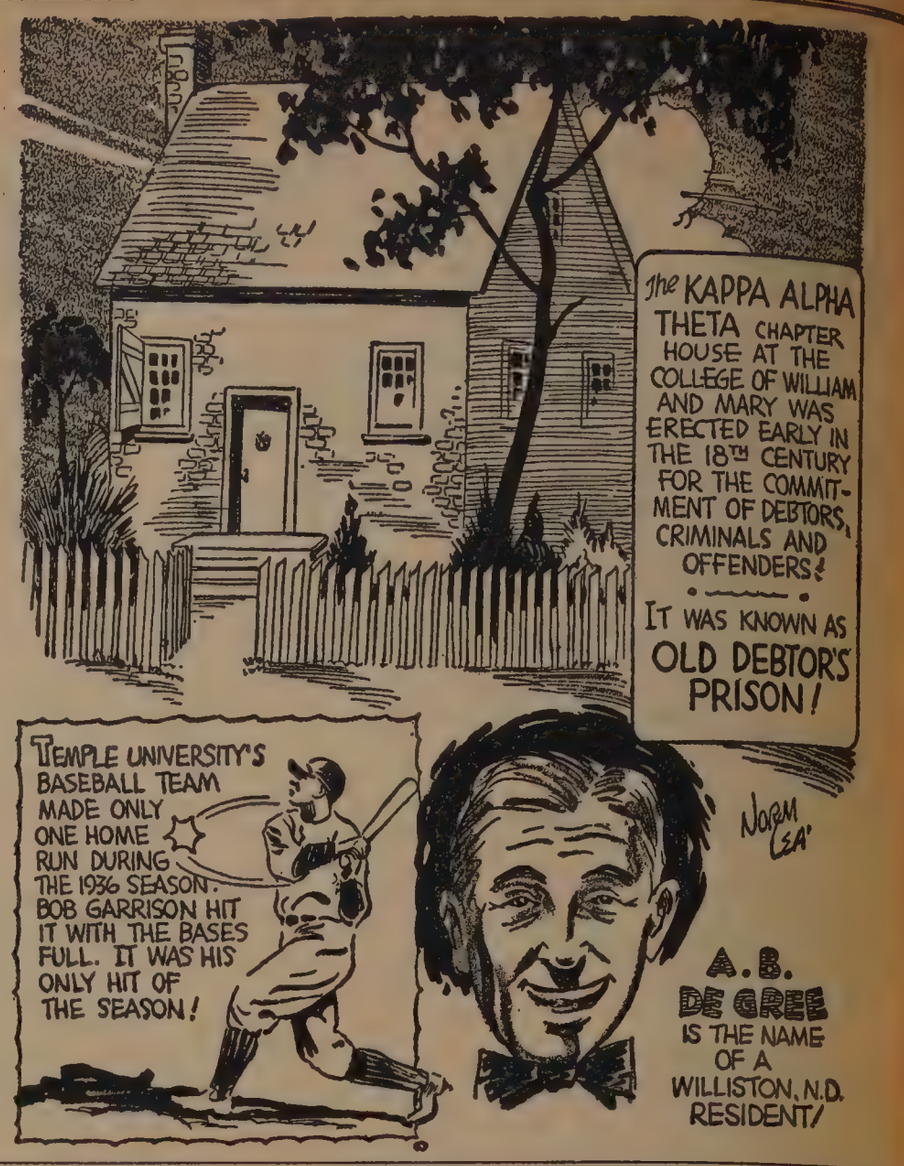
Harry Twitchell Born in Portugal Likes Life in U.S.A.

With a very determined and well-pronounced "my hat," which is, incidentally, the equivalent to a good old American "oh gee" or "my gosh," Harry Twitchell '43 settled down to explaining the trials and tribulations of college life in a strange country.

Or perhaps it shouldn't be referred to as "strange" since this is his fifth visit to the United States, and also this is his second year at Vermont. However, it is different enough from school in England to present enough problems and inspire enough thoughts to make the impressions of this chap (as he would enthusiastically call any young fellow) mighty interesting.

Harry, whose father was a Vermonter, was born nineteen long (or were they?) years ago in Lisbon, Portugal, from which he proceeded to move around a great deal, ending up at Tonridge, a boys' school situated in a town recently bombed. (For a sample of the English version of school spirit personified, one might try listening to Harry's prideful descriptions of life at that school.)

After arriving in America merely for a vacation, they found that complications had set in due to the declaration of war and that returning would be impossible at the time. It is interesting to note that the boat following was the fateful "Athenia."



However, that was a year ago September and by this time, despite a few problems and his definite refusal to fall into the clutches of American slang (and don't think the English don't have a few rare expressions of their own!), he has settled down to being just a student. And why not? These puzzling things consist mostly of money—that is, getting the quality he expects for his money compared to the quality of goods at home—and the difference in girls, although he knew few at home.

The thing which Harry admires most (or should we say the thing he admires) is the marvelous opportunity for college education given to so many people of different means. Especially noticeable is the greater percentage of co-eds at American schools. Incidentally, he noticed that English girls grow up more slowly and are naturally (why naturally?) more reserved. Social life was not stressed nearly so much, but Harry seems to catch on quickly, for he can be counted among those present at most of the school functions, or those of Delta Psi, of which he is a member.

We hear there is nothing quite like his speaking French with that accent, but nevertheless he has the kind of command over the English language which makes Mr. Average American feel as if he's speaking Pig Latin or a rare version of Double Talk. Despite his linguistic achievements, Harry is taking General Science—majoring in Geology, in fact. By the way, he's willing to teach elocution, and cheap. How cheap, we don't quite know (perhaps for a few lessons on how to avoid being trampled to bits during these fast swing numbers).

Strangely enough, he thinks football is a great game (he'd better), but he'd like to see his main interest, rugby, become a prominent sport. He is most pleased that U. V. M. is a member of the Eastern Rugby Union, and that Americans in general are becoming more and more interested in it. Another of the puzzling things to Harry is that basketball (strictly a girls' game in England) is played also by men in the United States, while only girls play field hockey here.

As for our crop of new foreign students, Harry hasn't met any at this writing, but he feels that an interview with one of them would be far more interesting. We disagree!

Concert

spirit could be expressed." It is simpler and less pretentious than the better known Mass in C Minor.

In reference to the Bach Cantata the Association of American Colleges in the department of Circulating Choral Music has made the statement:

"There is no greater Bach than this Cantata. Each of the seven numbers is a masterpiece. Each is based on the splendid old Chorale, 'Christ Lay in Death Enshrouded,' the text comprising Luther's entire hymn. The solos and duets are all suitable for the entire chorus and, according to the tradition at the Thomasschlue in Leipsic, were so done by Bach."

The chorale has a most interesting history in that Bach borrowed the chorale from Luther who had taken it from a twelfth century Easter carol which resembles in turn, the Easter sequence "Victimae Paschali."

This music is the same music that will be sung by the combined college glee clubs at the New England Festival at Durham, N. H., on April 18 and 19.

DON'T FORGET! Mortar Board dance coming up Saturday, April 12! Girls it's not too soon to choose your escorts. All Out!

What Size Course? or Put, Put, a Birdie!

By Charles Evans, Jr.

With the tremendous spread of the popularity of college golf, many of the colleges are actively planning new golf clubs, and with those enthusiasts the problem arises: shall it be a nine-hole course, to begin with, or eighteen holes at the start?

The right policy for all such colleges, unless special conditions and favored finances make the full eighteen holes possible, calls for a nine-hole course.

No one seems to know definitely just where the idea that eighteen holes constitutes a golf course got its origin. But because of this unit, which has become more or less standard, many members of nine-hole courses seem to think there is something lacking in their club. Such is not the case at all. Some of the best golf courses in the world are of nine holes; some of the sportiest holes I have ever played are on nine-hole courses.

There are several factors that make the nine-hole course most attractive. Its only disadvantage is that it will not accommodate a club with a large membership.

It is better to have nine good holes than eighteen indifferent ones. It is far better to have nine good greens, well kept, than twice that number in poor condition.

The pleasure of golf is not measured at all by the number of holes on the course. I have noticed that there is an air of intimacy about the well-kept nine-hole course that sometimes seems to be lacking in the larger one. The players and members seem to be thrown into closer contact with one another. One seems to know the holes better which of course is a fact, not a fancy. On some big courses some of the holes are so far away that they seem to be entirely out of the player's scheme of pleasure until he comes to them now and then in his rounds.

The nine-hole course is not a young or undersized links. It can be the best golf in the world. It all depends upon the college men and women who make up the club.

If tournaments are to be concluded between the rising and setting of the sun a course should not be too long. On many courses the time now consumed in making a round is prodigious and time is something that we cannot always spare. It seems to me as the score mounts with the time consumed there is a feeling of mental and physical defeat that takes away the pleasure of the game.

There is really nothing sacred in the numbers nine and eighteen applied to golf courses. I think it was highly probable that the orthodox number was determined by the length of time necessary to play around.

The oldest golf club in the world has always possessed only seven holes. The most famous course originally had twelve holes. Old St. Andrew's started with six holes. Then it added—and added still more—until twenty-two holes in all made up the course. Then four of the holes somehow were tossed into the discard. Apparently this process of adding and eliminating holes at St. Andrew's was really the deciding factor in giving us today the regulation eighteen-hole course. The smallest course numbers five holes. The biggest course is twenty-five holes.

I don't think it is absolutely essential for a club to stick to the nine- or eighteen-hole rule at all. My idea is that the college club should put in all the good holes the space allows—the more holes, of course, the greater variety of play.

I am assuming that the average hole should make certain demands of skill upon the college players. Something besides driving, niblick shots and putting should form the necessary equipment of a golfer. Golf should not be a driving and hiking competition.

Poor Conditions Void Ski Title

Voting Participants Cancel Stowe Jumping

The Stowe one-man, four-event championship will not be decided this spring. Poor conditions on the Morrisville-Stowe 30-meter hill caused officials to cancel the jumping, and a meeting of the competitors voted unanimously not to award the title on the basis of three events, but to carry it over until next year.

The decision to call the meet off came after several had taken practice jumps. The takeoff and landing hill were in good condition but on the traverse at the bottom it was impossible for the skiers to attempt to stop in the mushy going, and this was thought too dangerous.

So Blond Bill Halsey, who was in third place after the completion of three events Saturday, can share honors with Bob Meservey of Dartmouth and Allan Beck of Norwich. Meservey was leading the field by a six-point margin and Beck was second, less than two points ahead of Halsey, the Harvard ski coach who was defending his title.

Meservey won the slalom in the afternoon to go with his fifth in the morning's downhill, and a second in Friday's cross-country, to pile up 291.5 points, while Beck, with an eighth in the downhill and second in the slalom, crept up past Halsey. Beck had a total of 285.3 points for the three events, while Halsey, who was fourth in the downhill only to run into difficulties in the slalom and finish thirteenth, lost the lead he held Friday after winning the cross-country and was third with 283.6 points.

Victor Constant of Norwich slammed his way through a treacherous Nose Dive trail during Saturday morning's downhill to win the event in 2 minutes and 41 seconds, the fastest time recorded this year for the trail. Constant made a daring run to gain a three-second edge over Norm Richardson of Stowe, a ski instructor in Sepp Ruschpp's ski school. Tom Cootey of Norwich, last in Friday's cross-country, was third in the slalom, just back of Meservey and Beck.

Three-event point total:

1, Meservey 291.5; 2, Beck 285.2; 3, Halsey 283.6; 4, I. Townsend 279.1; 5, R. Townsend 276.1; 6, Distin 274.4; 7, Baradale 272.9; 8, Collins 272.5; 9, Nunnemacher 270.6; 10, Richardson 269.2; 11, Constant 263.3; 12, Blood 262.6; 13, Benedict 261.0; 14, Fowler 257.1; 15, Huessey 252.8; 16, Cootey 249.4; 17, Blais 245.2; 18, Worden 243.8; 19, Glover 236.3; 20, McNamara 228.5; 21, Johnson 214.6.

The itinerant U. V. M. baseball team is absorbing a string of defeats on their annual southern trip. These losses are distressing, to say the least, to the Vermont fans but those thus affected must bear in mind the fact that this journey is more or less a training trip on which the members of the club are rounding into shape and gaining valuable experience for the nucleus of the schedule. The loss of Dick Healy, spark-plug infielder, is one of the prime reasons for the defeats. Healy sustained an injury in the first contest and was forced from the line-up. An obligato note in the Green and Gold defeat symphony is the work of the pitchers. While the moundsmen have demonstrated their penuriousness in the hit column in most games, they have done an abrupt about face in showing great generosity in issuing the enemy batsmen a large total of bases on balls. This fault, coupled with the sieve-like nature of the infield, has contributed largely to the opposition's great accumulations of scores. Bob Doherty, sophomore outfielder, is the "find" of the trip and after five games is leading the batsmen with a lofty .476 average.

Frank Reagan, Penn halfback and current catcher, is being regarded favorably by a number of big league scouts. In the Vermont-Penn game he demonstrated his speed on the bases by beating out an infield hit, stealing second and third and scoring on an infield out. Another Northern Leaguer will break into a big league line-up when Crash Davis, former Rutland infielder, supplants Bennie McCoy at second base for the Philadelphia Athletics. McCoy has his draft questionnaire and appears to be lost for the coming campaign.—Max Baer is due for an "oscar" next year for his performance in the recent Baer-Nova battle. Critics say the acting was excellent.

Atom Smasher at U. of California Is Half Made

BERKELEY, CALIF. — (ACP) — Nearly half the steel for the world's largest cyclotron, the University of California's 4,900-ton atom smasher, has been put into place.

A total of 3,700 tons of steel, as much as is used in one of Uncle Sam's cruisers, will go into the magnet alone. The base and half of the vertical columns of the magnet have been completed.

When the magnet is finished in April, work will begin on a building to house the cyclotron, with the machine expected to be in operation by the fall of 1942.

The new cyclotron will dwarf the 225-ton atom-smasher on California's Berkeley campus, now the largest in the world. Prof. E. O. Lawrence, inventor of the cyclotron, expects the new machine to open up new worlds to science.

The 4,900-ton cyclotron will be at least five times as powerful as the 225-ton machine. It will bombard atoms with a beam of atomic particles traveling at 60,000 miles a second, which corresponds to 100,000,000 electron volts of energy.

At the Sigma Nu Lodge an informal dance was held with R. Bloomer '44 in charge. Professor and Mrs. Witham, and Professor and Mrs. McKee were chaperones.

Phi Delta Theta had a formal dinner dance with music by Jack Collins. D. Nutter '43 and F. Bundy '44 were co-chairmen of the dance, and W. Nestler '43 and C. Miller '42 were in charge of the dinner. The chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Pond, and Professor and Mrs. Heicher.

A formal dance with music by Bob Gary and his orchestra was held at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon House. A. Shaw '42 and S. Searl '42 were co-chairmen of the dance. Captain and Mrs. Simpson, and Mr. and Mrs. Millington were chaperones. Mr. and Mrs. Gander McLeod were guests at the dance. Formal decorations were used with top hats, etc. adorning the walls.

Alpha Tau Omega featured the Easter theme at its semi-formal. J. Diforio '41, F. Ford '41 and R. Thayer '42 were in charge. Music was furnished by a local orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Bickford, and Mr. and Mrs. Rogers were chaperones.

The Owls held a formal dance. H. E. Howe '43 and J. White '42 acted as chairmen. A so-called battle of music was staged by the Collegians of Barre and Paul Chambers and his orchestra from Montpelier. The chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Rowell, and Mr. George L. Millikan.

U. V. M. Contract With City

University of Vermont trustees signed a contract with the City of Burlington, March 28, giving the city a short term lease of the 120-acre Wheeler plot at the airport. Getting this land will allow the city to start work preparatory to an airport expansion program.

The contract between the University and the city was signed by Guy M. Page and Thomas C. Cheney for the trustees at a meeting in Governor Wills' office in Montpelier.

pals, elementary and secondary teachers, art and music teachers. This course, which will represent an entirely new opportunity for school supervisors, will deal with the nature of art and its place in education and present-day life. Mr. Myers comes originally from North Dakota.

Barse Miller, who crosses the United States from California annually to teach advanced painting in the University of Vermont Summer Session, will lead his usual large and enthusiastic group of art students, including both advanced art workers and beginners. Mr. Miller's class meets in the studio for morning painting, going outside sketching afternoons, and once a week meets to examine the collective work of the class, displayed for study and criticism. This is Mr. Miller's third year of teaching with the Vermont Summer Session.

Three art exhibitions at the Fleming Museum of the University during the summer will contribute to the opportunities for art learning offered art students of the Summer Session. The exhibition of art work by students in the art classes at the University will take place in August in the Museum art gallery.

Mr. Sample's students, all advanced in the study of painting, will be individually engaged on major paintings, receiving his criticism and inspiration on Mondays, when Mr. Sample, who summers at Lake Willoughby will arrive early in Burlington, to spend a long day of intensive painting with his class. Following discussion with the students, the group will go afield in the vicinity of Burlington, carrying lunch with them, and spending the whole day at their painting.

The art classes of the Summer Session, in addition to Mr. Sample and Mr. Miller, teaching advanced painting, and Mr. Myers, giving special art instruction for teachers and school executives, will be rounded out by the courses given by Professor Colburn and Mrs. Isabel Mills.

Professor Colburn, who conducts the year around department, in the summer teaches freehand drawing and painting, while coordinating the work of all Summer Session classes. Mrs. Mills, whose courses in the appreciation of modern art and applied art are popular throughout the year, will have her usual large and enthusiastic group of students.

With such a wide range of art subjects and instructors, the Art Summer School has undergone another expansion in its steady growth of recent years, and now has instruction to offer many classes of art students, including both undergraduates and graduates, and taking in artists already considerably advanced in their study, as well as beginners, school teachers and administrators, and the general public, who desire cultural or generally instructive art courses.

Dis Is Spring and Hats Are Fantasies of the print and lined with the dress material.

The navy is influencing our costumes so that middies and large sailor collars are important to have in our spring wardrobe.

Hats are fantasies. It seems that everything goes this spring. Pretty, pleasing and dashing, the hats are soft and flattering with veils, flowers—a special note here—and trimmed with bright plaid taffeta ribbon, or white for a real springy touch—white flowers, white edged, white lined.

The shirt and skirt girl are always in. And this is carried out in evening clothes, too, shirtwaist topped dinner dresses for those affairs that do not demand you be all dressed up.

Give lots of thought to your accessories. Bags are bigger; short, white kid gloves are back; also colored gloves soft at the wrists.

Open toe and heel in shoes are still here but not as dominate a fashion as last year. Any kind of pump or sandal is smart.

As a last suggestion, take a color tonic and take it on your finger tips. "Rhubarb" is a rosy pink, live and clear and in line with the surge of pinks for spring. "Fireweed" is a true bracer, a crisp, bright red to be worn with navies, neutrals and dark green. Last is a sunbrowned shade, "Ginger Tea," rosy-toned and warming. Wear this with beiges, turquoise and soft-off greens.

I saw you there in the back alley
Making moon-eyes at the grocer's son;
I was there. I can even tell you
How he chucked you under the chin
And touched your hair. I saw you
Toss your head with a careless fling
And stamp your foot, pretending
It was a size four. The sharp tap
Routed the cat from the alley door.

I saw the moon chip off the bricks of the building
With a green flare; and just at that moment
You unlooped your hair and the grocer's boy stared
To see it falling in the moonlight
And the moon treading in your hair.
I saw the buildings rub up against each other
Under the winking stars. They turned away their heads
In consternation—and so did I;
But I heard you murmur softly under your breath,
Like sighing waters—a dim sigh.

"Billy" Phelps To Be Commencement Speaker

Outstanding Yale Professor and Author Is Very Popular Speaker

William Lyon Phelps, for more than 40 years associated with the faculty of Yale University, and called the most beloved professor at any American university, will be the Commencement speaker at the University of Vermont at the graduation exercises of the 150th year of the University, Monday, June 16. He makes three or four addresses every week in Boston, New York, Brooklyn, or Philadelphia. His published books number about 25, with his Autobiography with Letters, published in 1939, prominent on the list. Following his 40 years of teaching in various capacities at Yale, including his position as Lampson Professor from 1901 to 1933, William Lyon Phelps is now professor emeritus. It has been said of him that he has become an integral part of the Yale tradition, "as essential to the campus and the academic scene as the chimes of Harkness, as college friendships and loyalties and the voices of students on the late night air singing the songs that Yale men sing."

He has been honored by degrees from more than a dozen colleges and universities. A believer in the full and balanced life, Professor Phelps has not limited his interests at New Haven to the academic world in which he is prominent. He is president of the New Haven Symphony Orchestra and is closely associated with the little theatre movement there. He belongs to many learned societies, being a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and of the American Geographical Society and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the American Philosophical Society, and the National Institute of Social Science (which awarded him a gold medal).

Professor Phelps started his career at Yale by making curriculum changes in his courses which appeared by the standards of that time to be marked by an extreme academic radicalism. Perhaps his most notable departure from the existing college curriculum was his starting in 1895 of an undergraduate class to study the modern novel, which up to that time had been ignored. From his early years of sponsoring radical curricular innovations he has evolved into a more conservative but increasingly enthusiastic commentator on the progress of humanity until his name has now become an honored one in academic circles and a household word throughout the country.

Women Debaters Represent Vermont

On Thursday, March 27, Faye Lipman '43 and Kay LeBaron '41 left for the women's debating trip to represent the University of Vermont. They debated at Pembroke College in Providence, R. I., on Thursday and at Rhode Island State College in Kingston, R. I., Friday. For the rest of the debates scheduled, Janet Clark '42 replaced Kay LeBaron '41. This twosome met teams representing Albany State Teachers' College in Albany, N. Y., Hobart College in Geneva, N. Y., and the University of Buffalo in Buffalo, N. Y., on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, respectively. All of the debates were non-decision debates. Miss Della Perrin of the education department chaperoned the trip.

Prof. Kirby to Give Piano Recital April 20

Announcement was made today that Prof. William G. Kirby, who headed the music department at the University of Vermont last year during the absence of Prof. Howard G. Bennett, will return to Burlington to give a piano recital for the benefit of the Greek War Relief Committee.

This program will be presented on Sunday evening, April 20, at 8 o'clock in the Southwick Memorial Building.

Vocal selections by George L. Millikan of the University's faculty staff will comprise part of the program.

Mortar Board to Sponsor Dance

Tomorrow night from 9 to 12, Southwick Memorial will be lighted up with post-lenten festivity in the form of the semi-annual Mortar Board dance. This eagerly-awaited event features women's choice and will be bright with new spring costumes and gowns in semi-formal mood. In keeping with the time of year, the hall will be gaily decorated with spring and Eastertide motifs while Wayne Barrow's Catamounts will help to straighten out the mid-winter kinks. Margaret Crowley '41, who is in charge of the dance, advised all girls to "get their dates early" as a large crowd is expected to show up for one of the biggest dances of the second semester. Maywood Metcalf '41, is in charge of the decorations while Prof. and Mrs. M. E. Witham and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry will be on hand as chaperones. Tickets are $1.10 a couple.

No Peaceful Feelings

Once in Palestine, a man went about the country preaching subversive doctrines. He was somewhat of a radical and very much of an idealist. He had a lot of queer notions on peace and brotherhood and such. The reactionaries labeled him a "fifth columnist" and pretty quick he had paid for his presumption, his attempt to change the status quo. But because you can't kill an ideal or a soul, people still feel the echoings of that man's words, the music of his spirit. Sadly enough, his ideals are still ideals—not facts. That man's fight is still being fought as it has been fought for centuries by mighty souls who have added their impetus to the task of achieving that ideal.

And what an ideal that is—and how far we have wandered from it! There is no room for narrow nationalism within this ideal, no room for prejudices and even the word tolerance seems somewhat condescending in its light.

Man, as an individual, must find within himself a consciousness which tells him how to live in harmony with his fellows and in communication with the vast and beautiful mystery of this universe. Today that consciousness is almost non-existent because it is hemmed in by narrow political loyalties, short-sighted religious creeds and age-old prejudices. Either at war or at peace, man lacks that objective view which is necessary for understanding and never-ceasing progress. Lacking this inner consciousness, we constantly find ourselves at odds with our fellows. Lacking this inner consciousness, we allow our individual interests to block our will to cooperate with others. Only once in a great while have we a Jesus, or a Beethoven, or a Shakespeare, or a Da Vinci—each working in his own way to add to the memories of mankind, to prod our lives with truth and beauty, to make us aware of what we aspire to and never achieve. We are thankful for these men because they are the major chords which slumber in the slow mind of eternal mankind, constantly enriching the swelling repertoire of human progress.

Even in the midst of war, there is time for Easter and a recognition of what it stands for—a world wherein man must find himself and learn to live. We cannot go on forever ignoring the calls of those who have realized the need man has for international good-will and cooperation. We cannot forever withdraw into an isolated nation or religion. Once we can get over that tendency we will be ready to cooperate with our fellows. Then we will be able to combat oppression and reaction wherever it occurs with no thoughts to our own interest. If fascism arises we will not condone it even though we may not be directly affected by it. We will not wait until it strikes at us before we openly denounce it. If militarism exists we will recognize it as an evil no matter how employed. When resorting to it, we will not look for pretty words to cloak its true nature lest we end up by really believing that it is a good thing. In other words, we will never sacrifice truth and loyalty to mankind for the sake of petty individual or nationalistic interests.

This was not meant to be a sermon—just an editorial. It began as a reflection on Jesus. We might end it that way—a reflection of the man, Jesus, nailed to the cross. That is our symbol. We haven't come far since his time. We are still reaching. We are still listening, but half-heartedly, to the truth he died for; and rather than seeking content this Easter, a peaceful feeling—take a resolve to be aroused to a realization that there's a goal for mankind—the day when no one will seek to know for whom the bell tolls because everyone will feel instinctively that it tolls for them.

Reader Upholds Lease-Lend Act

To the Editor of the Cynic:

The Lease-Lend Act (it is no longer the Lease-Lend Bill) was quite strongly attacked in the March 28 issue of the Cynic. The writer was opposed to the act and concluded à la Nazism that everybody else should be.

The first argument advanced was that our generation will pay for the Act with its blood. Will the writer of the article please explain if he thinks that an overwhelming majority of the House and the Senate thought that the Act would lead to war and therefore deliberately voted for it? Does he think it is an underhanded act by the representatives of the American people to embroil us into a conflict across the Atlantic or the Pacific? Does he believe in saving the pocketbook at the expense of tyranny? Does he believe that valiant countries like Yugoslavia, Greece and China should be sacrificed so that we in America can go on living the luxurious life to which we are accustomed? Does he believe in the last analysis that democracy needs not be saved because it would cost too much?

As for his second argument, that it should not have been passed. Can he suggest a better method? Perhaps he is not aware that America is still a democracy. If England is not our friend, then who is? It is a cardinal principle of international relations that one must have strong friends and the more the merrier (but not for the other side). How far does he think our rearmament program would go if our planes, tanks and guns were not tested in the laboratory of conflict? Would he stand by and let "his neighbor's house burn" merely because it would take too much trouble to put out the fire?

His third argument is no whit less illogical. Has he ever read "Mein Kampf?" He believes that Britain is not fighting for us, therefore Germany, Italy and Japan must be. If they aren't fighting for us, then we don't give a damn who wins the war. But we do care.

Carrying the Torch?

Remember it was Britain that formulated the Monroe Doctrine. For over a century Britain has been the number one sea power and yet who believes that she could not have occupied South America whenever she felt like it? Why, may I ask, have we always had a one ocean Pacific fleet? Might it not be, Mr. McNamara, because we have felt that our interests in the Atlantic were synonymous and the same has held true in the Pacific. Is this not a "historical bond?" Does he think that the destroyer-naval base deal was not partly motivated by "common interests of culture and freedom?" Does he believe that Hitler would permit trade unions, let alone ask trade union members to sit in his cabinet?

The Revolutionary War was fought a long time ago. Remember that Germany and Italy were enemies twenty-five years ago, that the Soviet and Germany were not on speaking terms five years ago? Where were the "little democracies" of Europe at that time?

It is true that we have not always carried the torch of freedom and tolerance when we should have. But at least we, as well as the British, have not tried deliberately to shove it down our neighbors' throats. It is not a good argument to say that we are too late, because the Nazi propaganda campaign is playing that same tune to us, to Britain and to "aggressors" like Yugoslavia, Greece, et al.

As for the delegation of powers. May I suggest that Mr. McNamara read the National Industrial Recovery Act and the Neutrality Act. Also, let it be remembered that Congress may suspend this "unprecedented magnanimous power" by concurrent resolution whenever it so desires. Finally, if we all had as little faith in the President as Mr. McNamara evidently has, those powers would never have been given to him. We have a constitution which provides for that; does anyone for a moment believe that the people of Germany, Italy, Japan or the Soviet have that weapon?

I recommend a little more consideration of the situation with which freedom is confronted throughout the world before condemning acts which will insure it against the dynamic of totalitarianism.

Kiwanis Sponsor Ladd's Boys' Club

For a very long time, unbeknown to the student body, Professor Ladd of the German Department has been campaigning for a boys' club in Burlington. He met discouragements of non-cooperation, false reports that there was to be one established; several times in desperation he was on the verge of establishing one of his own.

Professor Ladd more than a year ago located the very site selected at present for the club and it was examined by an aldermanic committee. They apparently failed to see the real value of an organization of this type and made no report. They did not disillusion Professor Ladd, he believed in the boys' club with all his heart and could not be discouraged. After two years of untiring attempts Professor Ladd's long-sought dream emerged into reality this vacation with the announcement that the Kiwanis Club had arranged to sponsor the project. This came as a surprise to those who have so warmly supported the principle of the enterprise.

The premises at 107 College Street consist of a long spacious room with only a few pieces of furniture. They symbolize the beginning of what may become one of Burlington's most valued civic institutions brought about mainly by the perseverance and interest of Professor Ladd.

BATTERY A, 258th FIELD ARTILLERY (155mm GUN)
FORT ETHAN ALLEN, VT.

April 5, 1941

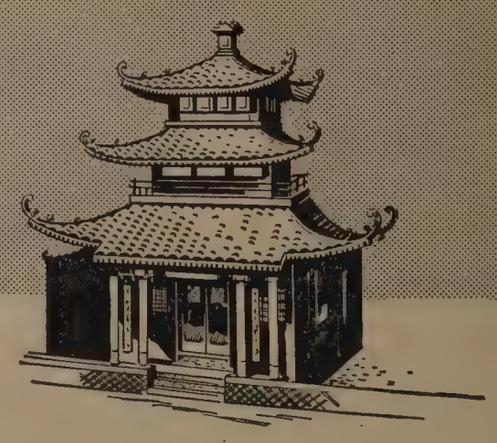
Editor of Cynic
University of Vermont

Dear Sir:

As a National Guardsman, stationed at Ft. Ethan Allen, I cannot pass on the truth or falsity of Mr. Hunting's letter to the Cynic of March 14, 1941 with an unbiased judgment.

However, Mr. Hunting's letter is its own best answer. His sophomoric facetiousness convicts him in my eye and probably in the eyes of most of his fellow students, as guilty of ill-advised bad taste. No man who writes a letter of this character is truly superior to anybody, not to mention the average "draftee."

Mr. Hunting is also a victim of depressing insularity. A college graduate, man or woman, does not live in an ivory tower of the "social uppercrust." He must meet all kinds of people. The qualities of equability, friendliness and goodheartedness necessary in life are evidently not a part of Mr. Hunting's makeup, judging from the petulant tone of his letter.



If it is comedy, it is comedy without humor; if it is tragedy, it is tragic without relief. If it is a joke, it is backfiring, and probably no one knows it better than Mr. Hunting himself.

Sincerely,
CLEMENT MILLER,
Private, 258th FA (155mm Gun)

P. S. As a college graduate, I can safely say that I have learned far more from my non-college fellow soldiers than they have from me.

Every operator in this telephone exchange must speak four languages!

Each operator in San Francisco's Chinatown telephone exchange must speak English plus at least three of the five Chinese dialects—Som Yup, Soy Yup, Heong Sow, Gow Gong and Aw Duck—in order to handle calls. For the average Chinese understands no dialect but his own!

Since there is no Chinese alphabet, the 36 page directory, listing 2200 subscribers, can't be printed in the usual way. It is handwritten—then reproduced by engraving and printing processes. Subscribers are listed by streets, instead of alphabetically. And operators must almost know the book by heart, for the Chinese seldom call by number—but by name and address.

Here is a Bell System exchange that in many ways is unique. But it is just like thousands of others in giving good service to telephone users.

Easter Fashion Parade Highlights

Spring Fantasies for the College Girl's Bright Easter Wardrobe

For your Easter springtime formal bring on the plaids—plaid tie silk—plaid taffeta—clearly defined plaids in your simple jumper dinner dresses or period evening gowns.

This spring the Chinese influence is great—large splashy prints in evening skirts, with long-sleeved jersey blouses. Speaking of blouses, any color, any type would be in style—frothy feminine or smoothly tailored.

If you wish to be more formal, organdie and mouselline de soie are very good—evening dresses this year harken back to grandmother's day—with large full skirts, full-length or three-quarter-length sleeves—high backs and low-cut neck lines.

However, this year these will be gay or be conservative with the classic knot styles.

Be innocent and demure with the off-face bonnets—be extremely chic and sophisticated with a Suzzy or Lily Dache creation.

Whatever style you choose, have color—yellow for the warmness of spring—patriotic red and blue—and the tender tone shades of violet, mauve, and pink.

For evening tie a gay abueleta over your curls [a kerchief which fastens under your chin and makes a neat color for an evening cape]. Glance over the family album—you will find many helpful hints.

Suits

And now for your suit—the central theme of every college girl's wardrobe—practical, to knock about the campus—chic and neat for days in town or traveling. The ever-popular gabardine and covert cloth are highly in vogue with the long jacket, large box pockets and fully pleated skirt, and crisp cotton or piqué blouses with low V neck. Plaids ride on the high wave of fashion. Let your imagination carry you from the small-checked design in clove brown or dove gray with a bright elusive thread, to the large riotous plaids of black, white, and revolutionary red. Your newest suit for these still rather breezy days of spring should, of course, be a tweed, a brandy tan topped by a bright green wool tweed cape and turban to match. Green is your spring color—a knockabout cashmere-finished tweed with frivolous honey-colored blouse. For traveling and sightseeing, become silhouetted in a navy twill with sharp, challenging lines, heightened by a white piqué blouse and patriot red accessories. Soften the effect of your cadet blue rayon and wool alpaca with a frilly, delicate marquisette blouse and plenty of transparent veil on your pill-box—wear a hand-painted blouse with your wine-red jersey or pepper flannel. Already tired of your boxy shantung jacket? Change to a flag-red blazer with dolman sleeves, and watch your spirits rise. Have your suits young and challenging to meet every kind of weather.

Dresses

The spring prints for your new dresses—bright yellows with sharp black geometric figures, circles, spirals on sea-foam green Canton crepe, your new shirt-waist style in flashing polka-dotted silk crepe, and petite poplin. For your solid colors in the outstanding navy blues or black—choose a charming rayon crepe with dolman sleeves and softened by piqué revers. Faille, one of the most popular materials of the season, and taffeta for your princess dress. For trim lines and a finished appearance, a basque dress, with full skirt of banded taffeta flowing from a beautifully fitted waist—nothing could be more youthful or graceful. One of your smartest and most comfortable ensembles will picture you in a new bolero dress—colors from raven black, trimmed with taffeta, through the startling shades of pueblo brown and electric blue. Redingotes, particularly of bright wool, with firmly rounded shoulders and dolman sleeves, should find their little nook in your wardrobe. Enhance every costume by a brilliant contrast, or soft blending in accessories.

Will you join our Easter parade—will you be one of our faultlessly groomed women, or handsomely attired men—will you be the epitome of fashion—but of course.

In fact, what could be more smart than the short or high vamp shoes—especially those in the stretchy lastex material? The open toe and heel are quite coquettish, but think of the marvelously gay colors that are being shown—the very life of spring—in feet first.

Literally and figuratively your head will be in the clouds—clouds of floating veils—tiny shiny black pillboxes surmounted with moss roses, jersey turbans (which are merely the continuation of a neck scarf) or glamorous sky blue cart wheels.

Be fantastically frivolous and much fewer formal evening dresses—military uniforms demand semi-formal dresses—the draft has now—

We have discussed clothes from shoes to hats but we must remember our cosmetics, nail polish and perfume—

Pack away in moth balls those deep winter shades and bring out the wild, light, lively pink and rose reds—

Peggy Sage has three new shades—ginger tea (very tawny), fireweed (invigorating red) and rhubarb pick-me-up pink. There are also many other new shades—better look them over—and while you are about it dab a bit of Rubenstein's Heavenscent on your ear lobes. Lentheric's Pink Party is very enticing—but we like Hubbadaire's Tulip Time best.

Be enticing and alluring or young and sweet.

Well, hope to see you Sunday in all of your glorious self and sporting a spring-like corsage on the lapel of that new suit or coat.

Kingsley Contest

The annual Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest will be held early in the month of May, the exact date will be announced later. Prizes of twenty-five, fifteen, and ten dollars are awarded for the first three places in the Contest. The men of the student body, who are interested in entering this Contest, and who have not won first place in previous Contests, are requested to leave their names with Mr. Powers, Director of Debate, in the Office of the Vermont Christian Association, in the Old Mill, as soon as possible.

New Cooperative House Next Year

Dorm To Be Named in Honor of Mrs. Claggett

In September of this year the University expects to open its third large cooperative house to accommodate twenty undergraduate women students. The new dormitory, to be called Claggett House, is known locally as the Gates Property on South Willard Street, number 301. Students living in the house this past year have taken their meals at Grassmount. The dormitory will be directed by Mrs. C. C. Moody.

In naming the new cooperative dormitory "Claggett House," the University pays tribute to the memory of Mrs. Delena Claggett who guided the first venture in cooperative housing made by a large group of women students at the University of Vermont. After the first experimental year 1934-35 when Rand House was used for women students who wished to live cooperatively, Mrs. Claggett moved with the group into Sanders Hall. There she developed more fully the pattern of gracious, purposeful living which now particularly characterizes Sanders and Allen House. While continuing as resident director of Sanders, Mrs. Claggett assisted in the opening of Allen House, supervising the meals there until her untimely death in the winter of 1936.

By her efficiency and noble spirit Mrs. Claggett established her cooperative project securely at the University of Vermont. Her initiative and personal charm left a lasting impression on the campus.

Notice

Mr. Richard A. Buck of the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, will be at the University of Vermont Friday, April 18, to interview any who may be interested in obtaining a position with the Company. Students wishing to talk with Mr. Buck should leave their names with my secretary as soon as possible.

Mr. Buck expects to arrive at the University at 9:30 A.M. and have twenty minutes to half hour interviews with those interested.

Spring Ushers in Masculine Styles For the Well-dressed College Man

If you're youngish and the weather is springish, we will bet our last beer money that you've at least a few thoughts about new clothes. The first two conditions are certainly fulfilled and being in college cinches the deal. 'Nuff said—let's look over a few vital statistics.

There is nothing radically new in materials—covert, gabardine and off-shaded tweeds being fundamental favorites, but we do note several decided musts as far as styles and cuts go.

A high military collar is the best bet in a light-weight topcoat. Your choice will also be correct if it includes slash pockets and fly front. The best materials are covert and gabardine twills. Incidentally, this year's models are cut from two to three inches shorter than ordinarily. The actual knee-length coats are another thing; they seem to be more for fall wear.

If you have your eagle eye set on a suit, don't forget to consider those off-shade tweeds. Covert is also very good as is the ever-popular gabardine. The great majority of them seem to be of the single-breasted three-button variety. A new color for gabardine is rich olive-drab.

The important thing about suits is the long cut of the coat (one and a half to two inches more than usual) and the full drape trousers with a narrow cuff worn high. Coat backs are plain with single vent optional.

For later summer wear you can still keep real cool in the very practical, comfortable Palm Beach suits. Single or double-breasted.

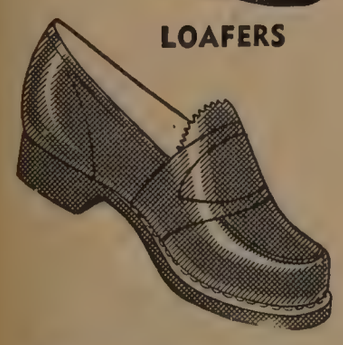
Sports coats are always a problem to choose because there is such a variety of styles and materials, to say nothing of colors. Although the latter are still in good taste, striped Shetland jackets loom as heir apparent to plaids. Camel's hair is unusually popular at present. Bold jackets call for simpler patterned slacks and shirt. Plain colors allow patterned shirts and socks. Slacks of covert cloth or just plain flannel seem to be most popular. Practically all jackets are plain back, three-button single-breasted and single vent optional.

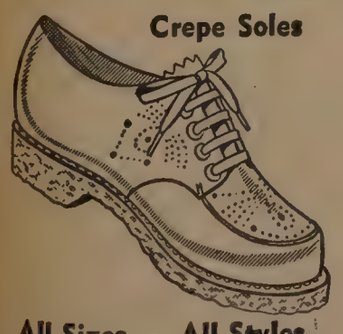
Even though you have everything else, your girl won't give you a second look unless you have the proper accessories in the line of shirt, tie, hat and shoes.

The best all-around investment in a shirt is the plain or striped Oxford shirt with button-down collar. And it isn't too heavy for summer wear. Also, for real comfort and fine taste, don't overlook the obvious advantages of the soft, wide-spread, lounge collar shirt.

In ties, the crochet knit silk is runner-up to the favored foulard.

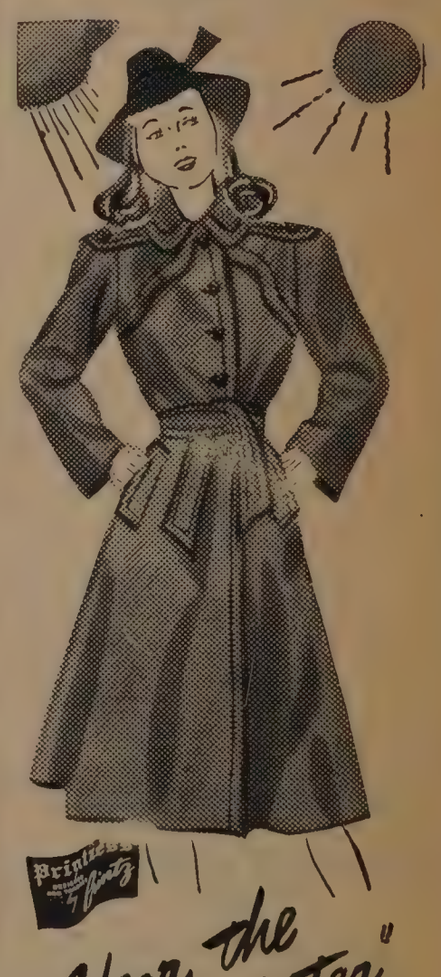
Shoes of waterproof leather, cordovan finish, moccasin style with heavy crepe soles will help you to weather treks to Southwick on rainy nights while you can feel completely at home on any sports occasion with a wide-brimmed, narrow-band hat on your curly locks. Make it a low crown, too.





For a final touch, go downtown and get yourself a cable-stitch, V-neck slip-on sweather in some good solid color.

Clothed in the best of taste, you are now able to challenge the alleged style superiority of the boys from Harvard, Yale, and dear old Nassau. Seriously, though, don't forget to use your own good judgment and critical eye as a final judge over any dictated fashions because, after all, you're the one who's going to wear 'em!



DON'T FORGET—Boulder Dance, April 19. Orchestra, Catamounts. 20c per person.

Gardner Satisfied With Results of Southern Baseball

Outdoor Experience, Many New Players Will Bolster Team

The southern trip was officially pronounced a success by Coach Larry Gardner upon his return from the land of the balmy breezes and the tanned torsos. The squad returned to Burlington Monday evening after having passed an enjoyable sojourn in the sunny Southland that was productive of some very good baseball and some invaluable experience.

The boys encountered some very chilly weather in Philadelphia on their first day out-of-doors. They lost a heartbreaker, but gave a very good account of themselves. The frigidity had a marked effect on the players, for they didn't get over it for a period of about three or four days. Coupled with this was the loss to the team of Dick Healy, a veteran shortstop who can always be counted on for some good baseball, due to a bad spike wound in the first inning of the University of Pennsylvania game. Dick finished out the game, but he was really in no shape to do it. He was forced to quit and has been out of action ever since. His leg has responded to treatment and it is hoped that he will be able to work out in about a week.

Capt. Frank Taylor would have been a great help in some of those tight ball games, but his injury to his hand is expected to render him hors de combat for a while yet. These unexpected blows are taken philosophically by Coach Gardner, who feels that something similar will come up every year to handicap his team.

The benefits garnered from this trip are not immediately obvious, but it is more than likely that the Cats will be tough to knock over after seven games against tough opposition under their belts. Their experience will stand them in good stead when they settle down to play teams more in their class. Coach Gardner would like to win a good percentage of their games down South, but he feels it an impossibility and concentrates on preparation for the objective games of the season which come later on. He was very much pleased with the work of Al Shaw and Clarence Akley, two pitchers who showed that they will come along and develop into good college chuckers. Charlie Smith turned in some fine performances behind the plate. Although he was hampered by a game ankle, he caught the full nine innings of every game. Bob Doherty and Veteran Johnny Spasyk carried the offensive burden of the team with neat averages at the platter. The squad as a whole needs more work and will profit by more experience.

The trip was not confined to baseball alone. The sightseeing in Philadelphia and Washington furnished a great deal of enjoyment in spare moments. The Mellon Art Museum and the Smithsonian Institute took a lot of the boys' time, as they gazed on these buildings' wonders. Yes, the trip was a howling success from more than one angle!

Frosh Ball Squad Will Be Cut Soon

For the past month the Kittens' battery has been limbering lazy muscles in the cage.

Last Tuesday there were thirty-five men who turned out for the first real workout, which was held in the cage, due to the condition of the field. At that time the men were divided into four infield groups and put into action in "pepper games." All thirty-five men were given an opportunity to exhibit ability and their coach, Fuzzy Evans, will soon cut the team down to handling size. The team will be cut with two affecting factors in view: First, scholastic eligibility (more definite after Easter), and, secondly, the individual aptitude for a certain position.

With the recent warm days, the field is improving daily. Tenacious winter is yielding to the enchanting spring sun but the frosh baseball boys must not give any ground to its wiles via windows or they will no longer be eligible for the positions on the team to which they aspire.

Tennis Prospects Show Improvement

New Courts Will Give Chance for Practice

With only an approximate two weeks remaining before the first match, Coach Carpenter has hopes of utilizing the newly erected tennis courts next to Centennial Field this subsequent week for a rapid once over of his squad. Although this will afford his candidates only a few outdoor sessions before their hardest game, that being with Amherst, away, April 24, this year's outdoor practices will commence considerably early in comparison to other years. Confined to only one court in the gym, Professor Carpenter has not had much opportunity to witness new aspirants carefully.

The team's schedule comprises twelve matches, but Professor Carpenter did not think it to be very difficult. "It is a little easier than previous years," he commented, "with Amherst our first game and Trinity our last game the sole formidable foes. Though our record last year was not good, a great deal of our ineffectiveness was due to the inability of our fifth and sixth men to come through with triumphs. The two matches lost to Middlebury were by one point each."

Returning to action this spring campaign are five veterans, namely, Ed Simpson, captain of the team, Larry Simpson, Dick Lynch, Art Wolk, and Sam Foti. Along with these stalwarts are some promising newcomers and members of last year's squad. West and Black, fresh from the frosh team, show ability, and Katzew and Davis are remnants of the returning varsity squad. If these newcomers are able to fill in the fifth and sixth positions favorably, the team should demonstrate a vast improvement over the preceding year.

Students Harder Boiled, Think Less Emotionally

Hartford, Conn. (ACP).—College students today do not intend to be carried off their feet by emotional appeals, as they say the last generation was.

That is the conclusion of the Rev. Dr. Remsen B. Ogilby, president of Trinity College.

Doctor Ogilby observes that "mass thinking, fortunately, is not characteristic of collegiate groups. Generally, undergraduates of today are seemingly somewhat tougher in their thinking and certainly less sentimental than their older brothers, uncles and fathers a quarter century ago."

Doctor Ogilby believes today's college students are "loyal and patriotic, but in a quiet and restrained manner which would seem to indicate they are trying to base their decisions upon reason rather than emotion. I find our young men definitely suspicious of propaganda," he said.

Walbridge and Maclay Call Frosh Racqueteers

All of those who are interested in the freshman tennis squad will meet at 7 p.m. in the gymnasium on Friday, April 11. There will be an opportunity for those who bring their racquets to get in some practice at this first meeting.

This year the coaching job will be in charge of Messrs. Walbridge and Maclay, while M. Levin will assume the manager's duties.

It will not be too long before the outside courts will be ready for use. Until then, the new gymnasium court will be used.

Varsity Riflemen Take Second Place

Frosh are Third in Hearst Trophy Match

Living up to the traditions of the Green Mountain Boys the varsity and freshman rifle teams captured the lion's share of the honors in a fourteen-team Hearst trophy rifle match by winning second and third place.

The varsity team, composed of the following, were: G. H. Stickney '42, East Thetford; L. A. Weaver '43, Starksboro; J. H. Pratt '42, Clarendon; W. M. Colehamer '41, Trenton, N. J.; and S. Cerutti '43, Barre, won a silver plaque and second-place medals, losing first-place honors to the University of Maine team by the narrow margin of one point.

The freshman team, composed of G. J. Holden, Jr. '44, Burlington; H. E. Crossley, Jr. '44, South Burlington; D. H. Steenburn '44, Southbridge, Mass.; F. W. Miller '44, Longmeadow, Mass.; and R. C. Darlington '44, Brockton, Mass., finished up the match with a strong hold on third place.

G. H. Stickney with a score of 194 out of 200 was high gun for the Vermont team No. 1 and captured highest individual honors for the entire New England senior unit of seventy competitors. The honor of placing among the high ten individuals likewise was awarded G. J. Holden, Jr., and H. E. Crossley, Jr., who tied for first place on the freshman team with a score of 188 out of a possible 200.

Mid-westerners Hike Too

Spender, Ind. (ACP).—Approximately 300 students from 100 midwestern universities and colleges will meet here in May to form a collegiate hiking organization and to obtain recognition of hiking as a regular student activity.

Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Indiana department of conservation, announced the conclave.

The conference is an outgrowth of the Midwest Hiking Conference held last fall under joint sponsorship of the Indiana department of conservation and the national park service, when students from six states participated.

Return From the South

Coach Larry Gardner and his twelve tourists returned home yesterday after closing their southern training trip with a 4-2 win over Yale on Tuesday. On the journey, one other victory was collected over George Washington University and five defeats were absorbed. With seven games under their belts the Cats should be ready for anyone now. The victory and defeat record, thus far, means nothing. The fact that Larry has three dependable pitchers in Carlson, Akley, and Shaw is much more important. The Cats also displayed vicious hitting power in their seven tilts with a collection of almost fifty drives of which ten were extra base knocks. Bob Doherty brought home a .400 batting average, and is almost certain to remain a permanent fixture in the outfield this year. Both Spasyk and Beauchemin averaged better than .300 and established themselves as long-range hitters. Johnny clouted two homers, each with one man aboard, and two doubles, while Hank collected two triples and a double.

Dick Healy sustained the only major injury of the trip. His injury came in the initial contest against Penn. and his loss was deeply felt by the team as close to nine errors were committed at short after his removal.

Looking at the actions of individual players during their week of training games, we see definite potentialities for a good season this year. The pitching and fielding are due to improve with practice, and with Spark-plug Dick Healy and Capt. Frank Taylor back in harness our lads should really roll!

On the Cinders

With the first meet slightly more than a week in the future, Coach Post is working hard to develop a team which will show well against a powerful Williams aggregation. The loss of Gordie Smith and Dave Stowell leaves the team weak in the dashes and middle distances. Contrary to past years, Vermont should be strong in the field events this year with Warden, Squires, and Parker carrying most of the load in the weights.

Archie has a valuable man in Bert Mott. As a member of last year's frosh team, Mott competed and carried off top honors in the dashes, the hurdles, the high jump, and the broad jump. He is a natural in the hurdles and will, no doubt, specialize in timber topping this year. However, he can be used in either the high jump or the broad jump or both, or there is the possibility that he may be used in one of the dashes. He can fill in where the team is at its weakest. Too bad he isn't twins!

History of Cynic Shows Growth of Paper and High Basic Traditions

"Of the city, the students, and the college the CYNIC will aim to be fairly representative.

"If the name on our cover means anything, it means that we shall honestly speak the convictions of our mind; it means that our objects are utilitarian; it means that all things conflicting with the interests we represent, we shall constantly and consistently combat."

The preceding quotation was taken from the editorial of the first U. V. M. publication to be known as the CYNIC, April 25, 1883.

Under the constitution of the CYNIC as published in the May 20, 1885 issue it was stated that the CYNIC should be controlled by a board of editors, nine in number. This board of editors was elected as follows: two each by Lambda Iota, Sigma Phi, Delta Psi, and Phi Delta Theta societies, and one by the medical department. Each of these societies elected one editor from the junior class and one from the sophomore class. There was a managing editor, a business editor, two editors for general literature, one science editor, an editor for personals, and one editor each for locals, books, and exchanges. Under this set-up the CYNIC was published once in three weeks throughout the college year.

In 1898 the CYNIC was published once in two weeks and the editorial board consisted of a managing editor, a business manager, and an assistant business manager. There were also assistant editors in charge of alumni notes, locals, athletic exchanges, and general literature.

This sketch of the history of the CYNIC, brief as it is, serves well to indicate how changed and enlarged is the scope of our present-day CYNIC. One has only to note the masthead of this issue to be reminded of the number of people on our campus who are doing voluntary work on the school newspaper. Not included in this list are some sixty scrubs who are also doing their part.

Anyone may sign up to scrub the CYNIC. These scrubs are assigned beats which must be covered for each issue. At present there are forty-five beats covering the different departments and organizations on campus. When a scrub has fifty inches to his credit (in the recording editor's records) he is up for the consideration of the senior staff as a reporter. Reporters are assigned stories covering special events and anything which is not likely to come in under one of the beats. Manifestation of ability, and again reliability, are the points considered by the senior staff in promoting a reporter to the position of news editor.

Three news editors are assigned to the publication of each issue: one has charge of assignments; one takes care of the rewriting and getting copy down to the Free Press printing department; one has charge of make-up.

It takes sixteen hours down at the Free Press office to get out a four-page issue, twenty-four hours for a six-page issue. The people in charge of make-up, the news editor, editor-in-chief, managing editor, and sports editors spend all of Monday and Thursday afternoons at the Free Press office.

Business Staff

No less important to the maintenance of the CYNIC is the business staff. The business department is composed of three systems: advertising, circulation, and office managing. Advertising consists of soliciting local ads and getting national ones through an agency in New York. In this way support is given to the CYNIC over the amount allotted to it from the activity fee. The people in charge of circulation send out copies to subscribers and exchange copies with other papers. The office manager keeps all records filed in the office.

The members of the CYNIC staff who attended the convention of the Associated Collegiate Press in Detroit last year discovered that U. V. M. is one of the few colleges in the country with so small an enrollment to publish a paper twice a week.

It is interesting to note that S. Burton Heath, whose autobiography, "Yankee Reporter," has recently been published, was editor of the CYNIC during his senior year here and that he worked up to a position of importance in the New York Telegram.

New Profs for Old

Philadelphia, Pa. (ACP).—A cooperative plan is being worked out under which Swarthmore, Haverford and Bryn Mawr Colleges will exchange faculty members and students.

Dr. John W. Nason of Swarthmore announces that besides the exchange of students and faculty members, the plan will enable the institutions to hire professors who will teach at all three colleges.

Why Don't Upperclass Members Try Out for Their Class Plays?

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

We were told that in the past few years it has been like pulling teeth to get upperclassmen out for play tryouts. Now we know that this is the tooth, the whole tooth, and nothing but the tooth.

There are no teeth left to pull. Exactly three individuals out of the three upper classes tried out for the class plays. As is generally the case at UVM thirty freshmen showed up for theirs.

The Dramatic Club is willing to put on the freshman play sometime within the next few weeks but we are unwilling to hear any more criticism from the large bunch of students who have been talking a lot but saying nothing and doing less.

Some students didn't come out, we hear, because they couldn't make the junior class play. We feel that the junior class play is probably better off without those individuals.

We held not just one tryout, but three. This meant that Prof. J. Metcalf and Prof. Leon Dean, who so kindly acted as judges for the first two, wasted four hours. It also meant that certain Dramatic Club members wasted almost ten hours. And the time put in by typists was to no end.

We realize that criticizing the Vermont students is for the large part like writing on water but we did want you to know how we feel.

Terribly sincerely but disgustedly,

'Neath the Moorfoot Hills

By ELIZABETH B. CHAFFEE

The farmhouse stood snuggled at the foot of the hills, a lonesome place, far away from any neighboring dwellings. The meadows stretched away around it.

Down the narrow road from Peebles wound a flock of sheep, making a splotch of bright orange color on the landscape. They had newly been dipped in a specially prepared wash to destroy the sheep tick, or kaid, as they were sometimes called. A dog ran back and forth from one side to another, keeping the sheep in order. Behind them an automobile slowly made its way, waiting for a chance to pass. The driver showed no impatience or anger at being thus delayed. There in Scotland the sheep were all important. One had to expect to be hindered by them.

James, who was supervising both sheep and dog, stopped to pick up a turnip from the field they were passing. He bit into it. It was white and to his boyish taste delicious. Turnips were grown for the hogs and cattle, but all schoolboys delighted in eating them raw.

In the distance the wild Moorfoot Hills proudly flaunted their sturdy greenness, and on his other hand James could just catch a glimpse of the River Tweed. On such a day as this he could not do other than worship life.

In the house his mother was mending. The younger children played together boisterously. The heavy pendulum of the giant clock swung contentedly to and fro. In the fireplace big blocks of peat were burning.

A crash, as of something falling, suddenly seemed almost to shake the house. Mrs. Hall sprang up. Thread and socks tumbled to the floor. "What was that?" she asked.

"It sounded like something tipping over in the attic," Mary offered.

"I'll go up and look around."

Mrs. Hall hurried up the stairs. She was a little woman quick of movement, easily perturbed. She reached the attic and surveyed the scene. Everything was standing stolidly in its place. No box lay upturned with contents sprawling, no chair kicked its legs into the air, no table reposed on its side. Everything was in perfect order.

Mrs. Hall made a thorough search, but neither there nor in any of the other rooms upstairs could she find any cause for the loud noise they had all so distinctly heard.

"It was a sign," she said. "I'm sure it was." She believed implicitly in superstitions. Downstairs again she took up her knitting and the children went on with their play.

It was then that they brought James in—killed instantly by a truck whose driver had swung around the car following him and the sheep.

Food Map of Europe as of Today

The starvation areas of Europe can be seen at a glance, above. This map will now darken from month to month as, in many countries, the last remaining food stocks reach exhaustion.

New York (Special) — All Europe is on short rations. Only tiny Portugal still commands a normal food supply. Before the first of the next harvests can be reaped, five months must elapse. In some countries, remaining food stocks will have been exhausted long before, when conditions of slow starvation which already exist will become actual famine. Moreover, in several European countries the harvest covers only a few months consumption.

The above map has been drawn to bring the threatened areas into relief. As may be seen at a glance, the British Isles, Germany, Italy and the Balkans, although all on rations, are not in danger. But the little, western democracies, always dependent on overseas supplies and now cut off by the blockade, are already on a semi-starvation basis.

Darkest, immediate spots in the picture are Belgium and Poland (the latter because of war devastation and partitioning). Here, actual famine already prevails. People are dying of sheer hunger. But Spain, France, Holland, Norway and Finland are not far behind. The above map will now darken quickly from month to month. The terrible food emergency in Europe, so long forecast by food experts, is now but a step away.

Spain may be able to get some help from the Argentine. In the case of the other countries, however, their main hope seems to be the United States. Like the Argentine, the United States not only holds large, surplus carry-overs of foodstuffs of which it would be glad to get rid, but each one of these starving countries holds in this country frozen dollar balances ample to pay for the food they need. Belgium, alone, has several hundred million dollars in assets here. It is then primarily a question whether it can be arranged to pass this food through the blockade if, at the European end, it can be taken in control by a tight, neutral agency which will supervise its distribution to non-belligerent, civilian populations only—and a guarantee that it will not fall into other hands.

Sigma Gammas Lead In Scholastic List

Sigma Gamma, local sorority, has the highest average marks among sororities and fraternities at U.V.M. for the work of the first half of the present college year.

Following Sigma Gamma in scholastic standings come Alpha Chi Omega, Kappa Alpha Theta, Delta Delta Delta, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Pi Beta Phi.

All grades of Sigma Gamma's nineteen members averaged nearly 85% (84.44) and the five other groups had averages of above 80%.

Coming in seventh place is Delta Phi Epsilon followed by Alpha Xi Delta. The remaining men's fraternities finished in this order: Sigma Nu, Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Sigma, Delta Psi, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Phi, Lambda Iota.

Ohio University awarded a diploma to John Newton Templeton, a Negro, before the Civil War.

Self-supporting fraternity men at the University of California at Los Angeles are about as numerous as self-supporting non-fraternity men.

Glee Clubs to Go To N. E. Festival

Ten Colleges Guests Form 500-Voice Chorus

On Thursday at 1.30 the Glee Clubs leave the Music Building for the New England College Choral Festival to be held April 18 and 19 at the University of New Hampshire in Durham.

Ten colleges are participating in the two concerts there Friday and Saturday evenings. Friday evening the Glee Clubs will present individual numbers and on Saturday evening the groups will unite to make a 500-voice chorus. This chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present the Mozart "Mass in F Major" and the Cantata No. 4, "Christ Lay by Death Enshrouded."

These are ten colleges participating: Boston University, Colby College, Framingham Teachers' College, Keene Teachers' College, Plymouth Teachers' College, Rhode Island State College, Simmons College, University of Connecticut, University of Vermont and the University of New Hampshire.

The conductor, Hugh Ross, has been the conductor of the Schola Cantorum for the last twelve years. During that time he has produced major classics for chorus and orchestra in New York, including the "St. John Passion" of Bach and the "Requiem Mass" of Mozart. He has worked with Toscanini, Koussevitsky, Mengeberg and almost every famous conductor of the New York Philharmonic in the preparation of such works as Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." He was executive member of the New York World's Fair Music Department; is at present engaged in organizing music programs for the United States army camps, and will be on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this summer for choral conducting.

The fifty students who will make the trip will be entertained by the University of New Hampshire and will take in a formal dance Saturday evening.

Old Stone Collar Shown at Museum

Ancient tribal sacrifices and dark, long-forgotten Mexican Indian rites come to mind as one looks at the Indian "collar" or yoke of carved stone, which has recently been loaned to the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont by Mr. Henry E. Schnakenberg of Manchester and New York City. Mr. Schnakenberg found the ancient yoke among the many and diversified objects of art which made up the famous William Randolph Hearst collection, now on sale at Gimbel Brothers in New York. A special case is being constructed at the museum for the stone yoke and it will soon be permanently displayed in the Primitive Cultures Room. Until then visitors can see the yoke in one of the Special Exhibit cases in the entrance hall of the museum.

The yoke has somewhat the shape of a horseshoe, the outside of which is richly carved to represent a conventionalized reptile's head with large eyes and a sinister grin. It was made by the Totonac Indians, who lived on the east coast of central Mexico from about 400 to 600

Prof. L. W. Dean to be Founder's Day Speaker

His New Book, Written as Part of Sesqui-Centennial, Will Form Basis of Address

Prof. Leon W. Dean, of the University of Vermont English department and a graduate of the University in 1915, has been chosen to deliver the main address at this year's Founder's Day exercises, held May 1 at the University. When University faculty and students congregate in the Ira Allen Chapel to honor the memory of Ira Allen, the University founder, they will be commemorating the 150th year since the laying of the foundations of what is the present-day University of Vermont. The formal sesquicentennial observance itself, however, will not come until next October 3, 4 and 5, when the University will round out its first 150 years of existence.

Author of Book

Professor Dean's work in Vermont and University of Vermont history gives him unusual qualifications for delivering the Founder's Day message in the sesquicentennial year. He is the author of a new book, just published by the Vermont Historical Society, entitled "The Admission of Vermont into the Union," which tells the exciting story of Vermont's early struggles for statehood and her existence as an independent country previous to joining the Union in 1791. The book was written as part of the state sesquicentennial celebration and will form the basis of the author's remarks on Founder's Day.

After graduating from the University of Vermont, Professor Dean was editor and partner of the Lake Placid News of Lake Placid, N. Y., for two years. He has been a member of the University English department since 1923, editor of the University alumni magazine since 1927, and director of University publicity since 1932. He has also been a radio announcer and a writer of stories for young people. He is a past governor of the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of Vermont, a past president of the Vermont Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution, and is now president of the League of Vermont Writers and the Rowland E. Robinson Memorial Association.

Elections

Honorary societies of the University of Vermont will soon hold their annual elections, which will be announced during the Founder's Day services Thursday morning, May 1, with special installation exercises being held at that time to induct into membership the new men and women of Boulder and Mortar Board, senior honorary societies. Other honor societies whose elections will be announced at the

Mr. Kirby to Return In Concert April 20

Proceeds to Aid Greece; Mr. Millikan, Soloist

Combining two wonderful opportunities, first, of welcoming back a great artist, William Kirby, pianist, and secondly, the opportunity, under such an auspicious and delightful setting, to give our "bit" towards aid for Greece, the concert on Sunday evening next promises to be a memorable one.

The joint program will be presented by William Kirby, well-known pianist, and George Millikan, baritone, of the U. V. M. faculty, and all proceeds will be given to the Greek Relief Fund. "Help Greece—Call It an Investment in Democracy," may well be adopted as a slogan in giving aid to Britain and her allies. The desperate news coming daily from Greece makes it imperative that aid be sent at once and generously, if our "investment in democracy" is to pay us dividends in peace of mind and safety.

Many remember the fine work of Mr. Kirby while he was acting head of the music department at U. V. M. last year. A graduate of the department of music at Harvard, he also studied at the Royal College of Music in London, under the great conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, and at various times conducted the B. B. C. Symphony Orchestra. A brilliant pianist, his program promises to be a treat for all.

George Millikan's fine baritone voice is well known throughout the whole Burlington district. His early musical training began at the University of Southern California, and finally led him to Warner Bros. R. K. O. and Paramount Movie Studios. Coming East to Yale, he joined the University choir, directed by Harry B. Jepson. He is at present soloist at the College Street Church.

Tickets for this outstanding event may be purchased at the College Book Store or at the door, as follows: Reserved seats, $1.00; general admission, 50 cents; students, 25 cents.

Pre-Med. Aptitude Test Announced

The Association of American Medical Colleges' aptitude test, required of all prospective medical students, will be given at the University of Vermont May 1. The test governs entrance to medical college for the year 1942, and should be taken at this time for that year. The test is now being given in the spring of the next to the last pre-medical year instead of during the last pre-medical year as formerly.

The test, which is one of the normal requirements for admission to medical school, should be taken by all students who expect to apply for entrance to a medical school by the fall of 1942. The May 1 date, three o'clock in the afternoon at the Medical College, is the only time the test will be given this year. Students planning to enter medical school in 1942 must take it then.

Applications are to be made immediately to Miss Cornelia Baylies at the Medical College.

Prof. Pooley Talks To Classical Club

The Classical Club members welcomed four new freshmen into their group last Thursday night, April 10. The new members are: Margaret Fake, Dorothy Johnson, Ruth True and Rosemary Warren, who read selections from St. Jerome's writings.

Prof. J. E. Pooley had charge of the program and opened the meeting with an explanatory talk about St. Jerome.

A large number attended the meeting held at Southwick and the group plans to hold another some time before June.

Refreshments were served and singing of Latin songs brought the meeting to a close.

Action Not Inertia!

The tuition poll appearing in this issue of the CYNIC has brought to light some interesting information. For one thing it has revealed that as far as a majority of the students are concerned the raise will hinder them but won't check their education. Also as far as could be learned only a very small group are definitely planning to transfer in spite of the change.

However, there are two problems which should be carefully considered as they vitally affect the future policies of the institution.

(1) Will the rate of tuition turn away future students from the University? It is already evident that some of the class of '44 are planning to transfer next year. It is no more than human for people to want to get as much as possible for their money and since the tuition raise has not been accompanied by any noticeable increases in educational facilities, students planning to enter Vermont might feel the rates are too high and choose a slightly more expensive school where they will be sure of a high-grade education. That extra fifteen dollars may be the deciding factor in many a student's decision to go elsewhere. We feel the administration should carefully consider this angle and find out whether or not the tuition raise will defeat its own ends.

(2) Though it is encouraging to note that most students are not drastically affected by the recent raise, it is evident that it is going to make the going much harder for many students. The women students are even more seriously affected because they will have to meet the further expense of increased room rent. Many students have made their plans on the basis of the old tuition rate and the added sum will mean further paring of budgets. And there are certain limits even to economy. Naturally the students affected will have to have either more work or more scholarships. As far as we know the University is in no position to provide this help. It would be very helpful if some really practical suggestions could be made which would help the administration meet this problem. If the tuition raise is to be a permanent one, the sooner the problems it poses are solved the better. If there is any alternate plan to take its place, it would be worth discussing.

It should be especially gratifying to the administration to find that several of the groups have shown a generous cooperative spirit and a willingness to help at this critical time. But the poll revealed the existence of an alarming indifference to campus problems on the part of the student body. All during the poll the interviewers were confronted by case after case of indifference and even ignorance of the situation among the student body. Many students were only vaguely aware that the University was in financial difficulties or that the tuition had been raised. Many knew about the situation but were perfectly unmoved one way or the other. Few constructive suggestions were advanced. Such students deserve no sympathy.

Right now the question of University finances is under discussion in all the newspapers of the state. It is a problem which threatens the very existence of this institution and yet a great part of the student body is ignorant of its implications. This constitutes a serious indictment of student opinion on the campus. It suggests an utter lack of interest or pride in the school. We are not advocating a revolution against administration policies but an active interest on the part of the students in matters which concern them. How is the University going to serve the interests of the students when they take no interest whatsoever in its

Why A Tuition Raise?

For the past week the members of the senior staff and the news editors of the CYNIC have been interviewing students of the various representative groups on the campus in an attempt to get a comprehensive picture of student reaction to the recent raise in tuition rates announced by the trustees just before spring vacation. The main purpose of the survey was to secure information which would be of help not only to the students but to the administration. The issue is an especially pertinent one as many students here at Vermont are going through school on very limited budgets. Furthermore, as brought out in the survey published below there is a decided danger that the tuition raise will be overbalanced by losses in income due to students dropping out or refusing to start school at Vermont because of the amount required in tuition and fees. We hope that the results published below will be the starting point for active discussion of this matter on the part of both student body and administration in an attempt to solve the problems which the tuition raise will create. The CYNIC will welcome any letters or statements pertaining to issues raised in the poll printed below.

THE EDITORS.

Fraternity Opinion

Representative of nearly half the men on the campus, the fraternity group's most frequent reaction in the recent tuition raise poll was one of indifference, with an extremely small percentage of those polled reporting that they "won't be back next year" because of the new fee. However, many thought that the raise will decrease future enrollment figures. Sentiments in favor of the change were few and far between, with some voices raised in strong disapproval of the new set-up.

Typical of the general comment was: "Tuition raise? I expected more," or "What can I do about it?" and sarcastically

"Sure, I just love to pay the extra dough."

Stronger reactions, however, came from those who feel that U. V. M. is not offering enough for the money. This group's sentiment is best mirrored by such statements as "Why should I pay $385 (for tuition and activity fee) to go to Vermont when I can go to a school like Cornell for $400?"

Few opinions were offered as to the cause of the present fiscal problem and still fewer men offered suggestions for its solution. The dominant attitude, however, was that the tuition raise is a "negative approach to a positive problem." Those expressing such opinions felt that "the University is in dire need of a new president who will have the contacts necessary to secure needed endowments like President Bailey did, in view of the fact that the present directors can't do it themselves."

Aggie College

Although a raise in tuition was expected by most agricultural students, it was looked upon a little suspiciously. A statement as to the financial condition of these students would show why. In the first place, a very large majority of the Aggies come from rural sections and have lived on farms all their lives. Contrary to public opinion, money does not grow on farms and consequently these boys, and also the girls, are earning their own tuition, board and room, clothes, etc. It is the exception rather than the rule to find an Aggie that is entirely free from financial difficulties. In the entire Agricultural College there are only two students who are not burdened by finances. This is a very small percentage compared to the entire enrollment.

Of the fifty students interviewed, only one thought that the administration was justified in raising the tuition under their present financial condition. Most of these students will return since they have gone this far and it would be a loss to discontinue their education.

Opinions of the tuition raise are as follows:

"The average Vermonter cannot afford to pay that much tuition. It was too high before the raise."

"Incoming students should pay the new tuition but those now enrolled should be exempt."

"With all the state agricultural colleges in the country free or with a minimum tuition, the University of Vermont stands out as the only exception."

"Why should the student bear the brunt of a mismanaged administration?"

Reactions of Non-fraternity Men to the Tuition Raise

"How do you feel about the announcement that tuition for next year is to be raised?"

The general reaction, that of about fifty percent of those interviewed, was, "I don't know, I haven't thought too much about it." This seemed rather surprising, as most of the students questioned had to plan their finances pretty close, a good share of them working part or most of their way through college.

Students with definite ideas fell into two groups, one saying, "I guess it is necessary, but it seems a rather penny-wise pound-foolish way of meeting the emergency," and the other, a slightly smaller group, saying, "I don't like it. When you pay more, you expect more, and yet college this year is no different from last year, in spite of raised tuition." One fellow summed it up like this: "When I entered college, I was paying for, and getting, a good Plymouth car. This year I'm paying for a Dodge. Next year I pay for Fluid Drive, too. And I'm still getting last year's Plymouth—minus the headlights."

Relatively few dismissed the question with, "They're in a hole, and fifteen dollars isn't too much."

A second question, "How does the raise affect your plans for next year?" evoked more definite replies. Here there were three separate categories. The largest, over three-quarters of the total, said that it did not make any difference as far as returning next year was concerned, although many students thought that it would mean cutting corners here and there, and perhaps getting some extra work. This group included almost all the juniors and most of the sophomores.

Another group which included one or two juniors, a few sophomores, and a quarter of the freshmen contacted, felt that the extra fifteen dollars meant saying "If I come back next year," rather than "When I come back." Their expenses had already been pared to a minimum, and the raise in tuition would be the proverbial straw to break the camel's back.

The third group, small but positive, were making plans to go elsewhere. They generally objected to paying more money for the same thing, and their battle cry was, "Why, for twenty-five dollars more I could go to ——."

A fourth group, consisting of one individual, said, "There goes Kake Walk week-end."

The Women Independents

The following is a sample of the sentiment that prevails among the independent women on the campus. Due to lack of space most of the cases cannot be specifically cited. Some state that the raise will prohibit their returning; others will have to work longer hours and borrow larger sums; while there are others who will not be affected but who feel strongly for their fellow students who will be.

CASE I.

"I was very surprised at a second raise in tuition, coming so soon after last year's increase, and I feel that two such raises, following in such quick succession, are too much of a strain on the pocketbook of most students and their parents. In my case, it will mean either working longer this summer or borrowing a bit more, as my budget for the next college year was practically all planned. It seems to me that the financial situation could be alleviated without putting such a burden upon the students."

CASE II.

"When I first heard of the raise in tuition, I thought of leaving U. V. M. and going to some other college—surely there are many others which offer curricula which are just as good, and at even less cost. The fifteen dollars in itself isn't so much, but coupled with last year's raise, it's too much. Personally, I believe that these raises should apply only to incoming classes, not to students who are already in college and have enrolled under the illusion that the tuition was $300. It seems to me that the present expense is too heavy for the type of college which this is; certainly it is higher than other similar institutions."

CASE III.

"This tuition raise will not make any difference in my returning to U. V. M. next fall, but I think that the college will lose many students before they get through with it. I feel that the trustees should find a way out of this situation without overburdening the students. Furthermore, I can't see why the price of rooms should be raised too; the tuition increase is enough. The debts and expenses of many students are going to be increased enough as it is."

CASE IV.

"Being a junior I'll probably come back to U. V. M. next year, but if I were an underclassman I don't think I'd come back—there are many other universities that offer just as good courses at less expense. It seems unfair to me to raise the tuition twice within a year and a half. So many students will be forced either to stop college, go somewhere else, or take on an added burden of work."

CASE V.

"I shan't return to the college next September. Even with paying back scholarship grants, I feel that it will be cheaper in the end, and perhaps more profitable all around, to attend some other university. Why, it's terrific. A fellow could even attend Harvard by only adding $15 to next year's tuition."

Sorority Opinion

In a recent census taken among sororities on the hill, the general opinion was that the raise in tuition was a necessary evil. However, in addition to the higher room rent for girls it presents an added problem. Many feel that if it were raised any more it would mean the loss of too many students to make it worth while. The possibility of members of the class of '44 transferring to other colleges is great.

Many students believe that if the raise in tuition were limited to the incoming classes and not on the present student body there would not be such strenuous objections. Too many students have made their college plans on the basis of the old tuition.

On the whole, the girls are prepared to meet the raise cheerfully, wherever it is at all possible. The most feeling against the raise is among the secretarial and commercial teaching students who don't understand why their tuition is higher than the rest.

Is it for a laboratory fee? If so, why should freshmen and sophomores, who do not use the laboratory, be required to pay it? Thirty-five dollars is a high laboratory fee, compared with those required in other courses.

Sororities realize that the raise in tuition and room rents must be highly necessary. Despite the handicap that it will place upon many students, all will do their utmost to understand and cooperate.

Cooperative Houses

Forty girls in Allen House, Sanders Hall and Dresser Cottage were interviewed. Only eight of these are from out of State. These girls earn part of their board and are almost all of limited means. Twenty-four of these girls have no objections to the tuition raise. They feel that the University would not have asked for the money if it were not absolutely necessary. Some feel that the college should not have gotten into such a mess in the first place, but that it is their duty to help out since they have. For most of them it will mean more work or more scholarship help. It is interesting to note that of the twenty-four in favor of the raise, six are El.Ed. students and so not affected by the raise directly. One of the girls for it is a senior. Also, only two of these students are from out of State. Of this number, ten will need more work during the summer or next year, and five will need more scholarship aid. Two may drop out, and three will probably have to borrow. One out-of-state girl stated that she would have gone to Middlebury if she had known that the tuition was going to be raised, since one of her reasons for coming here in the first place was that the tuition was $50 less. So that shows how closely some students have to figure.

There are fifteen girls against the tuition raise. Two of these are El.Ed. students, whereas six of them are from out of State. They feel that they could go to just as good, if not a better, school in their own state. For instance, one girl wanted to go to Wheaton, but her family objected because it was too expensive. Now she could probably go there for less, if train fare, etc., is taken into consideration. Eight of these fifteen girls will need more work and seven more scholarship help, five may drop out and two may transfer; one will probably have to borrow. One girl also said that if she were a freshman she might transfer, but since she is a junior now, it would be rather

Carlson Has Measles; May Be Unavailable

The baseball tossers were blessed with real southern weather last Friday and Saturday and were able to get two good workouts under the careful guidance of Coach Larry Gardner, who is priming them for a two-day trip on Friday and Saturday this week at Trinity and Wesleyan respectively. It might have proved a bad setback if the boys had to return to the cage again after a two week's campaign out-of-doors in the South.

Friday's workout comprised a hitting drill and infield workouts. The pitchers also managed to get in some good licks, sewing them up for the batting practice. Centennial Field is in fairly good shape as a result of extensive work by the ground crew. The outfield is now being rolled, the infield is in very good shape except for a little sogginess.

Saturday the varsity had a scrimmage game with the frosh. The freshmen had had little actual work and were not too potent, so Coach Gardner evened things by putting the varsity battery with the yearlings and vice versa. Clarence Akley looked good in his three-inning stint, working smoothly and holding his mates down nicely. Roy Alberghini took over from there. The freshmen pitching for the varsity were two southpaws, Steadman Huard and Carl Urie. The exhibition was a ragged affair, but that is to be expected.

The hole at shortstop is being plugged by three candidates, Russ West, Randy Sullivan, and Whizzer White. It will be a problem to determine just who will make the grade and take over the position vacated by Dick Healy.

Bob Carlson, ace pitcher, has come down with the measles. It is not known whether or not he will be available this weekend. The injury jinx not only persists but insists on carrying off the outstanding ball players. First Frank Taylor, then Dick Healy, followed by Bob Carlson; who is next?

There were two boxing bouts, E. J. Pangburn '44 vs. A. C. Kinney '43 and W. J. Stetson '43 vs. L. J. Cyr '43.

The boys in the tumbling exhibition were: Mike Cozzalino '43, M. L. Riggs '43 and Charlie Smith.

Trackmen To Meet Williams On Sat.

Men in Jumps to Begin Outdoor Practice Today

April showers may bring May flowers, but they don't bring trackmen. Only four days remain for Coach Archie Post to round his cindermen into condition for the dual meet with Williams. Last Friday was the first time the squad was allowed to use the track on Centennial Field, and with only a week of actual practice on the track there is no time to be wasted, so old man Pluvious should harken to the fact that April showers impede the track aspirants.

Williams has a decided advantage in the fact that they possess an outdoor wooden track. This enabled their men to acquire that extra needed tune up before commencing to utilize the cinders. With three or four deep in every position the Catamount's first foe brings to town a well-balanced outfit. This meet may be termed a warm up for Williams and running trials for the Cats. Williams has always been tough for Vermont, and this year is no exception.

The sprints are causing Archie Post a great deal of worry. Although the weight events are pretty well taken care of, there are none too many dash men to account for the needed points. By having time trials this week Coach Post hopes to present a well-rounded team Saturday. The men in the jumps expect to begin their outdoor practice today.

Captain Kenny may not be available for the hurdles because of a strained muscle in his leg. This further lessens the Cats chance to make an adequate showing. Add the German measles to Coach Post's woes and you just about sum up the picture facing the Cats.

Among the Famed

Coach Larry Gardner who has been turning out good baseball teams at Vermont for a number of years was recently honored by Harry Heilman as the all-time all-star American League third baseman. Heilman has seen quite a bit of baseball since he won his American League batting crowns in 1921-23-25-27, and the men elected to positions on his team should feel greatly honored. In addition to Larry Gardner (Red Sox) at third, Heilman picked Charley Gehringer (Tigers) for second base, Lou Gehrig (Yankees) first base, Joe Cronin (Red Sox) shortstop, Ty Cobb (Tigers) right field, Tris Speaker (Red Sox) center field, and Babe Ruth (Yankees) at left field. His All time-All Star twirlers included Walter Johnson (Senators), Lefty Grove (Red Sox), and Bob Feller (Indians). Congrats Larry! And just as a side light it might be mentioned here that Larry Gardner was one of the few third basemen against whom Tyrus Cobb, the Georgia Peach, and one of the brainiest batters the game has ever seen, was afraid to bunt.

Varsity Sick List

With Dick Healy's return still a doubtful issue, Coach Gardner has been doing some experimenting around the shortstop position. The guinea pigs thus far include White, West, and Sullivan. If Dick's knee doesn't respond soon, Larry will have to choose a new intermediary. Captain Frank Taylor is still bothered by his injured hand and will probably not be available for the trip to Connecticut next week, and to further complicate the situation latest reports have it that ace chucker, Bob Carlson has contracted a case of measles. Larry's reserve material is certainly coming in handy!

Futurana

Big League baseball received its official start yesterday as the New York Yankees faced the Washington Senators. They began what promises to be a hectic season with the draft board holding the favored seat. Predictions are a treacherous business, but as most of the other sports summaries have stated them this one will have its say. In the American League we'll give the nod to the New York Yankees. Last year, after a miserable start, the Yanks pulled up to within two games of the pennant and this with a crippled pitching staff and a shortstop who barely reached the .200 mark at the platter. The New Yorkers are putting their hopes in a lot of young players and a remodeled infield. But with Keller and Dimag beating that old apple, and Ruffing, Gomez, Donald, Bonham, and Russo serving them up we look to the New York Yankees as the 1941 American League Champions.

Although it is difficult to look past that fine array of pitching talent which the Cinci Reds will sport this year, we shall have to do so in order to pick Durocher's Dodgers to lead the National League. Reason? Maybe we just harbor a sentimental feeling toward Brooklyn and that Brooklyn spirit, for even with the acquisition of Higbe, Owen, Reiser, and Waner and the improved hitting power we must admit that the Dodger infield will be none too strong.

problems? The sign of a progressive institution is an active and enlightened student body always alert to matters which affect them as students and members of society. Once indifference settles on a student body, a school has ceased to be a center of active thought and a dynamic educational force. Improvements and advances come about only if the students are willing to offer constructive suggestions and discuss changes with an intent to keep the administration posted on student needs and opinions. Isn't it about time Vermont students came down out of the ivory tower of indifference and took a look around them. College should be a stimulant not an opiate. Students should be a creative force in the university not an inert mass. What are we waiting for?

Women in Sports

With beautiful spring weather and warm breezes, indoor gym classes have become rather tedious and all will welcome the change to outdoor classes next week. You may pick your spring sport this week at your regular class. Tennis, softball, archery, golf, which is offered at the fee of $2 for eight lessons, and riding $6 for six lessons but transportation expenses not included, give you a long list to choose from to get yourself in trim for your summer sports. A new course "Camp Craft for Counsellors" will be given by Miss Crowe, as a sort of continuation of the Recreational Leadership class, but all girls who need preparation for such work are welcome to come. The class will be given once a week, but counting for two periods, from 4:15-5:30 on Friday. The freshman Elementary Education students will take a prescribed course of game-teaching and folk-dancing for children.

Basketball

At the last meeting of the basketball club Sylvia Runnals '44 was chosen next year's basketball manager, with Helen McLean '43 as her assistant.

Bowling

This week at Bowling Club four girls from each Green and Gold first teams will bowl in competition. The regular bowling classes are also holding a competition among the first and second Green and Gold teams, which will be completed this week. At present, the Greens are ahead, so all Golds out to add up a higher score, and make the victim work for his laurels.

Badminton

Tuesday night a group of eight Middlebury students, the winners of their mixed doubles, and men and women's singles tournament, will come to Southwick to play our Badminton Club. The matches will undoubtedly be very good, and visitors who would like to watch are cordially invited.

Miss Barbara Crowe and Mr. Edward Keenan of Burlington walked away with the mixed doubles match of the State Badminton Tournament. Miss Crowe added greater glory to the Burlington team by winning the women's singles match also.

Dr. Gladstone and Dr. Mackey will give their final examinations in the Red Cross First Aid courses this week in the regular class periods.

Ten Chosen to Conduct Young People's Meetings

Every Saturday morning meetings are held at the Fleming Museum for the young people of Burlington and nearby towns. The museum staff of the University of Vermont has found that they are always conducted in an adult and orderly manner due primarily to the Museum Council, which is made up of ten boys and girls from Burlington and Winooski schools who are responsible for helping the museum officials. They are appointed by the school principals with one representative from each Burlington school and one from the Memorial School in Winooski.

This council is proving to be an enormous success, according to the officials, when it is considered that the young people's meetings draw audiences of several hundreds freed from the restrictions of classrooms and teachers.

Their duties consist of arriving early Saturday mornings and taking positions at strategic points in the museum, speeding the youthful audience on its way to the museum auditorium. Last week, reported Dr. Harry F. Perkins, director of the museum, the young members of the council appeared for duty supplied with bunches of tickets which they issued to their young friends attending the entertainment. With the tickets they also issued orders that recipients should not leave the auditorium again before the close of the program. Skeptical grown-ups were convinced that the ticket plan, which was the museum council's own idea, worked.

The boys and girls of the Fleming Museum Council are: Jean Herberg, representing the Adams School; Harriet Martin from the Converse School; Edna Newton, Ira Allen School; Jean Munroe, Junior High School; Lorraine Davis, Lawrence Barnes School; Theresa Manseau, St. Louis Convent; Eddie Susskorff, Taft School; Harry Behney, Thayer School; Stanley Brown, H. O. Wheeler School; and Betty Ready, Memorial School, Winooski.

Another duty performed by the council is that of announcing museum programs in their respective schools on Fridays. They carry out this task and attend all meetings faithfully, according to the testimony of those superintending the young people's work. Museum officials are ready to call this experiment in self-government for Burlington youth a distinct success.

Drs. Stultz and Newhall Attend Chicago Meeting

Dr. Walter A. Stultz and Dr. Chester A. Newhall, members of the anatomy department in the College of Medicine at the University of Vermont, are both contributing to the program of the Chicago meeting of the American Association of Anatomists, which they attended at the University of Chicago Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, April 9, 10 and 11. Doctor Stultz read a paper entitled "The Development of the Nervous System and Hind Limbs Following Removal of Lumbo-sacral Cord Segments in Amblystoma" (salamander). Doctor Newhall gave a demonstration, "Anatomical Findings in a Case of Congenital Anomaly of the Heart and Great Vessels."

Doctors Stultz and Newhall visited medical institutions of interest while they were in Chicago.

Legislature Ends; U. V. M. Bill Signed

Gov. Wills Plans to Have Auditors Make Report

The 1941 season of the Legislature was all but through with its work Thursday morning after pushing the University of Vermont bill through to a signing by the governor in the speediest action on record.

The University's financing will be taken care of after the governor has conducted an exhaustive investigation of the affairs of the Burlington educational institution.

As the state legislature wound up its session Governor Wills stood before the House and Senate and declared that the University of Vermont's financial problem will be settled even if he is compelled to call a special session of the legislature.

The governor spoke about the University before each branch of the legislature just prior to the closing session of the 1941 General Assembly ended. The time was 1.46 p.m.

The U. V. M. bill calls for a flotation of a bond issue of $675,000 and also gives the Queen City institution an outright grant of $75,000 a year in addition to the grants fixed by previous legislatures.

The entire measure, however, is contingent upon the auditing which has been demanded.

Governor Wills plans to engage a leading auditing firm to give him a report. Then he will take action, probably some time in June.

The bill saves, it is hoped, the institution's faculty. At present, according to reports here, many instructors are looking for jobs elsewhere.

Glee Club Leaves For Durham, N. H.

Will Participate in N. E. Choral Festival

Thursday afternoon the forty-five members of the mixed Glee Club left by bus for Durham, N. H., to attend the New England College Choral Festival being held this week-end at the University of New Hampshire.

This evening the Glee Clubs from the ten colleges participating will present a concert as individual groups. The U. V. M. Glee Club will sing Vaughan Williams' "The Spring Time of the Year" and Tschaikowsky's "Come O Blessed Lord." Following this evening's concert they will take in a formal dance.

All day today and tomorrow they will be practicing under the famed Dr. Hugh Ross, eminent choral conductor, for Saturday evening's concert of the "Mass in B Minor" by Mozart and the Bach "Cantata No. 4 for Easter." Those from Vermont who will sing in the small solo group are Theresa Coderre '43 and Janice Spear '41, sopranos; Marjorie Southworth '43 and Elizabeth Kulka '44, altos; T. K. Malone, Jr., '41 and Paul Poulin '41, tenors; and Wayne Barrows '41 and J. E. Carver, Jr., '44, basses. Members of the chapel orchestra will play in the combined orchestra for the Saturday evening concert.

Ball Hawks Invade Southern New Eng.

Healy and Carlson Will Not Make Trip

A real test is awaiting the Catamount ball tossers in southern New England this Friday and Saturday when they face off against the Wesleyan and Trinity outfits. The Cats have had several workouts since their southern trip and have eliminated all the kinks and lame muscles and feel primed for a double win.

The team left the campus Thursday afternoon at 1.30 and expects to return Saturday evening late. The squad is comprised of the same men who took the trip south with the exception of Dick Healy and Bob Carlson. In their places will be Randy Sullivan, Russ West, Boots Lawrence and Al Caldwell. The absence of three such veterans as Capt. Frankie Taylor, Dick Healy and Bob Carlson presents a serious problem, but Coach Gardner hopes his substitutes will justify his faith in them and come through on this trip. The shortstop position is still wide open with Randy Sullivan and Russ West battling to be in there, but their work has been so close that it will be difficult to determine the starter. The result will undoubtedly be that each will be used equally unless one outshines the other. Boots Lawrence has done some fine ball playing of late and rates some action; he will be kept ready. Al Caldwell, a pitcher, will be taken to fill up the pitching deficiency.

Carlson Out

Bob Carlson, ace of the mound staff, managed to conquer the measles but was thrown for a loss with a stomach disorder and cannot make the trip. Frank Taylor's thumb is out of the cast but he hasn't had a chance to get in shape as yet. He hopes to be ready next Saturday when Williams inaugurates the home season at Centennial Field. Dick Healy's knee is still in pretty bad condition and it is expected that he will be out of practice for at least another week.

The starting line-up will be very much as it has been all spring with Hank Beaudemin at first, Johnny Spasyk covering the keystone, Hazen Wood guarding the hot corner, either Randy Sullivan or Tri-Delt Regional Meet At Worcester, Mass.

This week-end some of the Tri-Delts of Eta Chapter will attend the regional meet of Delta Delta Delta which is to be held in Worcester, Mass., at the Salter Secretarial School, 45 Cedar Street. There will be a business meeting and various collegiate sessions which should prove interesting and of value. At a luncheon Dorothy Roeske, alumnae secretary of Delta Delta Delta, will speak.

Lucille Clark '42 is the delegate that Eta Chapter is sending, and Joene Agard '42 will lead a discussion group on pledge training.

These regional meets have become a regular part of Tri-Delta since they were first established as a tradition of the fraternity in 1917 by a group of Indiana Tri-Delts.

Glee Club to Give "The Apothecary"

Bach's "Coffee Cantata" Will Also Be Presented

On April 30 the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs will present the comic opera, "The Apothecary" by Haydn, at Southwick Memorial. Before the opera, the "Coffee Cantata," a humorous episode written by Bach, will be presented along with a short concert by the University Orchestra.

Haydn's comic opera tells of the complications involved when three men are after the same girl, especially when she has money. Grilletta (Gloria Farrell '43) loves Mengone, an apprentice in an apothecary's shop (Paul Poulin '41), but she is attached as a ward to the apothecary, Semphonio (Robert Goss '44), who is more interested in money than in love. Meanwhile a wealthy, young fop, Vopino (Keith Calkins '44), hears of Grilletta's charm and money, and proceeds by all manner of trickery to win the hand of Grilletta. In order to achieve his purposes, Volpino hires a chorus of men who appear as Turks in a very wild scene. A chorus of women appears in time to celebrate the solution of the plot.

Mrs. Wilnetta Taggart is dramatic coach. The piano accompaniment will be played by Professor Bennett. Mme Bradish is vocal coach for the soloists.

Also to be presented that evening will be Bach's comic work, "The Coffee Cantata." It is a brilliant satire on the use of coffee, the use of which was just coming into Europe at the time of Bach and involves the struggles and passions of a father who becomes too worried about his daughter's overuse of the new beverage. The entire work is for three soloists, Theresa Coderre '43, T. K. Malone, Jr., '41 and Prof. G. L. Millikan.

In keeping with the vocal music of the evening, the University Orchestra, under the baton of Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, with Michael Anselmo as concertmaster, will present concert music of the period from Gluck and Mozart.

Tickets are already on sale at the Book Store.

Church Groups to Resume Meetings

After a surprisingly large turnout of over 125 persons at the Easter Sunrise service, the young people's church groups will resume their regular meetings this Sunday. Members of the Pilgrim Fellowship are planning a Spring party which will be preceded by a short devotional service. Mrs. John Perry will lead the discussion at the Collegium. Both groups will meet at the regular hour, 7:30.

ATTENTION OF JUNIORS—The examination in English 26 will be given in the Gymnasium at four o'clock on Tuesday, May 6.

Betty Cole and Janice Spear Are Co-chairmen

On Saturday evening, April 26, at 8.15 at Southwick, Pan-Hellenic is sponsoring its second Intersorority Sing.

Patterned after the annual Interfraternity Sing, the first attempt proved very successful last year, with Alpha Chi Omega winning first prize and Kappa Alpha Theta and Pi Beta Phi tying for second.

The chairman of the sing, Elizabeth Cole '41, and Janice Spear '41 have announced that the program will consist of two selections by each sorority, and a mass rendition of "Land of Hope and Glory" by Edward Elger. Janice Spear '41 will direct this number. As an added attraction, the Independent women will be represented this year. However, because of the rules of the concert, they will not compete.

The judges are Madame Elizabeth Bradish, Prof. H. G. Bennett of the music department, and Mr. J. Pappoutsakis, also of the music department.

The program is as follows:

1. Kappa Alpha Theta.

   Directed by Mary Jane Hammond '41.

Mr. Dean to Speak

Mr. Theron Dean will speak Sunday night to the Methodist College Group. All people of college age are welcome.

William Kirby to be Guest Artist in War Aid Concert

George Millikan, Well Known Local Singer, Will Be Featured Vocalist

Sunday evening, April 20, at eight o'clock the Greek War Relief Committee will present a concert by William G. Kirby, head of the music department on this campus last year, and George L. Millikan, professor in the political science curriculum, at Southwick Memorial.

Mr. Kirby, well known here, is a gifted pianist, not to mention his ability as a music educator and as a conductor. A graduate of Harvard School of Music, he has also studied at the Royal College of Music in London, and through his work under the eminent British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, was conductor of the B. B. C. Symphony Orchestra on several occasions. He is a very brilliant and inspired musician, possessing the ability to transmit to his audience the great emotion with which he interprets the music. His program shows his fine taste as a musician. The first part is taken from the music of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, including Beethoven's "Waldstein" Sonata No. 53. The latter part of the program places emphasis on the composers of the late nineteenth and early twentieth century composers. The numbers by Debussy and Ravel are both favorites.

George Millikan's voice certainly needs no introduction to the people of Burlington. Too seldom do we hear him in solo work of his own choosing. After a varied experience of musical study at the University of California and Yale University, where he sang in their choir under Harry Jepson, he has come to Vermont. Nearly all of the music he has chosen to sing comes from the favorite classics. The outstanding ones will probably be "None But the Lonely Heart" and the "Sapphic Ode."

The opportunity to hear such a fine concert and to help Greece, an investment in democracy, is rare to Vermonters.

Bluestockings Elect Next Year's Officers

Bluestockings, honorary literary society for girls on campus, last night elected officers for the coming year. President will be Doris Jareckie '42 of Madison, N. J.; vice-president and membership chairman, Myrna French '42, Burlington; secretary-treasurer, Elizabeth Chaffee '42, Enosburg Falls; program chairman, Geraldine Annis '42, Barton. Following the meeting refreshments were served by Doris Jareckie and Myrna French.

Viennese Reporter To Speak April 23

Miss Alice Shalek to Lecture at Southwick

Miss Alice Schalek, a Viennese, who has traveled the world the last forty years through all the continents, will speak on "Changing Vienna" at Southwick on April 23 at 8:00 P.M. This lecture is being presented under the auspices of the Vermont Alumnae Group of Burlington for the benefit of their scholarship fund and the I.R.C. is cooperating in selling tickets and promoting the lecture.

Miss Schalek has been a correspondent of the "Neue Freie Presse" and many other newspapers in the world. She has traveled in Asia, Australia, New Zealand, North and South America, Africa, Europe, and the islands of Sumatra, Java, Samoa, Madeira, Malta, and Ceylon. Many novels and travel books have been published by her, illustrated by her own photos.

War Correspondent

During the World War she was the only Austrian woman war correspondent for more than two years. She has written two war books on the Tyrol and Isonzo front and illustrated them with her own photographs. For her war work, Miss Schalek holds seven decorations, one is the Gold Medal with the crown to wear with the Bravery ribbon of front soldiers.

Alice Schalek speaks and writes in German, English, French, Italian and understands a little Dutch and Spanish. She has delivered 450 laternslide lectures and dozens of radio talks. The pictures used in her lectures are all taken by herself.

This woman has had many thrilling experiences and many honors bestowed on her—in June 1917, Kaiser Karl of Austria, before the assembly of the highest decorated officers of the front and accompanied by the Minister of Foreign Affairs Count Czernin, addressed to the War-Correspondent Alice Schalek the following words: "I thank you for the Propaganda work which you have done for my Isonzo-Army. I have read what you have written and I find it very brave of you that you have stayed here so long."

Entrances Audience

Everyone is invited to take the opportunity of hearing such a talented woman, of whom has been said, "Miss Schalek's lecture on 'Changing Vienna' held her audience entranced for an hour and a half. Her moving and dramatic simplicity, her power to make vivid a whole state of culture in a single comment, the fascination and vigor of her personality made her talk as impressive as it was satisfying."

Baseball Stars Speak on Radio

Coach Larry Gardner, in his interview with Sports Caster Charles Itzkowitz '42, on the UVM Radio Program Tuesday evening, was not wholly encouraging in his outlook for this year's baseball nine. Coach Gardner, who has been coaching at UVM for 13 years, previously played in the big leagues where he was outstanding on the Red Sox, and played third base for Cleveland. "There are quite a few 'bugs' in the team," he said, "but we hope to get rid of them before this weekend."

A much more optimistic view was given by the disabled Capt. Taylor '41, who remarked that the team was in great shape and was probably superior to that of last year. He is expecting to be back on the "turf" next week if his doctor will permit it.

Johnny Spasyk '42, who was recently voted the most valuable player on the southern trip, followed with a brief summary of the trip stressing its educational values and the possibilities for meeting old friends and acquaintances.

The track coach, Archie Post, was then interviewed. He is hoping for some surprises in the Williams-Vermont track meet this Saturday, but said that this first meet was more of a "tryout" for the boys than anything else. His two rules for the making of a good track man are well-worth remembering; they are: (1) live a clean life, and (2) continually work at the job.

A concise survey of campus news by Phil Eisenwinter '43 brought the evening's program to a close.

The Public on the Carpet

The recent difficulties of the University and the tuition problem suggests the question: why shouldn't Vermont have a state university open to all those who desire an education at a fee within the powers of even the poorest to earn? Though many people may not be aware of it, Vermont is not a state supported university except for the College of Agriculture, which gets some aid. Almost every state in the Union has a state university which makes available educational opportunities to every boy and girl who so desire them. Tuition rates are very low—some as little as $75 per year. While it is true that many of these institutions do not rate very highly, one can still point to such schools as the University of Illinois or Minnesota or Michigan as examples of what a good state university means. Certainly, such schools play an important function in the lives of their states by making knowledge available to everyone from farm boy to factory hand.

One other outstanding feature of such institutions is the pride and importance directed towards them by the people of the state. The University is a common interest and everyone is set on seeing it prosper. There is no dissipation of energies, they are directed to a common goal. How different from the situation in this state where we see funds distributed to various institutions haphazard and where half the citizens are not even aware that the University exists.

The idea of a state university is one worth considering and it is surprising how little interest has been evidenced toward it in Vermont. There are drawbacks, of course, to a state controlled college and we are not ignorant of them, but we wonder if those drawbacks are more serious than the present situation.

At any rate, state institution or not, we think Vermonters should take a little more interest in the University and recognize in it the opportunity for providing education to their children. The present rates undoubtedly are beyond the means of many who would welcome a chance at a college education. It is the democratic duty of the citizens of this state to see to it that those rates are brought down to a less prohibitive level. As last time we condemned student indifference, today we condemn the public's indifference. The chance exists to make U. V. M. a really representative and active educational force in the state. The citizens have only themselves to blame if they find an education for their children too costly. What we need is a little less of this rugged individualism and a little more general cooperation.

A Welcome Speaker

The announcement that Professor Dean of the University faculty is to be the Founder's Day speaker this year is a very gratifying one. Why didn't somebody think of him sooner? Professor Dean is well qualified to speak on University history both as a native Vermonter and a student of Vermont history. He has just recently had a book on Vermont history published. His position as president of the League of Vermont Writers indicates very well the reputation he enjoys among leading persons in the state. Last, but not least, his long connection with the University puts the finishing touch on the appropriateness of the choice. Anyone who has ever heard Professor Dean speak does not have to be told he has a ready fund of humor. His speech will be worth looking forward to. forward to.

Students Ask For Right Of Criticism

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In response to your plea in the CYNIC of April 15 for action from the student body concerning the tuition increase, we, the undersigned, hereby submit our honest opinion.

First, the very fact that we have been called upon to criticize after the authorities have made their decree puts a damper on the whole affair. We are inclined to accept rather than reject. Why weren't we consulted before? It seems to be the policy of this as a conservative institution to stifle intelligent criticism rather than to encourage it. The natural feeling that we have after being ordered to do a thing is to do it. The policy of a democracy is to consult the people before carrying out a project. If you want the University of Vermont to be a democratic institution, if you want the students to be interested in University affairs, make them a part of the affairs, not merely the recipient of them; give the students a voice in debatable questions, not merely an ear. We, as college students, are given credit for being able to criticize intelligently, but we are studiously prevented from criticizing affairs that affect our welfare until the damage is already done.

But you ask for constructive criticism. A great many of us are hanging on by the skin of our teeth. If we had to leave college now, it would mean an even larger debt. Why not allow students already enrolled to continue their education under the former tuition and require only incoming students to pay the increase? It seems only fair to let students who are already here continue their education. Entering students would be confronted with an increased tuition without any visible increase in educational advantages, but they, at least, are still in a position to choose between this or another college.

The future of the institution depends upon its ability to retain its present student body and attract prospective students. If forced to discontinue his education now, a student would have much more difficulty in repaying his debts (which, incidentally, would be much greater) than if he completed his college career. After once getting us indebted to itself the college is now taking advantage of our position. To many of us the choice of another school is not open because in leaving this college we would automatically have to refund all scholarships and school aid which we have received. This would amount to much more than the increase in tuition. We would like to see a return to the tuition rate of $300, but if this isn't possible, please don't burden us any more when we haven't even the chance to make a choice.

Independents Have Social Meetings

With increasing tuition costs of the University the need for a low-cost source of social entertainment makes itself evident. To meet this need the Independents have social meetings such as a bowling party which was recently held, the only thing lacking being more people to take part in the extremely enjoyable time.

Non-fraternity members should not overlook the very fine relaxation from studies afforded through and by the various organizations on the campus. There will be an opportunity for all persons to attend the War Relief Concert to be held next Sunday evening.

Much interest is shown by non-fraternity men in Intramural softball. At a meeting to be held next Monday night at 7:30 in the Fleming Museum softball and other items of particular interest will be discussed.

The growth of the men's organization is shown in the increase of twenty-four paid memberships since last year. Independent teams have done very well in all Intramural competition they have entered.

There was a distribution of thirty-eight pins in the men's and women's groups. There are twelve more pins available which may be had for one dollar and the sincerest intention of joining the Vermont Independents. This is the organization of the future; therefore non-fraternity men and women are urged to make this, their organization, the best possible.

English Girl's Letters to America Picture Horrors of War in Daily Life

Compiled by DORIS JARECKIE '42 JACOB KATZ '44

Human history is now written with bombs and blood. Brute force is on the warpath again and it is having temporary success. The final battle will be fought however in the Atlantic. There the two forces will clash. We hope that England will be strong enough to stand the final test and we look today at her civil population because it will be one of the most deciding factors. Therefore, we present to you the following excerpts from an actual series of letters written by an English girl from overseas to a friend here in America. She is twenty-two and works now in the Foreign Office. We feel that these letters should be published because of their great human significance, not only today but for all times.

The series will be continued in this column in future issues.

September 6, 1938.

The first European crisis just had passed not bringing war that time and people thought that a lasting peace was in the offing. Contentedly they started to pursue their careers again and also our English girl looked around for some work.

Dear Mary,

". . . . every Thursday at about 12, and until 3, I go down to the City (which is the name now given to the really old part of London) to a TocH lunch club; once there, I proceed to serve lunches to a grand assortment of business women and girls. It is really most entertaining, though Mummy can't understand why it should be, but I find myself just studying the people, and wondering about the sort of lives they lead. As you probably know, the TocH organization grew out of the war. An Episcopalian clergyman, called 'Tubby' Clayton, had a chapel fixed up in an attic in one of the towns in the war area in France, it was a sort of 'Upper Chamber' where a lot of soldiers would go to take Communion, and sometimes to spend a night in prayer before going into the front line trenches, or 'over the top!' and most of them never came back. After the war, Clayton wanted to form the men who had used the chapel into an organization that would work for peace, and he founded residential hostels and clubs all over London. It seems that these clubs are one of the few places where Duke and factory worker meet on an equal basis—in fact, it is a truly democratic organization. The TocH has now grown into an international affair, and in each of its buildings there burns a lamp of Remembrance. The then Prince of Wales gave and lit the first one. Robert Collis talks about the TocH and Tubby Clayton in the "Silver Fleece" (it was that first aroused my interest, and made me offer to do some voluntary work for it, and I was put on to the lunch-room). The other day I met this Tubby Clayton, a most fascinating person—made more interesting to me because of what he has done and because I had read about him. . . ."

November 28, 1938.

The thought of war, nevertheless, still depressed everybody's mind with horror. This letter written ten months before the war started was to express only what might happen.

"If ye break faith with us who die, we shall not sleep, though poppies blow in Flanders Fields."

". . . . 'For a Soldier Poet'—it is beautiful. No, we haven't kept faith—it makes me feel hot when I think of them—they died for so much. To build a better world, a deeper understanding—and we've bungled it all so horribly. We've just thought out more and more horrors—so that now it isn't even war; there's nothing good or noble left in it. War is soldier fighting against soldier—for something he believes worth-while. Now it's turned into the useless massacre of non-combatants—hospitals and schools are the chief targets for bombers—and starving of women and children the most deadly weapon—it's horrible, ghastly, inhuman. The civilization we've built up, turning round to destroy us—to destroy everything decent and fine in Patriotism and Honour. Oh, the whole world has gone crazy—I hope it returns to its senses before it is too late! I don't know why I should rave like this—but that's how I feel—it is the past crisis which has made me see. I have been too near to war to look upon it as something impersonal and far away, as it has always seemed before. Now I know what it feels like; I shall probably have a horror of it for the rest of my life. If only more people could feel the same way, they might be able to do something lasting in the cause of peace—but we mostly won't bother to think about it, it's too disturbing! It's our modern complacency that is going to ruin us. . . ."

March 2, 1939.

Between war and peace.

". . . . 'Wasted Oil'—it set me wondering—specially the last line: 'And, above all, courageous. The emblem of Peace in a War drunk World.' Is peace courageous? Is it steadfast and beautiful? We are at peace now—we might not have been. . . .'

March 24, 1939.

Germany had marched in the meantime into Czechoslovakia. The nations prepared for a war which now seemed inevitable. The following lines will show you Britain's unpreparedness—we see the tragic results today.

". . . . This is not to start a quarrel over the issue of Czechoslovakia (or what was Czechoslovakia). I have, I do, blame Chamberlain bitterly for much that has happened lately. But—since working here in the Foreign Office I have learnt many things. Most of them I can't speak of—as my work is confidential. But this I heard outside the F. O., and then confirmed inside it. In May 1938, when the Czech question began and the crisis was very grave, Hore-Belisha, our Minister of War, said to Chamberlain: 'You've got to keep us out of war. We're totally unprepared. Give me a year.' And he started to work fast. So in May 1938 we had to mark time. Came September and we were on the verge of war—Hore-Belisha said: 'I must have at least 6 months more'—and we capitulated. We could have gone to war: it would have been the courageous thing to do. But—and here I do understand and sympathize with Chamberlain. When the last war broke out, he was too old to fight. Then it was over and in Birmingham (an industrial town) they built homes for the blind and the crippled and shell-shocked. He's seen those people—I've seen them too,—things I shall never forget. But perhaps that's no excuse. . . ."

Spring Tonics

Spring tonics are now being served at the Coffee Corner, Sandwich Cellar and Converse Kitchen. These are the best and real pep producers—fruit juice cocktails, egg nogs, and malt milk shakes. There are also some new items in frozen desserts that are spring specials of note. They are the frozen candy bars such as Nob Hills and Milky Ways. With the season we return to our varied salad schedule which is interesting, healthful, and appetizing. We will do our best to keep the spirits of all who eat with us at top notch—so here's hoping that everyone is happy, healthy, and lucky all spring.

Reader Praises Work Of Mr. Kirby at U. V. M.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

I quote from the front page article in the CYNIC for April 15; re Mr. W. G. Kirby:

"Many remember the fine work of Mr. Kirby while he was acting head of the music department at U.V.M. last year."

It occurs to me that this is a masterpiece of understatement: first, because all who had the slightest contact with Mr. Kirby are continually reminded of his genius with something more than remembrance; second, because 'fine' is scarcely the adequate word to describe the magnificent work which he did here.

Sincerely,
MARALYN POWERS.

The Campus Compass

By SAUL BOYARSKY '44

"A new point system limiting the number of offices which may be held by any woman has recently gone into effect. The number of points for each position is based on the time and work required to fulfill its duties. Each woman is allowed only one major office and her total number of points may not exceed 25."

On reading this news clipping we felt that such a system limiting activities would work out to penalize a few ambitious talented people without benefiting the majority enough, practically, to justify its adoption.

In effect, it operates to remove the best-best fitted girl to give the second- and third-best a chance. Since the first-best is often none too good, this may be detrimental at times.

Very few girls will be capable of coming up to or past the limit each year. Few offices will be left to be redistributed that the limit and benefits may be considered theoretical for all but a small minority of campus leaders.

However, the adoption of this system is a step in the right direction. There is a bewildering number of outside activities at Vermont if one tries to keep up with most of them. Also a few people take a major part in most of these activities. Perhaps forcing some out will tend to make room for the others, but primarily the problem appears to be indifference on the part of those left out rather than any "hogging" of jobs by a few.

We asked several girls and boys prominent on the campus for their opinion. As usual, some didn't even know about it and after we explained it, we got an entirely different opinion.)

The girls were predominantly in favor of the system, while the boys were in favor of it for the girls but not for the boys.

The essence of several representative opinions follows:

Nancy Goodwin '42—It's a good thing.

Dick Healy '41—It's good in that it allows more people to exercise their leadership ability.

Janet Dike '43—It is a very good idea. It keeps a few from monopolizing everything and gives everyone a chance. It has made me choose my activities with care, which is a good thing.

Barbara Gallagher '42—It doesn't put much on one girl by giving more girls a chance to hold office. Besides, you can do one job better than two or three. Although it limits me personally, I'm all for it.

Ransom Slack '41—It will work excellently with girls. For boys it wouldn't be on the same basis and wouldn't work because there are more extremes among boys, some not doing anything and some doing a lot. A few boys would probably all get all the offices, which would be as it should. Then offices should go to the most ambitious boy.

Frank Taylor '41—It wouldn't be so good with boys as with girls. They're pretty strict with the girls anyway—rule their lives more. We boys are more free and can do more as we please.

Marjorie Abell '43—It's a good idea because it will give more people a chance to be leaders.

Harriet Koble '41—It's another form of the distributive curve.

Louise Mann '41—It's a wise thing and has been needed for a long time. For too long a few people have done all the work. This will relieve the few that have had so much to do and open more opportunities to others so that more girls can get into activities. Twenty-five points is pretty hard to work up to. Besides being a fair limit, it makes it easier for a girl holding a fifteen-point office.

Frosh Nine Opens With B. H. S. May 1

Coach Evans Uncertain About Eligibility

Although Coach Fuzzy Evans has assembled an infield that should rank with any previous Frosh outfit and an equally adequate outfield, there is still remaining an uncertainty as to eligibility. Already lost by this path is Ed Conedera, who would have proved a valuable utility man at shortstop. Joe Margolis, leading candidate for catcher, and D. Eddy, likewise the best "hot corner" aspirant, are doubtful. If eligible these men will be assisted by diminutive Reno Conti at short, Larry Villich at second, and either T. Clairmont or J. Goodrich at first. Clairmont is another question mark to Fuzzy Evans. A good hitter and fielder, he may be ineligible for this season.

Coach Evans thinks that his present infield could be matched with any preceding Kitten combination, but he is keeping his fingers crossed about eligibility.

The outfielders represent a different picture as far as eligibility is concerned. Delorme is stationed in left, Whitworth in center, and Lunna in right. The last two have displayed some hitting in the past few workouts, but it is still too early to go off and comment about such and a such one's prowess at the plate. Needless to say the outer gardens are not haunted by old man "ineligibility." White and Levine are striving to break into the picture and may replace the present three patrolmen.

Desso and Hazen are tagging along in the catcher's position, and either one will have ample opportunity to demonstrate his ability since Joe Margolis, the current backstop, may be unable to compete.

Besides ineligibility the pitching seems to be about Fuzzy Evans biggest worry. "Ninety percent of your baseball depends upon pitching," he stated, "especially up in these parts." Four pitchers have been limbering up and it is on their shoulders that the Kittens may lay their success or failure. These twirlers are Huard, Urie, Craige, and Wood. It is not known as yet which one will start the opening game May 1 with Burlington High.

Uniforms were given out last Monday night to 19 persons, who will undoubtedly comprise the Frosh roster. The squad has been working out lightly with the infielders having mostly infield practice and the outfielders loosening up their throwing arms. On the first rainy day base running strategy and other vital information will be taken up by the Frosh mentor in blackboard drills. Sliding in the cage after practice will commence very soon.

The Kittens have an eight-game schedule, and two days after the Burlington encounter they will travel to Hanover to face the Dartmouth Indians.

Track Meet To Be Held Here Saturday

Strong Williams Team To Meet Untried Cats

Saturday is the day when the 1941 edition of the Vermont track team opens its season by facing a Williams College team which has great potentialities. The U. V. M. aggregation is not only lacking in veterans but also riddled with injuries. The Williams team, on the other hand, seems to be sitting on top of the world.

From the sports editor of the Williams Record comes the following information: The confident Williams outfit coming to Vermont this Saturday is the strongest in many years. Vermont is the first of four teams to be faced during the season. The Massachusetts boys are especially strong in the track events.

Dashmen for Williams are Keeves, Capt. Bill Viltor and Spring. These three men will also be entered in the 220. The Williams Record opines that Vietor is a sure winner in this event. The men in the 440 are Peck, McClelland and Van Cott. Peck and Van Cott are also scheduled to run the 880 along with Chapman. Griggs, the cross-country champion, and Chapman will plod the mile, and Griggs and Moore the two-mile. Bill Vietor, Webb and Roune will do the low hurdles and these men will be joined by Bud Vietor in the high hurdles.

The field events are expected to be Williams' weakest spots. In the broad jump are Sundlun and Heppes, and in the high jump Sundlun and Bowne. Hearne will take care of the javelin and also will perform in the discus with McClelland. Wilson is the Williams pole vaulter, and Hearne and Daly, the football captain, are the hammer throwers. The shotput trio is Hearne, Daly and McClelland.

The Williams team has many sophomore standouts, such as Van Cott, Reeves, McClelland and Peck. The relay team had a brilliant record during the winter track season. To round out this rosy situation the Berkshire lads are losing only three seniors.

Back on the Vermont side of the picture, pessimism reigns. The Green and Gold will sorely miss Capt. Bob Kenney, who will be out for a week with an injured leg. Ed O'Connell, runner-up in the hexathlon, failed to escape the measles epidemic.

Contrary to Williams, the Cats' strength will be in the field events. Becker, Mott and Goss will be the broad jumpers, and the first two plus Grosvenor will high jump. Warden, Gage, Long and Parker will probably put the shot, and Nichols will heave the javelin. Gage, Long, Squire and Parker are possible entries in the discus. Gage and Squire comprise the hammer throwers.

Coach Archie Post is very undecided as to who will run in the various track events. Becker and Mott will sail over the high hurdles, while the latter and Goss will be the timber-toppers in the low ones. Fred Webster, Hoyt and Harrington will be in the one mile, and Charlie Webster, Frank Livak and Ernie St. Mary will probably do the two-mile journey. But, just who will run the 100, 220 and 440 events will have to be decided by Coach Post at almost the last minutes.

This prevailing undecidedness in the Vermont camp is due to the fact that Coach Post has had only one week to see how his boys perform on the cinder paths. Although lacking in veterans, the U. V. M. team has several good prospects from last year's freshman team. There is also the fact that the Vermonters stand a good chance of winning the majority of the field events, so if the men in the track portion of the program can garner a few points then the followers of the Green and Gold may be sure that their team will give Williams a tough battle.

Sports Cast

By ITZ

The University of Vermont's spring sports program really gets under way this week with the varsity baseball team slated for a two-game schedule with the Connecticut schools of Wesleyan and Trinity, and with the varsity track team playing host to one of the most powerful track teams in Williams College history. When we look at the three scalps hanging from the Trinity belt after their recent four-game training schedule and listen to the Wesleyan rooters sing the praises of their improved nine, we must predict a tough time for the Cats, especially since they will be without the services of Capt. Frankie Taylor, Dick Healy and Bob Carlson. However, the Catamounts have been known to spring surprises on their Connecticut tours in past years.

The track meet at Centennial on Saturday promises to be little more than a workout for a strong Williamstown aggregation, and it will show Coach Archie Post just where his strength lies and which events he will have to work to build up. The best races of the afternoon will undoubtedly be in the mile and two-mile events where the Webster brothers, Charlie and Fred, will face the Williams cross-country champion.

McDonough at Northeastern

Joe McDonough, former University of Vermont baseball captain, was recently appointed baseball coach of the Northeastern Huskie yearlings and will assume his duties immediately. Joe learned his baseball from Larry Gardner here at Vermont, and picked up some valuable experience in the Northern League when he played second base for Burlington and St. Albans. Last summer he was chosen for the Pan-American series in Cuba, and once more played under Larry, who coached the American team. Coaching runs in the McDonough family. Joe has two brothers, both coaches, and they all coach a different major sport. Marty is football tutor at Fitchburg High, Bart teaches basketball at Woburn, and now Joe has come through as baseball coach at Northeastern.

Ball Hawks

Russ West at shortstop, Sig Sysko, Bob Doherty and Don Maley in the outfield, and Charlie Smith behind the platter. Clarence Akley, Al Shaw, Roy Alberghini and Al Caldwell will be on the firing line for pitchers. This group presents a good hitting array, better than in past years. If Wood shows his usual batting form all should go well. The infield can "go out and get 'em." The pitching staff is still a question mark, Akley being the only really dependable chucker.

A little research into the respective merits of Wesleyan and Trinity reveals a great deal. Wesleyan is by far the weaker team. Its infield seems to be full of holes, as is evidenced by the fact that it committed twenty-six errors in two ball games. On a southern trip similar to the one taken by Vermont it lost to Randolph Macon 9-2 and made fourteen errors. In losing to Richmond, Wesleyan made twelve errors, which may have accounted for the 17-2 count. Their third straight loss was received at the hands of Gettysburg, 8-2. Wesleyan opens their home schedule on Friday with Vermont. In an attempt to bolster the infield's defenses the coach has shifted men considerably, so that it is expected that three sophomores will start in the inner garden. Capt. Sam Aronson, left fielder, has been ill and will not be available. All of this seems to augur well for Vermont's chances in the Friday game.

The Trinity tussle will be a different affair. One look at their record assures one of that. On a southern tour they turned in three victories in four starts and displayed a lot of class. After losing their opener to Rutgers, 7-2, they did an about face and licked Western Maryland 10-3, Haverford was taken into camp, and they swamped Swarthmore by a score of 17-4. A compilation of the Trinity southern trip showed that they scored 40 runs on 42 hits, handled 155 chances with but 7 miscues, and sported a fielding average of .961. Five regulars batted more than .300. Lanky Bob Madam, second sacker, clipped the pill for .368; Bill Scully was close behind with a mark of .357; Don Viering, catcher, hit .333; Capt. Deed Harris, third baseman, smote the spheroid at a .318 clip; and Ted Knurek, fielder, hit .308. The Trinity tossers open their home stand Thursday when they oppose Middlebury. It will be interesting to compare the efforts of Midd and Vermont against a common foe.

Ten Candidates Answer Call for Frosh Tennis

A total of ten candidates answered the annual call for the Freshman Tennis team.

Among the promising racqueteurs reporting were Clive Denton, former Burlington High stalwart and Thomas Keighly, former Cathedral High player. Vincent Manjoney looked as if he might also be a strong contender for the first four.

Two practice sessions were held last week on the gymnasium court, where coaches Walbridge and Maclay were able to look over the ten "hopefuls."

"Lease-Lend Act Just One More Step Toward War"

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

I would like very much to make clear to certain troubled minds that I am not obeying orders directly from Berlin when I condemn the Lease-Lend Act (using the other name would no doubt confuse some). I did not raise my hand in a Nazi salute and cheer Herr Schicklgruber on to a joyous victory over John Bull—I merely voiced my opinion as an American without taking either nation's side.

Perhaps this bill, which will eventually (à la Wheeler) "plow under every fourth American boy," may be perfectly agreeable to some, but I won't allow it to be forced down my throat without at least some objections. The House and Senate of the United States did not, for your specific information, Mr. Suojanen, pass this bill with the single purpose in mind of embroiling us in this present European conflict—but the passage of this act was most assuredly one more step towards a declaration of war, and every day brings us closer to the brink upon which we have been tottering for weeks now. Seizure of Axis ships, convoys to Egypt and a thousand and one other things each contribute their little added shove.

Not Being Miserly

I am not being miserly and trying to tie strings on Uncle Sam's pocketbook when I object to F. D. R.'s Christmas present of $7,000,000,000 to Chamberlain, I merely believe that these pennies could be put to much better use in the building of our own defenses and the advancement of science and culture for the benefit of Americans. It seems that I can recall once before when U. S. A. lent money to Britain—and Britain's debt of the first World War is still unsettled. Save the world for democracy is an old battle cry which still rings harsh in the ears of millions of Americans who have the intellect to realize that the sequel to that story is that we'll pay the expenses in both money and men. Few and far between are the men who have the guts to stand up in front of thousands of misguided Americans and attempt to nullify the effect of British propaganda and tell them the truth!

I am not asking for the sacrifice of Yugoslavia, Greece, China or any other nation—I am merely asking that we do not sacrifice our nation, our wealth, our men, and our liberty. It is very nice to wish England and her allies the best of luck, but let us consider ourselves first. This is America, 1941, and the only debt we have is to ourselves. Europe and Asia be damned, we have enough domestic problems without becoming crusaders who have been stricken with a few twinges of romantic idealism. The trouble with the ruling faction of today in America is that they just haven't the guts to stand up and say NO! We fret our heads off worrying about the increasing national debt, then give $7,000,000,000 at the drop of a hat to help a war which does not even have to affect us. Hitler, Mussolini or anyone else over there is powerless when the problem of the invasion of America is set before him. Experts have proven that this is a military impossibility!

Since Britain is not fighting in our interests, Mr. Suojanen has concluded that Germany, Italy and Japan must be. Cannot one be pro-American without taking sides in the foreign wars? It is a common fallacy of a great majority of the American people to conclude that one must be either pro-British or pro-Nazi. They do not stop to consider that there is such a trait as being pro-American.

Carrying the Torch

Yes, Mr. Suojanen, we are carrying the torch—but it is burning horribly close to our fingers at present.

I wonder if Britain could have conquered South America whenever she felt like it? Remember, Mr. Suojanen, she couldn't even control thirteen tiny colonies who had only an ill-equipped army and no navy.

If you apply enough logic to history, Mr. Suojanen, you will realize that Germany and Italy were enemies twenty-five years ago merely because Italy waited until she saw which side would win before she stepped in. Soviet and Germany were not on speaking terms five years ago and even today there is a doubtful situation in the same quarters—else why should Hitler hold an army of a million and a half men on the Soviet-German front?

Few do anything but ignore Nazi propaganda—few recognize British propaganda! I did not say that we were too late to help, I merely wondered why we did not pledge our aid four years ago.

Can we put faith in a man who forgets the pledges by virtue of which he was placed in office—when he broke sacred American tradition by the medium of vows which he has not upheld? We can give W. W. credit for at least being slippery enough to dodge the issue fairly well. It is fairly evident, however, where he stands today.

Let us take off our hats to those Americans such as Senator Wheeler and Colonel Lindbergh who are making an earnest effort to keep us out of war and make America an independent nation that can stand on her own two feet instead of being a tool of any foreign power.

Incidentally I wish to apologize to Doctor Nichols for stating that he evaded the question. He did not evade the question and I now realize that his statement was perfectly in accordance with my opinions.

Women in Sports

Catherine Peterson '42 and Phyllis Savage '43, president and vice-president of W. A. A., left Thursday to attend the annual convention of the American Federation of College Women held this year at Smith College. At this convention they will discuss athletic association problems, standards, and policies of the various organizations. Many of the college representatives are members of W. A. A. in their schools.

Up at Southwick, Tuesday, April 22, at 7.30 p.m. a movie and talk on "How to Watch a Baseball Game" will be given by Larry Gardner. Those who have heard Mr. Gardner know what an entertaining speaker he is. That baseball is the major American sport in spring and summer is known generally. Nevertheless, there are a few who still have a comparatively small knowledge of this greatest of American sports, and now here is a marvelous chance to learn a little about the rules and plays of the sport.

Any woman student attending may use this lecture as a make-up for an excused absence by giving her name to Miss Crowe, and this also includes those who, for room choosing, missed class Wednesday.

Women's Debating Team in Action

This evening at eight o'clock at Southwick the women's varsity debating team will debate against the Plymouth State Teachers College of New Hampshire.

Faye Lipman and Janet Clark will represent the University, upholding the affirmative side of the statement: "Resolved, that the countries' of the western hemisphere should form a permanent union."

All girls attending the Smarty Party at Southwick, Sunday evening, will be free to go to the concert afterwards. It's only 35c and a step upstairs to hear Mr. Kirby.

The spring program begins Monday, April 28, and next week is the last week in which to sign up for spring sports.

Tennis and softball are the two new clubs starting this spring. The tennis club will meet on Tuesday at 5.00 and the softball on Wednesday at 5.00. Keep these times in mind and plan to join a club this spring.

Also camp craft for those interested in being camp councillors is beginning. It is to be held Friday afternoon for one hour and a half, and will count for two periods of physical education.

The indoor program will be discontinued as soon as the outdoor one begins.

There is still room in the beginners' class for riding. The lessons consist of six for six dollars plus ten cents for transportation each day. Jack Roberts is the very able instructor.

Bowling.—The first and second teams of Green and Gold will be posted Saturday morning, April 19, and they will play off Wednesday, April 23.

Vocational Advisor to Visit Vermont on May 1

Miss Elizabeth Neal, Registrar of Interboro Institute, 152 West 42nd Street, New York City, is making her annual visits of Eastern colleges and will be at the University of Vermont on May 1.

She will discuss vocational problems with students of the Senior class, particularly phases of employment opportunities in the current commercial situation where nation-wide emphasis is placed upon National Defense. During her brief stay at the college, Miss Neal will be available for consultation and advise on vocational problems—such as career opportunities, specialization in commercial fields, residence situation in New York City, and other phases of business problems which will be of interest to girls contemplating commercial careers.

Tennis Players Get Daily Outdoor Work

Due to the fact that the new Centennial field courts are now available, the Varsity tennis team will be able to get in some real practice before meeting their first opponent.

Coach Carpenter is very pleased because the team is able to get in a workout before journeying to Amherst on Friday, April 25. It may be of interest to know that it is for the first time that the Vermont Tennis team has been able to practice at such an early date before playing their first match.

Mr. Kirby Acclaimed At Piano Concert

Returning to the campus to find a capacity audience waiting to hear him in a piano concert at Southwick Memorial on Sunday evening, Prof. William G. Kirby was welcomed back most enthusiastically. With him in the concert for Greek War Relief was Mr. George L. Millikan, baritone, who was accompanied by Robert McKee '41.

Professor Kirby, who was head of the music department here last year, is especially remembered for his work in the choral work of Brahms' "Requiem." Students and many people in the vicinity were present to hear him play.

To say that he is a musician of the first rank seems rather inadequate, but it is impossible to describe his genius. It is necessary to hear him play and be moved by his wonderful music. Undoubtedly the Brahms numbers were the best understood and interpreted by the artist. The familiar numbers from Debussy, Ravel and Chopin were greatly applauded as was justified. At the audience's demand Mr. Kirby responded with two encores, a waltz by Brahms and a dance by Schubert.

Mr. Milikan's voice is very familiar here. He was heard in several familiar numbers carefully selected to fit with Professor Kirby's program. He was called for encore, singing the "Cradle Song" by Brahms.

John M. Thomas Memorial Trophy

The life of John Thomas is to be felt on the campus for many years as a result of a memorial trophy presented by his family, Mr. and Mrs. Orin Thomas and sons of Rutland.

John was a junior and one of the outstanding students in the College of Agriculture at the time of his death. He was a member of the Aggie Club and also Alpha Zeta, the honorary agricultural fraternity.

The trophy given by his family is to be known as the John M. Thomas Memorial Trophy. It will be awarded annually to the senior boy in the College of Agriculture who most nearly exemplifies the life of John.

The award was made for the first time at the Dean Hills sugar party this year with Kenneth Esty being the recipient.

Debaters Return After Completing Successful Season

Six new members of Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary debating society, will be initiated tonight at the annual banquet to be held this year at Oakledge Manor. The names will not be disclosed until Founder's Day, at which time they will be announced in conjunction with the other honorary societies. H. Durfee '41 is in charge of the banquet.

On Friday, April 18, a University of Vermont team consisting of T. Huntley '41 and H. Durfee '41 lost a 3-0 decision to Hunter College of New York. The Hunter College team of Judith Klein and Theodora Stuart upheld the negative side of the question, "Resolved, that the nations of the western hemisphere should form an alliance for defense against aggression." Judges were Mrs. Harold Arthur, Mr. Wesley Douglass and Mr. Barney Magram, with D. Zwick '43 acting as chairman. The debate was the last one of the season for the men of the varsity team.

At the same time as the Hunter College debate the University of Vermont women debaters were taking the affirmative side in a non-decision debate against three girls from Plymouth State Teachers' College of New Hampshire. They were Janet Clarke '42 and Faye Lipman '43, while their opponents were Rose Masavage '42 of Manchester, Rosalie Rushlow '42 of Concord and Virginia Griffin '42 of Portsmouth, N. H. Kathleen LeBaron '41, as chairman, announced the question, which was, "Resolved, that the nations of the western hemisphere should unite to form a permanent union," while H. P. Swett was present as the coach for the Plymouth College debaters. The U. V. M. girls have one more debate with the University of Buffalo on April 24 which will take place at Southwick.

University Offers New Scholarships

Trustees Grant Ten New Awards of $1,400 Each

Ten new scholarships, carrying an annual full tuition award of $350 and totalling $1,400 each for the four years, have been voted by the trustees of the University of Vermont. The ten scholarships, to be awarded under competitive conditions, are applicable only to men, the recipients to be either within or without the state. Not more than six of the scholarships, however, are to be granted outside of the state.

The plan for the new scholarships was worked out as the result of a study made by Prof. Howard A. Prentice of the physical education department and was presented to the trustees for consideration by Professor Prentice and Prof. Arthur D. Butterfield of the Engineering College.

The scholarships are to be known as the Ira Allen scholarships. They will be awarded, beginning next fall, to students outstanding in scholarship, character and physical health who give promise of initiative and leadership. The awards will be based on interviews and tests according to a systematized plan whose details are now being worked out. The plan will be operated by a University committee of selection.

The scholarships are designed to recognize merit, honor and worth and the students selected under them will be chosen on that basis.

John Dewey Club Meeting

The John Dewey Club is holding a meeting next Thursday, April 24, at 8:00 P.M. at Southwick. Professor Ladd, assistant professor of German, will speak about "Boys' Club, A Civic Challenge."

Not So Soft

Now and again someone is heard passing the remark that those now in college, that members of the younger generation are soft and confused on the matter of current problems. That such a charge should be made today is not strange—whenever a crisis exists a nation looks to the attitude of its youth. Is the accusation justified?

Recent articles on the subject seem to indicate that college students are not so dead to the world as many people may think. One fact is very definite—most students, today, are far more careful in their analysis of ideals and values and are not very prone to accept what is handed to them for intellectual consumption until they can test its validity. Many students are inclined to be suspicious of slogans and fancy phrases. This attitude is not unusual.

Following the first World War, the glory of war was pretty well debunked. The old ideals were questioned and democracy was taken for a ride. The adults, not the youth, were responsible for this. As time went on value after value was rejected. It became the custom to knock down all the old idols. Which was all very well.

But when you knock down, you should also rebuild. When you destroy one set of values, it's about time you set up a new one. But everyone was too busy doing something else. Gradually the great hope in the League of Nations died out. Manchuria, Ethiopia, Munich, Spain—all were steps down the staircase of disillusion. It took a long time to find a democracy worth defending—in Poland. And the world was up to its neck in another war before the confusion of the last was cleared up.

Confused? Even such supposedly mature people as MacLeish were wavering around under the impact of changing events. Now, just lately, scattered attempts have been made to shackle academic freedom. Even such a well-known educator as Nicholas Murray Butler, has gone haywire and started defining freedom. And everyone is shouting that the students aren't showing enough interest in democracy. "Speak for yourself"—how long is it since the public has become so concerned with democracy and the national welfare and the fate of other nations? Since when has fascism become such a menace—not so long ago "the trains were running on time in Italy," and "Spain was full of reds, anyhow." Can you blame the student?

You see the fault doesn't lie entirely with the student. If you want him to be awake to the value of democracy and the need of defending it, you've got to show him what it is and make it work. If you want him to be anti-fascist, you yourself have got to fight fascism right from the start and class it as an evil whether it affects you directly or not.

Today the students aren't quite so gullible. That's a healthy sign. They'll find out what the issues are and then make their decision. If some are still asleep, they must be aroused—but don't be too harsh on them, you sang them to sleep.

Don't fool yourself, the students of this country are thinking about this war. They are asking themselves what their attitude should be. At many universities, they are meeting and exchanging opinions. Such matters as conscription are being thoroughly studied. We have confidence that these students will be a potent force in the present world. We hope they will be able to keep a firm forward gaze in this age of upheavals and unrest. There is something vital in the world to be saved and they are the ones whose duty it will be to do so. It is, after all, always the duty of youth to maintain the progressive ideals of this world. The student then along with all youth must realize that duty and brace his shoulders for the task of building a truly free world.

Brickbats And Bouquets

By Roger B. Hunting

A Brickbat: Rather too late to make any difference but rather as an expression of opinion, against the recently set up point system for women's activities. It is certainly a good idea to give every girl an equal chance to achieve the leading offices which are open to them, but it seems to me that to insure this chance to inferior girls by prohibiting the superior ones from holding office seems to me both short sighted and ill considered. In effect the new system prevents any girl from holding more than one major position, on the two-fold basis that too many positions is too much work for one girl and that chances should be given to more girls to hold office. I think it poor reasoning to say that a girl holding more than one office has too much work to do. Many people work best under pressure, and the more they have to do the better they do it, and certainly the superior type of girl who is respected by her classmates as being capable of filling any of the leading offices, can handle it with ease, and still do justice to her studies. Girls who feel they can't do the work never start on the road to high office anyway.

As for the idea that more girls must be given chances to hold office, it is idiotic to suppose every year that a large number of leading girls will be developed. Many years only a few in a class will be outstanding. Will the offices then be filled with inferior girls? Why penalize a girl who is talented by letting her do only half what she could do? Also what about girls who work so well their first three years that they accumulate enough points to prohibit them holding major offices their senior year? Are they going to be wasted? The whole idea seems to me to be somewhat that of plowing under your crops, as soon as a girl begins to get active and hard working, points begin to count up against her which prevent her doing as much as she might. My opinion cuts little ice among the women, I realize, but that is it.

A Bouquet: For nothing in particular, I just have to have one in every column to justify the name. It's a wonderful world, isn't it?

A Brickbat: This time your columnist is going to jump into the widely publicized tuition raise question, and come out naturally in the opposition. All the reasons for and against the raise have been brought up in the Cynic of last Tuesday, but I would like to stress a couple.

First, $15 isn't much, but $50 is, that's the total raise, $50 times 1,200 is $60,000 more revenue to the University next year than in past years. That's a lot of money for nothing. Has the general cost of education—heat, professors' pay, lights, etc. —gone up so much in one year?

Second: Why should those already in school be required to pay the raise? At other schools where it is found necessary to raise the tuition, the new rate is applied only to the incoming class, and the rest pay at the rate prevailing when they were freshmen. When I entered this venerable institution, tuition and fees were $330, now they are $385. That $140 extra which I will pay over the four years might well have been the margin which made me enroll here in the first place. It smacks of luring one in under false pretenses. "Get 'em in, and when they can't get out, soak the raise to 'em."

All this may have no influence whatsoever, but it is certainly true that it will make a great difference in the attitude of prospective freshmen in years to come, aside from the feeling of resentment which we who are already here naturally have. The University may be in a hole, but we didn't put it there, nor will our contributions get us out, so why give us the beating?

Caps and Gowns Altered By University Store

The University Store offers an alteration service free of charge with the rental of the caps and gowns for Founder's Day. However, it takes time to re-hem and press the gowns, so unless thirty-six hours is allowed the service cannot be given. It, therefore, is up to each senior to get his or her gown rented as early as possible in order to make the most of this opportunity.

To the Editor of the Cynic:

One of the basic tenets of democracy is the right of the individual to express his views in public without fear of being thrown in "durance vile." The Lease-Lend Bill before it was enacted into law and the Lease-Lend Act itself have been the subjects of interminable discussion. A person's views as to the desirability of the act are conditioned by such things as national descent, political and economic prejudice and many other factors.

May I first state that British imperialism, especially as regards India and Eire, has been particularly unpalatable. But let it also be remembered that every British dominion today is fighting on the side of England, although by the Treaty of Westminster (1931) each one of those nations received complete independent sovereignty. They are fighting today by the side of England because they realize that a totalitarian victory would enslave them tomorrow as totalitarian victory has today enslaved the European continent.

As for British propaganda, may I say this, that for over seven hundred years human rights and freedom have been evolving in the British Isles. One of those freedoms, perhaps the most important one, is that which gives people like Mr. McNamara, Colonel Lindbergh and Senator Wheeler the right to criticize the desires of the majority whenever they feel so impelled. Would Hitler today allow Thomas Mann or Albert Einstein to criticize his régime in the Reichstag as President Roosevelt has been criticized by Senator Wheeler in the United States Senate or as Winston Churchill was denounced by the late Lord Stamp (one of the leaders in the appeasement and victim last Thursday of a Blitzkrieg bomb) in the British House of Lords? The answer is no; and in those immortal words of Voltaire, "I disagree wholly with what you say, but I would defend with my life your right to say it" is the essence of something grand and noble which today is being ground under the heel of the oppressor and which must be saved, if the world is to remain a better place in which to live.

I doubt very much whether anyone today can speak only as an American. I believe, as I hope Mr. McNamara will eventually believe, that there exists among free and democratic peoples a bond which is not cut by such metaphysical distinctions as nationality, religion, race or economic status. Pure altrusim is manifestly impossible, therefore let us work united for the good of the whole and endeavor to forget past errors, hates and fears.

As for aiding the British or any other peoples who are fighting the aggressors, I believe sincerely in doing everything possible. One free Limey is worth more to me than ten Nazi autocrats, regardless of Hitler's ravings about the "superior Aryan" because democracy, let me repeat again, is something which instils greatness into the soul of the lowest and trims the highest down to the level of the lowest. Democracy is the stuff of man, the path which leads to the Ultima Thule of a more abundant life for everybody.

The British did not pay their World War debt mainly because the United States enacted the highest tariff walls in the history of America. They had little gold, they could not pay any other way, we refused to accept payment in kind and everybody got sore at everyone else. How, may I ask, Mr. McNamara, will collective security work, if the richest nation in the world refuses to cooperate? It is an historical fact that men like William Borah, Hirma Johnson and Henry Cabot Lodge were the instigators of "isolationism" when they refused to sign the Treaty of Versailles and when they defeated our entry into the League of Nations. Today the world is paying the penalty for their partisanship and narrowness It is an economic fact that today we live in a world where no nation can crawl into an autarchic tent and refuse to cooperate at the conference table. Such actions can lead only to war in which each nation has a stake and where no one can pass.

"To save the world for democracy" is our solemn duty. The whole is equal to the sum of its parts, therefore it follows that we cannot remain free if the rest of the world is slave. The phrase may be cliché, it may be impossible of achievement, nevertheless it is not emotional. It is based on the rule of the "survival of the fittest" and we must never admit that democracy is not the fittest. We must fight to the bitter end to vindicate our belief in democracy. The world cannot endure 99 44/100 percent slave and 5 6/100 percent free, it will be either totally free or totally slave. As for myself, I would rather die fighting for my freedom like Spartacus than wheedle in slavery like Fritz Thyssen.

Neville Chamberlain is no longer Prime Minister of England, Mr. McNamara, he was kicked out (by the English people) almost a year ago on May 10, 1940 and has been dead these last few months. I doubt very much whether President Roosevelt would, even if he could, send him seven billion dollars because Roosevelt thinks like Anthony Eden, Ernest Bevin and Winston Churchill, not like Neville Chamberlain or the non-lamented Cliveden set.

We have no ruling faction in America today, Mr. McNamara. Remember last autumn when an echo named Wendell Willkie was opposing Roosevelt? Well, that echo went to London and came back a sadder and wiser man. If he were president today, I think his policy would be very similar to Roosevelt's today. And remember also, Mr. McNamara, that political platforms are made from ethereal planks and fastened with rubber bands that often snap back. And have you followed the Gallup poll, Mr. McNamara, and do you know what the majority of Americans thinks about Roosevelt's foreign policy? Do you remember what Mr. Willkie thought of Roosevelt's foreign policy?

So Hitler is powerless to invade America! The experts, you see, say it is impossible! Those same experts said that the Maginot Line was absolutely impregnable, if I remember correctly, and yet today the Third Republic we all knew and loved is no more. The Mannerheim Line was fool-proof too, they said; today the Finns are finding out that they were the fools. Do you know, Mr. McNamara, that if Hitler conquers England he will have

Williams Defeats U.V.M. Trackmen

Final Score, 85½ to 49½; Mott, High Scorer for Vt.

Saturday afternoon, before a large, sweltering crowd, the Williams College track team, true to predictions, downed an untried U. V. M. team by the score of 85½ to 49½. As was expected, Vermont gave Williams its toughest battle in the field events, the Massachusetts boys having a net margin of six points over the Cats in this part of the program.

Williams started off with Hearne winning the shot put, his toss being 40 feet, 9½ inches. Vermont's Alex Warden, who has often exceeded this mark, failed to do it again and had to be contented with second place. Frankie Taylor was third. The pole vault was won by Wilson of Williams, his winning leap being 11 feet, 6 inches. He was followed by Vreeland and Pratt of Vermont. In three tries, these two boys just barely missed clearing the bar at its highest point. The high jump found a tie for first between Becker, of Vermont, and Tuttle, of Williams. These boys leaped 5 feet, 9½ inches. There was also a tie for third place between Grosvenor, of Vermont, and Williams' Heppes.

Frankie Taylor became a four-letter man for the second consecutive year, when he won the javelin with a toss of 160 feet, 8 inches. U. V. M.'s Nichols was second and Williams' Detmer was third. The discus was won by Hearne of Williams. He tossed the saucer 124 feet, 11 inches. McClelland of Williams and Warden of Vermont were second and third, respectively. Taylor, Vermont's hope in this event, lost his grip on the discus and his throw was far short of what he usually does.

That man Hearne, of Williams, made doubly sure that he was the outstanding field events man when he won the hammer throw. He hurled the weight 140 feet, 3 inches. He was far ahead of Gage and Squire of U. V. M. The broad jump was won by Heppes of Williams, with a leap of 20 feet, 6 inches. A very tired Bert Mott garnered second honors by jumping 19 feet, 10 inches. Sundlun of Williams was third. This boy, incidentally, made a practice jump of 20 feet, 2 inches after the event had ended.

It was in the track events that Williams really carried off the meet. Bert Mott was the only U. V. M. trackster to win any of the races. Bert began by taking the 120 high hurdles in 16.3 seconds. He beat Bud Vietor of Williams by five yards, and Webb, also of Williams, by seven yards. Williams swept the 100-yard dash with Bill Vietor winning in 9.9 seconds, Reeves second, and Spring third. The winner beat U. V. M.'s Goss, the first Vermonter to cross the finish line, by eight yards.

The mile run was won by Williams' cross-country champion, Chapman, in 4 minutes, 54 seconds. Twenty yards behind him was Fred Webster of Vermont. Hoyt of Vermont was third. Williams made another clean sweep of the 440. Van Cott won in 51.2 seconds, Parish was second, and Spring third. Eaton of Vermont was fourth, ending far behind the winner.

The two-mile journey was a runaway. It was won by Griggs of Williams in 10 minutes, 33 seconds. He kept up a steady pace all the way, and it proved to be too much for Charlie Webster, who finished in 10.47. Ernie St. Mary of U. V. M. ended strongly, and many believe that in another lap he might have given Griggs a tough fight.

Chapman and Peck of Williams tied for first in the 880, their time being 2 minutes, 2 seconds. Third was Reilly of Williams, and fourth, 20 yards behind the leaders, was Norm Stoddard of Vermont. The 220 low hurdles event was won by Bill Vietor in 24.9 seconds. Four yards behind was Bert Mott, and behind him was Webb of Williams.

Cats Trim Wesleyan; Bow To Trinity, 3-0

Akley Pitches Three-hit Ball in Trinity Fray

After pummeling Wesleyan 7 to 4 this past Friday, Vermont fell prey to Trinity the subsequent day by the score of 3 to 0 making it the sixth defeat for the Cats in nine chances. Clarence Akley pitched a three-hitter masterpiece in the Trinity encounter only to have the latter team make the most of their few opportunities to push across three runs.

It was Wesleyan's home opener, and they played the part of a perfect host by commiting seven errors for the benefit of the Vermont aggregation. Al Shaw went the route for the Catamounts allowing eight hits, all of which were well scattered. The home forces, obtaining runs in the first, second, fourth, and sixth innings, maintained an early lead, but relinquished it in the top of the sixth frame when the Cats drove three runs across the plate to sew up the ball game. Shaw struck out seven and issued five free tickets, while his opponent Kaye fanned nine and gave the same number of walks.

Kaye, although allowing only one extra base blow, was hit hard in the pinches, and received bad support from his club to add to his downfall.

Randy Sullivan, the sophomore replacement for injured Dick Healy, came through with two magnificent plays in the last of the ninth to protect pitcher Al Shaw's three-run lead.

Don Maley and Johnny Spasyk were the big guns on the Vermont team. Each garnered three hits with Don coming through with a double which was the sole extra base blow for either side. These two players got half of the team's hits. Sig Sysko produced two singles.

Hazen Wood's perfectly timed bunt down the third base line in the fifth scored Hank Beauchemin with the tying run.

Vermont made four errors, but Shaw was never in serious trouble.

(Following the Wesleyan game, the team journeyed to Hartford.)

Although Vermont outhit Trinity by 7 hits to 3, they could not produce a tally. The Cats muffed their biggest chance to score in the eighth inning when Akley led off with a single, but was forced at second by Sig Sysko. Johnny Spasyk, who is demonstrating plenty of power at the plate, followed with a single, and then both runners advanced when Bob Doherty beat out a bunt. With bases loaded and one out big Hank Beauchemin popped to the second sacker and Charlie Smith was out on a drive to the pitcher's box.

In the ninth Vermont had two men on with only one out, but Steers, the Trinity pitcher, stopped them then and there. Steers walked two and fanned two. Akley was more effective in the strikeout column, getting seven, but he walked five.

Akley opened the game by walking Beidler, and then hit the next batter A single by Harris scored Beidler, and when Bob Doherty made a miscue on the hit, O'Malley, who was hit by the pitched ball scored all the way from first.

Trinity scored again in the sixth with the help of a walk, a stolen base, and a single. Harris gained his second hit off Akley in the seventh but was caught off the bag. That concluded Trinity's offensive for the day, but they managed to hold their lead in the late innings when Vermont vainly attempted to rally.

Johnny Spasyk was once again the sparkplug of the trip, batting a cool .500 for the two games. Don Maley, though failing to hit in the Trinity game, had three hits in seven appearances at the plate.

I

A surprisingly large gathering of Vermont track fans witnessed one of the finest individual performances in Vermont track history Saturday afternoon at Centennial Field when Bertrand "Gallopin' Ghost" Mott annexed wins in the 120-yard high hurdles and 220-yard dash and seconds in the broad jump and 220-yard low hurdles for a grand total of 16 points. Mott's achievement was unusually remarkable considering the fact that this meet was "The Ghost's" first entrance into intercollegiate competition and the team's first meet held after a minimum of outdoor practice. Frank Taylor continued to amaze his awed spectators by winning the javelin and taking third in the shot put. Taylor's contribution is notable since this was his first attempt with the elongated splinter in his college career.

The Vermont lad's track ability must not be held in doubt because of the large margin of their defeat. After watching the Williams middle distance men and sprinters perform it was quite evident that Vermont was in dire need of an outdoor board track for winter conditioning purposes and a winter season to heighten competition. Every team on the 1941 U. V. M. spring track schedule, with the possible exception of Union, has the above-mentioned facilities. These improvements would not only increase the interest in track at Vermont but would probably produce a few outstanding performers from an otherwise mediocre group.

II

Clarence Akley pitched a neat 3-hit game against Trinity down at Hartford last Saturday and deserved a much better fate than a 3-0 defeat. Larry Gardner seems to have a solution for his short-stop problem, in the the event that Dick Healy does not return to the lineup, in the form of Randy Sullivan. Randy fielded brilliantly in both games of the recent Connecticut trip.

Indirect reports from West Point bring interesting news of Gordie Smith, 1940 track captain, who is now a cadet at the academy. It seems Gordie, who cannot run in competition now because of three years previous participation in track at Vermont, has been working out with the West Point sprinters and has been clocked in the neighborhood of 9.5 for the 100 yards.

Intramural News

A summary of the winners of the intramural contests as compiled by Archie Post is as follows:

Golf medal: Ed Keenan, Jr. '42.

Tennis medal: Ed Simpson '41.

Free throw: Henri Beauchemin '41.

Badminton: Single, Sig Wysolmerski '43; doubles, Ed Keenan '42 and Doug Dana '42.

Handball: Singles, Bernie Rynovecer '42; doubles, Bob Warsaw '44 and Stan Fieber '44.

Bowling: Frank M. Taylor '41.

Softball: Kappa Sigma (spring, 1940).

Touch football: Kappa Sigma.

Basketball: Independents.

Winter sports: Delta Psi.

Bowling (fraternity competition): Sigma Nu.

Hockey: Kappa Sigma.

Relay: Phi Delta Theta.

Track: Phi Delta Theta.

Intramural manager: First semester, Clifford Joseph '43; second semester, Paul Sundberg '43.

Hexathlon: Robert C. Lockwood '44.

The softball schedule got under way Friday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock when the Phi Delts belted the S.A.E.'s by a 9-3 count on the stellar hurling of "Fire Ball" Fred Logan who collected nineteen strikeouts. Besides his shining hurling stint Logan smote the sphere on the proverbial button, collecting two for four and driving in Greyhound Shortle on two occasions. That sturdy backshop Bill Daniels "wielded a vicious willow" hitting for the circuit and running around the bases without so much as a wheeze in his bosom. For the S.A.E.'s "Forced Landing" Guilbert, although he was flying on instruments most of the game, came through with a putout (a dog was on the playing field) and contributed some gems of advice and encouragement to his struggling mates. The Phi Delts pushed over the clincher when "Nocker Noggin" Neal pashed Henry Pache with the pillows populated.

Along The Sports Front . . .

By "FELSIE"

Although most baseball experts agree that the Indian front line has a slight edge on the Yankees in the forthcoming battle for the American League flag, opinion is unanimous that the former World's Champions hold a decided advantage in reserve strength. Hence it is that the Yanks ran slightly ahead in the spring polls, for one of the golden rules of baseball is that a pennant contender is no stronger than its second line.

There is not a shadow of a doubt that Marse Joe McCarthy, the pilot of the Bronx Bombers, has come up to the barrier with as fine an aggregation of reserve equipment as any ball club has shown in many years. In fact, the Yankee skipper is so well stocked that with the exception of center field, he can make a replacement at any point and not cause any serious weakening of his main line.

Turning to another sector, there is the case of slugging Hank Greenberg and the Tigers to consider. As Greenberg goes, so goes the chances of the Tigers to repeat as champions of the American League. As far as pennant hopes go, if Hank joins his Uncle Samuel, the Tigers might just as well join the Ringling Circus. The way the Selective Service Act is cutting into baseball ranks, club owners will wish their scouts to send shortstops 40 years old, with 4 teeth, an invalid wife and six children.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, by far and large the scrappiest team in either league, took Bill Terry's ("Is Brooklyn still in the league?") Giants into camp, snapping their 5 game streak, and lengthening their own to 4, and restored the confidence of all of Flatbush in the Durocher men. All those who felt that Brooklyn would be the disappointment of the season as a result of the bad start they made, may now feel reassured, for the Dodgers have hit their pace.

Next Sunday the Giants and the Dodgers will meet again, this time in Ebbets Field, before each club digs in for its home stand against the West. Needless to say, two riot squads will be present, and drinks will be served out of paper cups.

Williams

The 220-yard dash was the most exciting race of the day. Parish of Williams had led most of the way, but fifty yards from the finish, Bert Mott put on a sudden burst of speed, overtook the leader, and finally beat him by a foot, his time being 22.6. Third, and very close behind, was Reeves of Williams.

Although they lost by a wide margin, the Vermonters surprised many by holding Williams to the score that they did. The weather was a bit too warm for a track meet, but the boys of both teams stood up well under it. Saturday's results showed the decided weakness of the Cats in the track events, but lack of practice and the excellent running of the well-conditioned Williams trackmen are the reasons for Vermont's poor showing in this phase of the meet.

five (5) times our shipbuilding capacity? Do you know that if Hitler bombed the Panama Canal and closed it that he could leisurely finish off that part of the United States that counts while our fleet was steaming around Cape Horn? Nobody believes Hitler until it is too late, then you can't do a thing.

Finally, Hitler's father changed his name from Schicklgruber to Hitler twelve years before "little Adolf" was born. May I also say in closing that Norway had her Colonel Quisling and that we have our Colonel Lindbergh. Let's try to dodge the "wave of the future," Mr. McNamara, lest it be composed only of "scum." You see I prefer to bathe in the fountain of freedom, not in the cesspool that is clogged with burned books, broken backs and the blood of men who once thought that freedom was too "expensive" to be worth fighting for.

May I also point out to you, Mr. McNamara, that I have not read anything about any authorization as to the convoying of ships to Egypt. If we convoy, as I believe we will in the future, it will be across the Atlantic. As to your 1,500,000 German soldiers on the Russian frontier, may I ask if your sources of information from Europe are any more accurate than were the late Senator Borah's. Pray tell us how many Germans are in Greece, in Libya, in Pago Pago, I'm sure the Army and Navy Intelligence would be very much interested. The relation between Germany and the Soviet is the number one headache of the diplomatic staffs of the world. Thank you, Mr. McNamara, for elucidating them so convincingly!

Pays Way at Harvard By Swallowing Fire

Cambridge, Mass. (ACP)—Reed B. Dawson of Mount Vernon, N. Y., is paying part of his college expenses by acting as a "fire-eater."

He is a junior at Harvard and his acts have made him a popular attraction at Boston parties. His specialty is setting fire to his hands and letting the flames creep up his arms.

"It really only tickles," he said, "though most people think you are burning to death. I do it all with chemicals."

Swallowing fire, he said, is just like breathing in warm air—if done properly.

Women's Prize Reading Tryouts to be Held

The Women's Prize Reading program will this year again be known as the Julia Spear Prize Reading for Women, as the prizes of fifteen, ten and five dollars have been made available by a namesake of Julia Spear. This has been done in memory of Julia Spear who for many years was interested in this type of training and supplied the prize money.

The contest is open to the women of all four classes in the University, who have not won first prize in previous contests.

It is requested that all those who are interested in entering this contest, meet in Room 1, North College, on Thursday, at 4.00 p.m., on April 24.

Pike's Peak to be Used As Ski Testing Slope

Colorado Springs, Colo. (ACP)—A voluntary ski patrol is being formed at Colorado College and leaders of the campus movement have chosen as a testing ground the snow-covered slopes of 14,100-foot Pike's Peak. Capt. Thomas H. Rawles of the field artillery reserve is in charge.

The ski run, half way up the lofty peak, will be used for practice work and tactical and camping problems will be worked out in the surrounding foothills. "The ski patrol, as far as we know, will be the only one of its kind among military units in colleges and universities in the United States," Captain Rawles said.

Too Much Emphasis Placed On Sports?

EVANSTON, ILLINOIS—(ACP)—The millions of dollars spent by America for sports and physical education have been largely wasted, Leon G. Krantz, professor of physical education at Northwestern University, believes.

"Far from producing a physically fit people, our sports program is in a large way responsible for the physical shortcomings indicated by the large number of draft rejections," says Kranz.

It is Kranz's belief that physical educators have placed too much emphasis on sports and that as a result individuals who are poor in sports become discouraged and even those with considerable skill give up their training after passing out of the competitive age.

The physical education program at Northwestern University is cited by Kranz as a model for a more adequate American body-conditioning plan. A wide variety of sports—golf, swimming, baseball, basketball, and others—are offered to the students, but the emphasis is placed on making these activities bring about good physical condition rather than on developing individual skill.

Kranz challenges the exercise value of two of America's most popular sports, golf and bowling. He says it is a delusion to believe that weekly participation in these sports will provide adequate exercise.

Reggie Childs Engaged To Play At Junior Prom

Featuring a Fifteen-piece Band, Two Male Vocalists, One Girl Singer, Mixed Quartette and Glee Club

The Junior Week Prom Committee announces the "Rolling Styles" of Reggie Childs and his fifteen-piece orchestra, featuring "the Sweet Band of the nation playing the sweetest music in creation." Direct from the East's most distinctive supper club, the Rustic Cabin in New Jersey, Reggie Childs is known from coast to coast for his many broadcasts over the NBC networks.

Childs created dance history at New York's famous Hotel Roosevelt, the exclusive San Diego Country Club, Essex House, Newark, Houston, Elitchs' Gardens, Denver, and the Commodore Perry in Toledo. Reggie Childs is famous for the deftness with which he blends his brasses and his reeds and for the rolling styles derived from the clarinets. Novelties, too, play an important part in the band's policy.

Reggie Childs boasts of two male vocalists, one girl vocalist, a male trio, mixed quartet and an exceptionally fine glee club.

Childs is well known to college students for his famous Saturday broadcasts during which he saluted a different fraternity each week. This band is appearing under the "Management Music Corporation of America."

Student Union Convention to Meet At U. V. M. Next Fall

Delegates of East And West Meet To Discuss Problems

Next October the 1941-1942 Convention of the Woman's Intercollegiate Association for Student Government will be held at the University of Vermont. This means that our University will be entertaining the delegates of many various colleges in the East and Near West, who will all be anxious to talk over and get different viewpoints of the problems in their different schools. About twenty colleges expect to be represented.

An annual convention is held every year in October, and last year's 1940-1941 convention was at Allegheny College in Meadville, Pa. Laura Hawley '41 and Jane Hoffman '43 were the delegates from U. V. M. Margaret Crowley '41 and Dorothy Emerson '41 have also attended the convention.

Since we are the hostess college, we will be President of the Organization for the coming year. This year we have held the office of secretary.

These conventions have proved of great value to those who have attended them. A chance has been given to girls of one college to understand and appreciate the government and problems pertaining to it in another college. From their discussions, conclusions are drawn which will be of use in settling questions disturbing to them. Thus they go back to their colleges with their opinions and ideas changed and broadened, in other words a wider outlook on college life.

Next week the heads of the various committees for the Convention will be announced.

Newman Clubs to Hold Conference

A meeting of the Executive Council of the Newman Club was held Wednesday afternoon at Cathedral High School.

Plans were discussed for the coming Regional Meeting of delegates from New England College Newman Clubs, to be held here Saturday, May 17, with the University Newman Club as host. This will be the first time that the convention has been held in Burlington. It will be held as a part of the regional meeting of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine which is being held here the same week-end.

The Executive Council appointed Dave Sawyer '42 chairman of the Dance Committee; Mary Germain '43 chairman of the Housing Committee; Helen Witham '42 chairman of the Reception Committee; Justine Whalen '44 chairman of the Committee on Publicity.

Monday afternoon at 4.30 at Cathedral High School there will be another meeting held. All those members who are interested are invited to be present.

T. K. A. Holds Initiation

The Tau Kappa Alpha held its annual banquet and initiation ceremonies on Tuesday evening at the Gate House at Oakledge Manor with approximately twenty people present. H. Durfee '41 acted as toastmaster of ceremonies. The men's debating team told some of the amusing episodes of the southern trip. Professors Baumgert and Dean also spoke. A gift was presented to Professor Powers by Tau Kappa Alpha in appreciation for all that he has done for the organization.

Draft Legislation Lecture at Museum

The International Relations Club announces a lecture on "Drafting Legislation" by Attorney J. Hervey Macomber, Jr., of Burlington. Mr. Macomber, who served as draftsman at the recent session of the Vermount State Legislature and is well known in this area as a highly-gifted and entertaining speaker, will deliver his lecture in the Art Gallery of the Fleming Museum, Tuesday, April 29, at 7.30 p.m. The public is cordially invited.

Sororities to Sing Tomorrow Night

Sororities Compete For Pan-Hellenic Award

Tomorrow evening, April 26, at 8.15 at Southwick, the second Intersorority Sing sponsored by Pan-Hellenic is to be held.

Last year Alpha Chi Omega won first prize, and Kappa Alpha Theta and Pi Beta Phi tied for second place, and as a first attempt, the sing proved very successful.

Elizabeth Cole '41 and Janice Spear '41 are in charge of the sing. Each sorority is planning to sing two selections, and at the end they will all sing "Land of Hope and Glory" by Edward Elgar.

This year the Independent women will also sing; but, because of the rules of the contest, they will not compete for the prize.

The judges are Madame Elizabeth Bradish, Prof. H. G. Bennett of the music department and Mr. I. Pappoutsakis, also of the music department.

Elementary Education seniors and sophomore who are going to teach in September are asked to look at an important notice on the W. A. A. board and sign up before Saturday noon.

High School Prize Speaking Contest

On Friday afternoon at 2.00 o'clock at Southwick the preliminary contest of the state high school contest will take place.

The speakers will be divided into three groups: the oratorical group, the humorous group, and the dramatic group. The best speaker from each group will be given a scholarship award of one hundred dollars each; the second best from each group will be given an award of one hundred dollars each.

Friday night at 8.00 o'clock in the auditorium of the Fleming Museum the six winners of the afternoon contest will meet in the final contest. The three speakers that are considered the best by the judges from the University faculty will receive scholarship awards of $150, $100, and $75, respectively.

The public is cordially invited to both of these prize speaking contests.

R. O. T. C. Band Lends Color To Vermont Campus Life

NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles on the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. Band, which will make a tour of Vermont, May 2 and 3, appearing in parades and concerts in Rutland, Springfield, Montpelier and Barre.

Although the R. O. T. C. Band at the University of Vermont is technically a part of the military department, it has from the very first played a large part in activities on campus in addition to its purely military duties.

Most spectacular is the important part the band fills at athletic contests. Whether it be a crisp autumn day for football or a sweltering summer day for baseball, the boys are out in full array to play and march their best to pep up the crowd and the team. At basketball games, too, the band helps bolster the morale of Vermont athletes that they may emerge victorious from their contests.

Previous to a big game it is customary at U. V. M. that a pep rally, followed by a bonfire and a parade, be held. The band figures prominently in the rally, playing marches and school songs to accompany the singing of the student body.

Kake Walk, the outstanding annual event at the University and unique throughout the country, owes its success to the R. O. T. C. Band. The spotlight of the big show may be turned on one group or person after another, but it always returns to the band. The band plays all the musical numbers, provides all incidental music, and accompanies the couples "walkin' fo' de kake." As a token of appreciation a large cake is awarded to the band. This is the biggest event in the band's calendar, for the band makes or breaks Kake Walk. The annual success of Kake Walk attests to the fine performances turned out. What would Kake Walk be without "Cotton Babes," the popular, catchy tune of yesteryear, to which the "walkin' fo' de kake" is done? The R. O. T. C. Band has the only copy of this tune known; at one time it was the smash-hit of its day.

Military inspection is a period of marching troops, martial spirit, and martial airs. The whole Vermont R. O. T. C. battalion puts on a most impressive review of its year's accomplishment. Prizes for merit are awarded. The showing of the troops, which is usually of high order, is due in large part to the band, which furnishes the rhythm and spirit for the colorful moving spectacle.

In addition to its part as a campus organization of the first order, the band provides a means of developing musical talent. Always ready to march in local patriotic parades, the organization is given a leave from school duties to tour the territory around the University to parade and play for Vermonters, Canadians and New Yorkers. Previous to this year the band has broadcasted over WGY Schenectady and CKAC in Montreal while away on trips.

This year the band's itinerary will include concerts in Rutland and Springfield on May 2 followed by parades in Montpelier and Barre and a concert in Montpelier on May 3.

Ariel Announces Final Winners Of Beauty Contest

Four Co-eds Elected; S. Rome, B. Butterfield, J. Woolley and F. Lynch

The Ariel beauty contest which closed last week with the students casting their votes for the four girls whom they considered the most beautiful in the school resulted in the election of Miss Barbara Butterfield, Miss Frances Lynch, Miss Sally Rome and Miss Jeanne Woolley. These four girls were first selected by the nominating committee of the Ariel as being among the first ten beauties in the school, and the final selection was the result of last week's balloting.

Miss Butterfield, a member of Pi Beta Phi, has been a co-ed major candidate, member of the court of the Lilac Day Queen, and was a candidate in the 1940 Ariel beauty contest. She is a member of the junior class.

Miss Lynch, also a Pi Phi, was winner of the 1940 Ariel beauty contest and is a member of the class of 1943.

Miss Rome, a member of Delta Delta Delta, was third in the 1940 Ariel beauty contest, was Kake Walk Queen in 1939, was selected as the Vermont candidate for all-American college beauty contest last year, and was co-ed major this year. She is of the class of 1942.

Miss Woolley, of Pi Beta Phi, was a candidate in the 1940 Ariel contest and was Queen of the 1941 Kake Walk. She also is of the class of 1942.

The four girls selected in this final election will make up the beauty section of the 1942 Ariel.

R. O. T. C. Band to Make Concert Tour

Will Render Two Benefit Concerts

It has been announced by Col. M. E. Spalding, Professor of Military Science and Tactics, that the U. V. M. R. O. T. C. Band will leave May 2 on a two-day concert tour during which time the band will visit the cities of Rutland, Springfield, White River Junction, Barre, and Montpelier.

Two of the concerts, namely those in Springfield and Montpelier, will be conducted as a benefit for the local Bundles for Britain organization, in those two cities. The remaining concert, in White River Junction, will be presented for the enjoyment of the disabled veterans at the Veterans Hospital in that city.

Under the capable direction of Joseph F. Lechnyr, popular Burlington musician of state-wide fame, the band has been practicing conscientiously for weeks in preparation for its journey through the state.

Considering also the fact that no considerable time has elapsed since the band participated in Vermont's famed midwinter carnival, the annual Kake Walk, it may rightly be assumed that the quality of its music will be of the best.

With a personnel of almost fifty men, the band is at as high anumerical strength as it has enjoyed for several years.

Thirty of the bandsmen are native Vermonters, while the remainder of the band come from New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Maine, Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania.

Mr. Lechnyr, the director, who has controlled the destinies of the University of Vermont band for a score of years, is known and respected by hundreds throughout the state.

The band consists of eight cornets, four alto horns, three baritones, two bass horns, six trombones, eleven clarinets, two saxophones, one flute, one bell lyra, one piano accordion and five drums.

The chairmen of the various local committees are:

Rutland, George N. Harman; Springfield, Joseph B. Johnson; White River

EDITORIALS

Action Promised

The Burlington Daily News carried an announcement this week that Governor Wills is considering an educational survey of the University of Vermont. He will consult with Dr. Paul C. Packer, Dean of the College of Education of the University of Iowa, who bears the recommendation of the Carnegie Foundation. The announcement is a welcome one for there has existed for a long time a feeling that requirements for admission and educational facilities have in some instances failed to keep pace with modern trends. Also, as brought out in the recent tuition poll, many students feel that something additional should be offered in their courses to compensate for the raise in tuition.

A survey carried out by competent observers would go a long way toward clearing up the matter. Whatever defects and deficiencies were found could then be brought before the public and plans made for eliminating those impediments in the educational set-up of the University. The purpose of this survey would not be to condemn the faculty or the administration but to point out existent weak spots in the organization. We trust that the survey will not stop short with a mere report but will be the first step toward an active improvement program. If the administration itself cannot stand the expense of necessary changes the Legislature should find some way of doing so.

As we have stated in other editorials, everyone should realize the value of having a state university which can provide a thorough education at reasonable charge for all those youths in the state who would profit by it. Unfortunately Vermonters have never taken an active interest in the University and as a result it has failed to be the guiding educational force and center which it could well be. Now that the school is in such financial difficulties, it is everyone's duty to do all in his power to help restore it to a sound condition.

The promised survey, providing it does not result in unwise political interference, should arouse public interest. We hope that the citizens will then back up the students in the drive for a progressive institution fulfilling the educational needs of the people of the state. Certainly it is only fair to expect that the University receive legislative aid if the administration finds itself unable to carry on alone. A first-class educational system is the fundamental need of any community. If you want educated citizens, then, help get them educated. We realize the state didn't get the University in debt but that does not solve the problem. Therefore, we welcome the news that Governor Wills is making a definite effort to solve it.

Always Welcome

The return of Mr. Kirby, Sunday night, was a great pleasure to all his friends here at the University. His recital was carried off with the usual Kirby artistry. Remembering, also, the splendid performance of Brahms' "Requiem" he was responsible for last year, makes us wish that his visits could be more frequent. He can never fail to find a warm welcome at U. V. M.

Letters From England

Compiled by Doris Jareckie '42 and Jacob Katz '44

This is the second installment of a series of letters from an English girl to a friend of hers in the United States, which we started in last Friday's issue of the Cynic.

September 6, 1939

It had happened. War was declared. Few people realized then what this war was going to look like—Coventry and Plymouth were still inhabited by a happy people.

Dear Mary,

". . . . well, it's happened. We're at war. Deep down in my heart I never thought it would really come—now that it has, I'm almost glad. The strain in which we have lived since the end of August has been awful. And we can at least fight without the slightest shade of doubt that we are in the right—it's a great thing that. And I feel sure that right will certainly win through. Am I living in a Fool's Paradise, do you think, because I do really believe that when this is over we will be able to build a new World Order—something bigger and better and lasting. Surely, there must be some solution to all our problems. . . . War—it's unbelievable! I wonder how much longer this will remain a 'green and pleasant land'?? . . . . This morning, early I had my 'trial by fire.' I was working before breakfast when the air raid syrens went off—I must say I took it very calmly. I collected some of my documents and gas mask and went off to the air raid shelter in the garden. There I met several others, most of whom had been awakened by the syrens and were consequently in various stages of undress—practically all had coats on over pajamas. We were in the shelter for three-fourths of an hour and then left and calmly sat down to breakfast. It's a funny world, isn't it, Mary? Just over a year ago, I was cycling with you to Deer Lake—in another year's time, please God, England will once more be at peace. I wonder where I shall be and what I shall be doing? . . . ."

September 18, 1939.

Even London changed and it is perhaps significant that the museums were closed for the duration of the war and that guns were mounted on their roofs.

". . . . Well, my two days in London passed uneventfully and now I'm back at work. London is transformed by sandbags, etc., but there are four outstanding things about it: Gas masks—everybody walks around with some sort of holder or container over their shoulder. Balloons—the sky over London is full of the much ridiculed barrage balloons; they are silver and glitter in the sunshine. They look lovely. Children—there aren't any! I walked about London the whole of Thursday and all day saw no more than three children. You have probably heard how wonderfully well the evacuation of London was carried out. The organizers of that certainly did a magnificent job of it. The Black-out—it's really amazing. At night there's not a light anywhere, except tiny traffic lights and very dimmed lights on cars. It's really rather uncanny to be in Piccadilly about 11 p. m.—usually the brightest place in London (like Boardway) and to have to feel your way about. Those are the four things about London that strike me today. . . ."

October 16, 1939.

Mr. Lindbergh defends Canada and is not appreciated. How understandable!

". . . . I am still inwardly seething about Lindbergh's recent broadcast and really must vent my wrath about the whole business on someone. . . . And anyway, if Canada does not see fit to demand her freedom—which she has and had—from the Crown of England why should Mr. Lindbergh take it upon himself to do so? The whole business has left a bad taste in my mouth—and of most Englishmen. . . ."

October 20, 1939.

A quick look into the future. Do not forget these words, they are for you.

". . . . and on this side, before the end, there will be wholesale slaughter among the armed forces and a veritable massacre of the civilian population, the grand 'Home Front,' by German and possibly Russian planes, poison gas, and bacterial warfare. Thinking all this over now—with life and death very much in the balance—it's a question of luck, I suppose, whether you come through or not; I find that I am desperately anxious to live and to see the building of a better and happier world order. But if I die, I think it will be worthwhile as I think that an ideal such as Democracy is worth dying for. Please God, I shan't have to die—because I think Democracy is worth living for, also. . . ."

Famed Vermonters Elected to St. George Day Committee

New York, N. Y. (Special)—Two prominent Vermonters were today appointed by the British American Ambulance Corps to serve with Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, Dorothy Thompson, the columnist, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, James Rowland Angell, president of the English-Speaking Union, and others on the St. George Day Committee of the United States. They are Louis Fenner Dow, president of the Bartley Corporation, 152 College Street, Burlington, and Mrs. Elmer Johnson, Bennington. Both have been extremely active in the State in the interests of the ambulance corps, which has already shipped nearly 400 ambulances to Britain and the different allied fronts.

The purpose of the committee is to cooperate with the Dominion of Canada in arranging for the first united North American celebration of St. George Day, April 23.

As part of the celebration the two Vermont members of the committee are receiving from New York headquarters of the British American Ambulance Corps, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York, sheets of St. George poster stamps. There are twenty-five stamps on each sheet which sells for $1, with the entire proceeds going to humanitarian war relief for Britain and her allies.

The design of the stamp was created by Arthur Szyck, world's greatest living illuminator, and depicts a modern "Tommy" St. George besting the Nazi dragon. It was inspired by Prime Minister Winston Churchill's broadcast quotation, "Give us the tools and we'll finish the job."

Kappa Phi Kappa Holds Meeting

Kappa Phi Kappa, honorary education fraternity, held their regular meeting Wednesday evening, April 23, in the education office. The meeting opened with a discussion of plans for an annual banquet to be held May 15. A nominating committee was appointed to suggest officers for the next year.

After the business meeting, Professor Youngert of the education department, spoke on the subject "Of Mice and Men." He showed how Franklin's attempt to found his "Academy" for purposes of giving a practical English education failed, and how, due to the influence of tradition, it was replaced by the classical tradition. Professor Youngert explained some of the factors opposing the founding of the modern school, which emphasizes utility of subject matter, as, for instance, the lack of teachers trained to teach subject matter picked for its usefulness in helping the students in their actual living.

The meeting closed with refreshments and further discussion.

University Players Plan Ticket Campaign

University Players is inaugurating a new plan for the sale of the tickets for the Junior Week play, "You Can't Take It With You," which is to be presented Thursday, May 8, at Southwick. There will be 100 reserved seat tickets at 75 cents which will be put on sale at the Book Store. All of the rest of the seats will be the same price, 55 cents. Tickets for these seats will be distributed to the various organizations on the campus for sale to the student body and a prize of $5 will be awarded to the organization which sells the most.

The play, with such well-known thespians as Jane Lyons, Jeanne Woolley, Louise Mann and Roger Hunting, promises to be an outstanding production.

BOOK NOTES

by Julia Fletcher '44

The Ox-Bow Incident

Walter Van Tilburg Clark

Mr. Clark got off to a good start o "The Ox-Bow Incident," his first novel and gives a stirring picture of the West It is the story of some cattle rustlers nea a small town, and how they are caugh by a posse from the town. You wil be thrilled at the battle of wills betwee two of the town's leading citizens on the question of whether or not the rustlers should be lynched right there and then in the wilds of the mountains. As a novel it rates A Number One, and as a western it is way above average.

Benjamin Blake

Edison Marshall

A lusty historical yarn, written in the flashing style of adventure that typifies Edison Marshall's books. The story is the life of Benjamin Blake, who has a very hard row to hoe at the hands of his uncle, Arthur Blake, who hates him. Ben's indomitable spirit and will to exist help him make good his escape as a sailor, and he returns to England after some time during which he has more than enough of adventure and strife to satisfy him.

Blood, Sweat, and Tears

Winston S. Churchill

Winston Churchill speaks for the democratic way of life for all people of all creeds who are struggling to preserve their freedom against barbaric tyranny. The Prime Minister tells about the progress of the war, the defense of England and Democracy's fight for life which must end in victory, no matter what the cost.

A Book for Convalescent Men—Dahl

This is a collection of cartoons for all those men who are sick, and for those people interested in sick men. Dahl was a cartoonist on current events for the Boston Herald, until an accident befell him. He broke his arm and for quite a while was unable to draw until he learned how to use his left hand. This book is extremely humorous and makes a pleasant change from so much material on the war and other world and local problems.

Not Without Peril

Marguerite Allis

A historical novel charged with adventure, suspense and dauntless courage is this book about the settling of Vermont. The Sartwells are the main characters, and the weaving of their lives, especially that of Mrs. Sartwell, makes an extremely interesting novel. Mrs. Sartwell or Jemima as she is called, knew Ethan Allen, Peter Schuyler and Vaudreuil (the last French governor of Canada). She played a very important rôle in their lives, as well as in the settling of our state.

Softball Game Won by Kappa Sigs

Pitcher's Battle Held Between Corley and Reed

In a tense pitchers battle, between lanky Paul Corley of the Kappa Sigs and beefy Earl Reed, the smokeball artist of the Sigma Nu softballers, played on the back campus Tuesday afternoon, the big booming bats of the Kappa Sigs finally won the day with a baffling barrage of bingles in the first part of the fifth and final inning. Deadlocked at one and one up until this time, "Haydn" Hunt slammed out a lusty single-sacker to start the proverbial sphere in motion. "Blackie" Lynch, the rotund retriever of the victors distinguished himself with several nifty nabs round the final base. The highlight of the contest came when flinger Corley forced "Long Lester" Brown to lift a looper thus ending the game.

The boner of the afternoon came when "Rodney" Costello, who is considered the acme of sartorial elegance and splendor, showed up in the accepted sandbox attire, complete with pail and shovel. He said someone told him that he was to play in the garden!

"Wartorn" Warsaw, the balls and strikes magistrate, was faced with several tricky decisions but pulled through in superlative style and well deserved the salvos of applause which he received from the well-behaved and enthusiastic observers.

ATTENTION OF JUNIORS—The examination in English 26 will be given in the Gymnasium at four o'clock on Tuesday, May 6.

Catamounts Open Local Season Against Williams

Taylor and Healy Return to Action; Carlson on Sidelines

The University of Vermont nine gets the jump on the other baseball teams in this sector and inaugurates the current local season at Centennial Field Saturday with a powerful Williams team as their opponents.

The Catamounts have an existing record of three wins and six losses on the road. They should ameliorate this average in the home pasture, where a great many of the remaining games are to be played.

The drills this week have emphasized hitting, quite the contrary of the preceding week when the squad was preparing for Wesleyan and Trinity. Coach Gardner was satisfied with the calibre of the defensive play, but the offensive end of it needs a shot in the arm. Too many runners were left on base in scoring position in the Trinity game, and, as a result, Clarence Akley lost a well-pitched three hitter. Against Williams the Cats will have to make the most of their hits, because the visitors boast of a strong hurling corps.

Captain Frankie Taylor and Dick Healy returned to action this week. Frank still must favor his left hand, and he cannot grip his bat as of old. Dick Healy's leg is coming along nicely, and he moves around quite rapidly in the shortstop position. It is highly doubtful that either of these boys will start Saturday's encounter, but they may see some action.

Bob Carlson is still hors de combat. He will be on the sidelines once again. Bob has had some very hard luck and has not been able to pitch since his fine stint against Yale. Al Shaw, who has won two of Vermont's three victories, will undoubtedly be Larry Gardner's choice against Williams. Al turned in a victory against Wesleyan last week.

The rest of the line-up will be the same as it has been all season. Charlie Smith will be the backstop; the infield will consist of Hank Beauchemin at first, Johnny Spasyk at second, Randy Sullivan at shortstop, and Hazen Wood at third; and in the outfield will be Don Maley, Sig Sysko, and Bob Doherty. Russ West may see some action either at third base or shortstop; and Dick Healy and Frank Taylor may appear in the line-up.

Williams opened their home season last Tuesday by defeating Colgate 4 to 1. Ed Spaulding, Williams' mound ace, threw a four hitter. Spaulding is the object of the attention of several big league clubs. He is a real prospect. From all outward appearances it is apparent that Williams fields a well-balanced ball team.

The Rev. Chester Fisk of the Hanover, N. H., Congregational Church and associated with the Dartmouth Christian Association will open the program of the Fraternity Embassies on this campus by speaking at Southwick, Tuesday evening, April 29, at 8.00 p.m. Bob James and Larry Durgin will assist with the Embassy program during the ensuing two days. Everyone is welcome.

Sports Cast

By G. LITTLE

Dick Healy and Frankie Taylor, two injured members of the Vermont baseball team, have rejoined the squad. Healy's knee is slowly rounding into shape and Captain Taylor has his thumb out of the cast. Both are taking light workouts daily but there is some doubt as to whether they will be back in the lineup Saturday against Williams. If Taylor is unable to wield a bat this week-end he will probably join the track squad which journeys down to Schenectady to engage Union. This track team should show improvement over its performance against Williams. All injured or sick members have returned to the squad, an addition which may give the Green and Gold the necessary margin to eke out a triumph over the Dutchmen.

Middlebury will be tough to beat on the track this spring if their margin of victory over Union is any indicator. The final total gave the Middlebury men something like a 40-point victory margin. Baseball's first family, the DiMaggios seem to be doing all right for themselves thus far in the current baseball season. Last Monday Joe of the Yanks was mashing the elusive white pellet for a cool .524, Dominic of the Red Sox had a .444 average, while Vince of the Pirates was "way down" to .400. For the first time in college history the Vermont tennis team has worked outdoors previous to the opening matches. Those new courts over at Centennial Field aided Coach Carpenter greatly in early practice drills. The new courts dry out more quickly than the back campus surfaces because of their all-day exposure to the sun. Expansion of winter sports area on west side of Mt. Mansfield promises to bring better skiing conditions to those in the Burlington area who venture out on slender staves. The Underhill Winter Sports Club plans to move some of its main activities further on the mountain where there is a longer skiing season and increased facilities for all classes of skiers.

Freshman Track Team Prepares for Meet

The freshman track team has been working out regularly in preparation for its first meet on May 1 with Burlington High School.

Time trials for the various events will be held this Thursday, when participants in various fields will be chosen.

There are twenty-five men now working out in all fields. Their definite abilities will be determined by the results produced at the trials on Thursday.

Tennis Squad to Open Season Today

The varsity tennis squad left Thursday on their initial trip of the season. On Friday, April 25, Coach Carpenter's forces will engage Amherst, the University of Connecticut and Massachusetts State on successive days.

The Vermont raqueteers have had practice two weeks on the new Centennial courts. This is the first time the team has been able to get a real workout at such an early date.

The competitive strength of the opposition is not exactly known, but Amherst can usually be counted upon to produce a good point-getting team.

Upon return from the Massachusetts trip the varsity tennis team on May 2 goes to Potsdam, N. Y., to meet Clarkson, and on May 3 plays St. Lawrence at Canton, N. Y.

Rugby Team Wins Over Harvard J. V.'s

Rugby, the game of old England, was introduced to Vermont Saturday afternoon on Centennial Field when the University of Vermont team defeated the Harvard junior varsity outfit, 6 to 0.

Somewhat hazy ideas of what the game was about were somewhat dispelled, but there is still much not clear concerning it. A big crowd watched during the 60 minutes of play, and after getting some ideas or what it was all about appeared to be enjoying it.

It is a fast game, employing the ideas of both football and soccer. There is plenty of body contact in the scrums, besides a lot of tackling, more so than in football, for the ball remains in play following a tackle, unless it becomes buried under a pileup.

Mayforth Tallies Both Scores

Hal Mayforth, Jr., one of the freshman footballers last fall, provided both of Vermont's scores. He ran the ball about 12 yards for the first "touch," three minutes after the game opened. A "touch" counts three points.

Misty Rice, captain-elect of the football team, started the scoring play with a 20-yard run from about midfield. As he was being tackled he lateraled to Mike Cozzolino who took it up to about the 12-yard line, where he lateraled to Mayforth, who went the rest of the way.

The second touch came two minutes later on a surprising run of 70 yards by Mayforth. He ducked down the sidelines, sidestepping two Harvard tacklers, then bowling over two more in front of him went the rest of the way untouched, outfooting the remaining Harvard backs.

Misses Tries for Extras

Vermont missed both tries for extra points, and for the remaining 55 minutes of play had only one more scoring chance, going within five yards of the Harvard goal before being stopped and the ball booted out to mid-field.

The Crimson had but two chances to score, one a penalty kick from the 20-yard line. This grazed the outside of the posts, although most of the crowd believed it had gone through. The other chance came halfway through the second period when the ball was deep in Vermont territory for several minutes before Rice got in the clear and booted the team out of danger.

Summary

Score by halves:

	1st	2nd	T
Vermont	6	0	—6

Scoring: Touches, Mayforth 2 (running).

Time of halves: 30 minutes.

Referee: Bill Halton, New York, Rugby Club.

Music Department To Present Opera

Haydn's Apothecary Bach's Coffee Cantata

Returning to the romance and glamour of the styles of the eighteenth century, the music department will present its annual opera at Southwick next Wednesday evening. The usual procedure has been changed for this year in that in addition to the one-act comic opera by Haydn, "The Apothecary," Bach's humorous work, "The Coffee Cantata" will be given along with a short concert by the University Orchestra.

From the ranks of the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs have come a chorus of apprentices, Turks and glamorous peasant girls to assist the main cast, Gloria Farrell '43, Paul Poulin '41, Robert Goss '44 and Keith Calkins '44 in the solution of an uproarious love plot. With three men after the same woman, and with her charm and money, there is intrigue aplenty. A typical comic opera, it is Haydn in one of his more charming moments.

The work of Bach is often thought to include nearly all serious work but this is a misconception as is clearly shown by "The Coffee Cantata." A work written for three solo voices, it will be sung by Theresa Coderre '43, Thomas K. Malone '41 and Prof. George L. Millikan. When a father becomes very worried about his daughter's over-indulgence in a "new" drink called "coffee," an interesting plot is bound to result.

In keeping with the rest of the program, the University Orchestra under the baton of Ippocrates Pappoutsakis will present selections from the work of Gluck and Mozart.

Tickets for this event are on sale at the University Book Store.

Lessons Given To Freshman Women

Nearly all of the 214 freshman girls enrolled in the physical education course will know how to give artificial respiration, where there is need of it, before they leave for home this June.

Miss Barbara Crowe of the physical education department has already given a series of three lessons in this life-saving skill. The girls are now prepared to aid drowning and gas asphyxiation victims if they should ever be called on to do so.

The instruction has been thorough, including the method of changing workers if the respiration has to be continued for a long time. There are records of cases of drowning and asphyxiation returning to consciousness after four hours or even more of artificial respiration.

The schedule followed with this instruction has one class section a week to the artificial respiration teaching, and the second has been given over to the teaching of other important practices and methods of first aid.

Exhibition of Women's Fashions at Museum

An exhibit concerning the Well-dressed Lady of Yesterday and Today is now on display at the Fleming Museum. Daytime and sportswear fashions of sixty years ago and today are illustrated. It is interesting to note the great difference in the style, design, texture, and color of these costumes. Modern times and fashion have done away with the long hoopskirt, bustle, lace, ruffles, and other frills. Compare these illustrations to our comfortable tailored shirtwaist frocks. The sportswear was most interesting; from the former full-length clumsy dress to comfortable slacks, shorts and culottes.

The purpose of these conferences is to help strengthen each separate college association by conducting discussion groups in which individual problems, new ideas and organization are discussed.

Tri-Delt Delegates Meet in Worcester

Regional Conference For N. E. Colleges

Last week-end the regional meet of Delta Delta Delta was held at the Salter Secretarial School in Worcester, Mass.

At the luncheon Mrs. Dorothy Roeske, alumnae secretary, was guest speaker. At the afternoon session, problems of rushing, pledge training, and social functions were discussed. Vermont's Joené Agard '42 led the discussion of pledge training.

Dinner was followed by singing and a question box contest.

Lucille Clark '42 was the delegate representing Eta Chapter. Other local members attending the meet were: Joené Agard '42, Esther Gove '43, Mary Louise Hart '43, Harriet Whitson '43, Lucy Upson '43, June Naylor '43 and Margaret Flint '43.

Church Groups to Attend Conference

Members of the various student church groups in the city are planning to attend the "Student Christian Movement of New England" Conference to be held in Worcester, Mass., April 25, 26, 27. The purpose of this conference is to help the student understand the place of the church in our modern world and to suggest ways for student participation in the life of various churches.

The Collegium will hold its regular meeting at 7.30, Sunday evening, with a talk on "Nutrition" by Mrs. J. H. Perry. The Pilgrim Fellowship will join the First Church in listening to Dr. Hugh Vernon White, Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and will separate after his talk to enjoy a social hour by themselves.

Coach Larry Gardner Gave Baseball Talk

Last Tuesday evening, April 22, the W. A. A. sponsored a free movie on baseball and a "talk" by the U. V. M. coach, Larry Gardner. A large crowd of University of Vermont students attended. The movie, an American League picture, was entitled "Touching All Bases." Coach Gardner spoke on the fundamentals of baseball. Following his speech questions were asked from the audience and answered by him.

Dean Kemp To Be On Radio Program

With due respect to Founder's Day, this week's U. V. M. radio program on Tuesday at 8.30 will feature an interview between Dr. Hardy A. Kemp, dean of the Medical College and Meyer J. Levin '41, Cynic Radio Editor.

The topic of their interview will be "One Hundred and Fifty Years of Medical Training in Vermont."

It is hoped that the Ethan Allen Quartet will be available to add a musical touch to the program.

Alice Shalek Speaks At I. R. C. Meeting

At a meeting held under the joint sponsorship of the International Relations Club and the University Alumnae at Southwick on Wednesday evening, Miss Alice Shalek, well-known journalist and photographer for Austrian and German newspapers under the regime of Hitler, told that "It is Hitler's genius to build on others' blunders." Miss Shalek told of living for a year and a half under the Nazi rule in Vienna. At the end of her talk, Miss Shalek, who has been a world traveller for thirty-five years, urged her audience "appreciate what you have. You don't know what Europe has to go through."

Student Union to Meet at U. V. M.

Vermont Host To 20 Colleges Next October

Next year on October 30, 31 and November 1, the University of Vermont will entertain the delegates of many Eastern and Western Colleges when the Women's Intercollegiate Association for Student Government meets here for its annual convention. Already extensive plans are under way for this group of delegates, who will represent the Student Governments of about 20 colleges. The chairmen of the various committees have been selected and are now working on convention plans. Chairmen of these committees are as follows: General chairman, June Hoffman '43; registration committee, Louise Davis '42; information committee, Patricia Pike '43; hospitality, Barbara Butterfield '42 and Sally Rome '42, co-chairmen; transportation, Miriam Fiske '42; entertainment, Joené Agard '42; housing, Gloria Oling '42; decorations, Gratia Pearl '42; education program committee, Mary Tuckerman '42; cooperating committee of faculty and students, Cathryn Grier '42; publicity, Myrna French '42; committee on communications, Helen Witham '42.

The chairmen of these committees will appoint various students to assist them in carrying out their duties, and it is hoped that as many students as possible may be able to aid in planning and executing the details of this large convention.

Alumni Activities Topic of Cynic Radio Program

Tuesday night's U. V. M. radio program was very appropriate in that it had two of the well-known alumni speak about their group. Howard Prentice '28, head of the physical education department, described the relationship between the students of U. V. M. and their alumni. "If I were a student I would be more interested in knowing about the alumni," he said. "The alumni are not only those who have graduated, but also any person who has ever attended the University. Therefore, a student should take more interest in the work of the Alumni Council."

He then proceeded to tell of the fine work that this council is doing, mentioning the local and district alumni clubs which are flourishing throughout the country. "The activities of the alumni office have never received the attention of the alumni and present students that it deserves," he continued. "They publish The Vermont Alumnus, sponsor homecomings and commencement, keep accurate, up-to-date accounts of the alumni changes in address, and a thousand and one other things. It is the place that ties you to the University after you

R. O. T. C. Prepares For Inspection

Lieut. Col. Collier To Be Inspecting Officer

The annual Federal Inspection of the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. Battalion is scheduled for May 21-22, at which time the entire accomplishment of the military department for the school year will be exhibited.

Lieut.-Col. William A. Collier of the General Staff Corps will attend Military Science classses to question the students, and will review the parade and give the battalion a rating. While Colonel Spalding has been commandant, and for a number of years previous, the Vermont battalion has received a rating of excellent, the highest given.

Most of Wednesday morning will be spent drilling and marching for Inspection. Wednesday evening the finals in exhibition drilling will be held in the cage. Numerous prizes and honors will be awarded to outstanding students in military science.

Fraternity drill squads, a regular part of Military Inspection, were discontinued last year from the list of events included in the Traynor trophy competition by vote of Key and Serpent. As plans for this competition had already been made by several fraternities when this announcement was made last year, it was decided to put on the exhibition drills just as in previous years even though no points towards the Traynor trophy would be awarded the winning squad. Accordingly, most of the fraternities entered a squad in the competition with a very creditable performance. However, it is not expected that the fraternities will compete this year.

Freshman drill squad, a voluntary group, has been so largely attended this year, according to Sergeant Pickett, that there is likely to be some elimination. Regularly about 30 men last until Inspection. This year over 60 have come out. Last year members of the freshman drill squad received a citation cord, and runners-up, a silver stripe.

Glee Clubs to Present Haydn's "Apothecary"

Bach's Comic "Coffee Cantata" And A Concert By University Orchestra Also On Program

In their final presentation of the year, the Men's and Women's Glee Club will give their fourteenth annual opera at Southwick, Wednesday evening, April 30, at 8.15 p.m., D. S. T. The feature number of the triple bill will be Haydn's "Apothecary," a comic opera of the 18th century. This will be preceded by a brief concert by the University Orchestra, and the presentation of Bach's comic "Coffee Cantata."

The opera has its setting in an apothecary's shop with its old-fashioned counters and rows of bottles which should be of interest to all medics and pre-medics. Sempronio, Robert Goss '44, baritone, is a well-to-do apothecary, who has his ever-watchful eye on his charming and wealthy young ward Grilletta, Gloria Farrell '43, soprano. Mengone, Paul Poulin '41, tenor, who knows nothing about the pharmacy has secured a position as apprentice in Sempronio's shop in order to be near his love, Grilletta. A rich young fop hears of the wealth and charm of Grilletta and sets out by all manners and means of trickery to win her hand; he even goes so far as to hire a group of men who appear as Turks and tries to persuade Sempronio to allow him to marry Grilletta. The plot solves itself very happily just as the chorus arrives to celebrate it. Mrs. Wilnetta Sproul Taggart is the dramatic coach of the production; Prof. H. G. Bennett will be accompanist; and Mrs. Elizabeth Bradish is vocal coach.

Text After Goldoni

The text of the opera is after Goldoni. Former settings of Goldoni's text were made by Fischietti and Pallavicini. These earlier versions had additional characters, some of them serious, and some with ballets. Haydn omitted the serious characters and cut the length to one act. His opera was first performed in 1768. Performances have been given in New York and Chicago with English words, but no published version of English words is available. The translation on which our performance is based is one made by Professor Morgan, formerly head of the German department at the University of Wisconsin. Alterations have been made where necessary. The Eastman School of Music did the opera in Berman in 1931-32.

Many operas of a variety of well-known composers have been given in the past at the University of Vermont. Among them have been "Cosi Fan Tutte" by Mozart; "Dido and Aeneas" by Purcell; "Gluck's Orpheus" the "Mock Doctor" by Gounod;

Sororities Hold Successful Sing

Pan-Hellenic Trophy Awarded To Thetas

The second annual Intersorority Sing, sponsored by Pan-Hellenic was held at Southwick, Saturday evening. Kappa Alpha Theta, directed by Mary Jane Hammond '41, won the Pan-Hellenic trophy. Alpha Chi Omega, directed by Elizabeth Cole '41, received honorable mention.

The winning sorority's selections were: "The Snow Legend," and "Theta Lips." Alpha Chi Omega's selections were: "Ole Uncle Moon," and "The Song of the Lyre." Other selections on the program were: "A Million Dreams Ago," and "A Pi Phi Melody" by Pi Beta Phi; "In the Evening Garden" and "In the Land of Green Mountains" by Sigma Gamma; "Whils Me Lanty Boy" and "I'm Singing Low" by Alpha Xi Delta; "Slumber Boat" and "Delta Indigo" by Delta Delta Delta; and "Perspicacity" and "My Delta Phi Epsilon" by Delta Phi Epsilon.

Elizabeth Cole '41 and Janice Spear '41 were in charge of the sing. The judges were Mme Elizabeth Bradish, Prof. H. G. Bennett and Mr. I. Pappoutsakis of the music department.

Following the sing a dance was held in the Southwick ballroom.

Four Sororities Hold Formals

On Friday night, April 25, four sororities held their annual spring formals.

Japanese lanterns and cherry blossoms provided the atmosphere for the Alpha Xi dance at the Burlington Country Club. Preceding the dance a dinner was given at the Paragon. Dancing was to the music of the Catamounts. Chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Bickford, and Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith. Natalie Spear '43 was in charge.

The Delta Delta Delta decorations were in the spring motif. For favors the girls gave saddle leather wallets with the Tri Delt seal on them. The Norwich Grenadiers furnished the music for dancing which was at the Hotel Vermont roof garden. The chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Pond, and Mrs. Swerdfeger. Lucille Clark '42 was chairman.

Doris Welsh '43 who was in charge of decorations for the Kappa Alpha Theta's dance at the Ethan Allen Club, planned a very attractive street scene. Jack Collins' band supplied the music. The favors were key chains. Chaperones for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Marvin. Barbara Mann '41 was in charge of the affair.

The Perennial Problem

Every time a new exam schedule is posted, the old problem of crowded days at the beginning of the exam period crops up. It is still a little early to be worrying about finals, but an early airing of the perennial probem might bring some useful changes. Finals this year are scheduled to begin on a Wednesday, which means that classes will be held right up to the day before. For those people who have no examinations scheduled for the first few days, this is all very well. But what about those people who have two or even four exams on the first two days? Quite a few people are faced with such a schedule. The people who haye four exams scheduled for the first two days certainly will have to get along on a minimum of reviewing.

Of course, the old answer to this is that students should keep up on their work so that they can go to their exams without having to do very much reviewing. There is justice in this. But even suppose that a student is caught up to date. He can't be expected to review a whole semester in a few hours. If he has two exams coming on the opening day, he must divide the one full night that he has to review into two parts, and review two subjects. Then, the next day he must try to marshal his facts for two comprehensive and thorough examinations. You might say that said student should have planned ahead and done some of his reviewing during the week preceding the examinations. But anyone who is trying to keep up every day would have little chance to do any extensive reviewing during the school week. Besides, we wonder whether reviewing done in little dabs over a period of weeks has as much value as a good thorough review just before an examination?

Furthermore, there is little justice in the present set-up when one considers that many students have three or four days to prepare for their exams. It has been said that the more time you have, the poorer you will do. But that is small comfort to those who have hardly any time at all.

Naturally, those who arrange schedules cannot be expected to draw them up in such a way that each student will have the same amount of time before each exam. That is impossible. The only solution would seem to be in the institution of a reading period. The Monday and Tuesday preceding the exam period could be set aside so that students might have a chance to review. Or if not two days, at least one day should be set aside. This would relieve the burden on those who have a crowded early schedule. We know that it is possible that the reading period might be used by many as a holiday, but there is always a minority group which delights in cutting its own throat. If they won't study, there will be plenty who will benefit, and thus justify having a reading period. Maybe we are overemphasizing the urgency, but so far the problem has cropped up every time exams roll around. Why not solve it this time?

R. O. T. C. Band Vert Versatile

NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles on the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. Band, which will make a tour of Vermont May 2 and May 3, appearing in parades and concerts in Rutland, Springfield, Montpelier and Barre.

Versatility is the keynote to the success of the R. O. T. C. Band. Under the very able direction of Joe Lechnyr the natural musical talent of the band has been developed to a peak never before attained at U. V. M.

Starting with a well-balanced instrumentation with individuals of high solo ability, the organization has been able to play a great variety of music well. The basic natural ability has been tempered to a high musical artistry which has proved pleasing to many audiences.

Primarily, a military group, of course, is adept at martial tunes. Many a brilliant snappy march has thrilled the crowds at ball games, concerts and parades. On the field too, the boys in their dark blue R. O. T. C. uniforms in step with a march like Sousa's "Semper Fidelis" or Bagley's "National Emblem" are a thrilling sight.

Often called upon to give musical concerts, the R. O. T. C. Band can perform as a symphonic band. Under the leadership of Joe Lechnyr, well known both in Vermont and in army musical circles, classical selections like Ravel's seductive "Bolero" to Offenbach's "Orpheus Overture" are played in a manner to rival professional bands.

In lighter moments the boys can "swing out" on novelties and popular music such as: "The Ferryboat Serenade" and "Six Lessons from Madame La Zonga." Gershwin's "Strike Up the Band" is another favorite.

To round out a musical selection for all tastes, the band plays light concert pieces like "Alda" by McCoughey and "Queen of the Night" from "Babylon Suite" by Justin Elie.

The personnel of forty-six men in the R. O. T. C. Band is admirably suited for the many rôles which it plays, whether it be symphonic, marching, military or concert.

Many of the well-known and well-liked American marches are in the repertoire of the band, such as: Sousa's "El Capitan," Losey's "Trumpeters Carnival," Sordillo's "Spirit of the Blue Flame" and "Spirit of America," Frank's famous "Bugle Marches," and other famous concert pieces, which have entertained audiences for many years.

Glee Clubs Present

"The Merry Wives of Windsor" by Nicolai; and a number of very well-known operas of Gilbert and Sullivan, including, "Patience," "The Pirates of Penzance," "Iolanthe," "The Gondoliers," "Ruddigore," and "The Sorcerer."

Opera Chorus

In the opera chorus are sopranos: Ruth Cooley '42, Betty Hall '44 Earlene Jenness '43, Betty Lake '44, Dorothy Rockwell '42, and Virginia Wight '44; second sopranos, F. Aline Gravel '44, Nora Hill '42, and Carolyn Phelps 44; altos, Elisabeth Kulka '43, Marjorie Southworth '43, Doris Squire '43; tenors (apprentices), Hiram Bevins '41, Robert McKee '41, Louis Pichierri '41, Robert Norton '44, Robert Steinman '42 and Ernest Stockwell '44; bases (Turks), Charles Caryer '44, James Dykens '43, Reginald Farrar '42, John Goss '43, William Lane '44, Frank Swift '43, and Orrin Brawn '42.

Picander wrote the text for the Coffee Cantata. It is a satire on Leipzig ladies, among whom coffee drinking was a fashionable vice. It discusses the passions of a father who is entirely disgusted at his daughter's overindulgence in coffee and his threats if she does not stop the use of it. She finds a lover which further complicates matters when her father refuses his permission for a marriage unless she gives up her beloved coffee. Naturally there is a happy settlement. Singing the parts will be Theresa Coderre '43, soprano; Thomas K. Malone, Jr. '41, tenor; and George L. Millikan, baritone.

The concert by the University Orchestra under Ippocrates Pappoutsakis will be very much in keeping with the rest of the presentation in that it is eighteenth century music much of which is taken from operas of Gluck arranged by Mottl. They will play Serenade "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Mozart; "Allegro," "Romance," "Minuet," "Rondo," and "Ballet Suite," by Gluck arr. by Mottl; "Dance of the Blessed Spirits" (Orpheus); "Musette" (Armide); "Air Gay" (Iphigenia in Aulis).

The personnel of the orchestra is as follows: Violins, Mr. Anselmo, concertmaster, Hiram Bevins '41, Rosemary Thayer '44, Effie Winn, Sp., Geral Haines '42, Nellie Herrmann '44, Mary Lessor '43, Alison Ryan '44, Ruth Cooley '42, Sarah Brigham '41, Betty Cole '41, viola, Dorothy Mosely '42; violoncellos John Goss '43, Robert Goss '44, Margaret Wishart '43; flutes, Jean Vogler '44, Mary Beth Davis '43; clarinet, Saul Boyarsky '44; trombones, Ernest Stockwell '44 and Oliver Swift '43.

Student rush seats will be 25 cents. Reserved seats as 40 cents and 75 cents are on sale at the University Book Store and Bailey's Music Rooms.

Winooski Holds Frosh Scoreless

Fine Pitching Seen in 1-Hit Practice Tilt

Last week, a determined but weak-hitting frosh aggregation was held scoreless for seven innings by the Winooski High School team in a practice tilt for both combinations. Although the Kittens amassed a grand total of two hits, their opposition was even worse, eking out one lone single.

One error was committed by Larry Killick, but the basketball star made several fine stops afterwards to more than atone for his mishap. Larry threw out the winning run at the plate to keep the score even. This was the sole error credited to the baseball team of '44, as their defense withstood the feeble offerings of the Winooski team very nicely.

Three pitchers divided the mound duty for the Kittens in this scoreless struggle. Craige demonstrated the best form of the three, and he will probably receive the nod from Coach Fuzzy Evans in the Dartmouth contest May 3 at the latter's diamond. Urie is expected to open the season this Thursday by facing Burlington High. This game starts at 3.30 p.m. following the frosh track meet. Bister, the third twirler may be shifted to left field, if his hitting keep up. Delorme, the present left fielder, will have to display some fancy stepping in order to insure his position.

The frosh were helpless against curve ball pitching for the simple reason that their own pitchers have no curves to offer during practice session. If the pitchers can acquire a little "English" before the campaign gets under way, there is a good chance for the Kittens to come out on top.

In the meantime Fuzzy Evans is going to change his lineup, until he is satisfied with the results. This affords any member of the squad to earn a regular's berth, if improvement is shown within the next few days. Bad breaks in scholastic work have caused the loss of Joe Margolis, first string catcher and have deprived the squad of a potential threat at the plate.

Desso and Hazen took care of the catching chores. Both are weak hitters and there is little to choose between them. Hazen got some fine throws to second base and managed to nip a few base stealers.

If eligible, Whitworth will be placed in center field and Goodrich will be shifted to left field. Whitworth will not know until May, if he is permitted to play.

Thomas procured the only extra base hit of the day, getting a lofty double. Goodrich accounted for the other frosh hit.

The lineup:

Conti, s.s.; Goodrich, c.f.; Killick, 2nd; Lunna, r.f.; Eddy, 3rd; Delorme, l.f.; Thomas, 1st; Desso, c.; Hazen, c.; Urie, p.; Craige, p.; Bister, p.

Round Robin Tourney to Set Frosh Tennis Team

The freshman tennis team has been practicing regularly in preparation for their first encounter with Bellows Free Academy of St. Albans. The game is scheduled to take place Saturday, May 3 on the frosh home court.

To date, Clive Denton, Tom Keighley, Vin Manjoney and Cognetta look quite formidable. Johnny Hurst, R. Norton and J. Goldberg are also strong contenders for the first five.

A round robin tourney will be held this week to finally determine the official squad. The tourney is slated to begin on Tuesday, April 29 on the new Centennial Field Courts.

Union Track Squad Outpoints Vermont

Mott Shines Again by Scoring 16⅓ Points

Saturday afternoon, at Schenectady, the great electricity center, U. V. M.'s Bert Mott turned the tables and electrified a fair-sized Union crowd by scoring 16⅓ points in the track meet between Vermont and Union. Nevertheless, the Green and Gold was outclassed and lost 74 to 52.

Union scored ten first places, but U. V. M.'s seconds and thirds held down the score. Besides Mott, the only other U. V. M. winners were Red Goss, who tied with Mott in the broad jump, and Fred Webster, who took the two-mile with ease. Incidentally, Ernie St. Mary proved that he is coming along rapidly when he placed second in the two-mile.

The following are the results:

100-yard dash—Won by MacMillan (U); Breed (U) second; Parker (V) third. Time, 16.6s.

220-yard dash—Won by MacMillan (U); Mott (V) second; Davis (U) third. Time, 22.8s.

440-yard dash—Won by Davis (U); Lewis (U) second; Eaton (V) third. Time, 53.6s.

880-yard run—Won by Orton (U); Stoddard (V) second; O'Neil (U) third. Time, 2.06.3.

One-mile run—Won by Orton (U); C. Webster (V) second; Hoyt (V) third. Time, 4.45.9.

Two-mile run—Won by F. Webster (V); St. Mary (V) second; Reed (U) third. Time, 10.39.4.

Sports Cast

By ITZ

The Williams College lads took the Cats to camp Saturday by capitalizing on scored and unscored errors and putting across three unearned runs in the last two innings of play. The game was a thriller, as the offerings of both pitchers were walloped for a total of 24 hits and almost every inning saw men in scoring position. The brand of ball which the Cats displayed showed that there is plenty of room for improvement, for although the box score only showed three errors for the Catamounts, we can't forget the man caught off third in the first inning, the time no one covered second on a bunt, and the pitcher's balk which sent a run across the plate.

On the Bright Side

With good control and plenty of speed, Spaulding is the Williams pitching ace, yet the Vermont sluggers collected eleven hits from him—a definite improvement in the hitting department. The Cat infield scored three snappy double plays, although the one they missed in the first inning proved mighty costly.

The most encouraging performance of the day was turned in by Chucking Charlie Smith, Vermont catcher whose bullet-like pegs cut down pilferers at the keystone sack, and kept the other base runners close to their sacks. Chucking Charlie also collected two hits at the plate, and both came with men on the bases.

By far the best news, however, comes from the fact that Capt. Frank Taylor, Dick Healy, and Bob Carlson will almost certainly see action before the week is out.

Mott Places Again

The track team dropped one to Union Saturday, owing to a lack of dash material. Bert Mott once again entered and placed in five events and emerged from the meet with a total of 16⅓ points. Considering the fact that Bert had little rest between his events, his performance deserves the highest commendation. And we certainly do wish that he had a twin brother!.

The Middlebury track team made it two straight by taking R. P. I. by a wide margin Saturday, and when we look at comparative times all we can say is that these Panther cindermen are going to be hard to beat.

Frosh Tracksters Tested Thursday

Burlington to Provide Sterling Competition

Coach Roy Wietz's freshman track team will meet its first test this Thursday when they run up against Coach Dutch Smith's charges from Burlington High School. Coach Wietz rates his squad as "just an average track team with its strong points and its weak points." The boys will be green, but in spots there is experience.

Burlington High School boasts a fair bunch of men in Matthews, Beaudeau, Burrell, Roberge and Huntington. Rumor has it that Matthews will not be available for the meet.

The freshmen will line up with Bart Barry and Bish McGill in the high hurdles, Paul Walgren and Slugger Reed in the 100, and Walgren, Reed, Pulleyn and Kunken in the 220. "Mouthie" Pulleyn is a good man with a background of experience and should be a point getter. Barry, Hendricks and McGill will undoubtedly run in the low hurdles. In the mile trot it looks like McLaren, Goss, Corliss, Webster, Helberg and Goodenough. Feldman and Pulleyn will run the 440, while Corry and McGill will be represented in the 880. Coach Wietz plans to use Herman Walgren, Lockwood and Johnny Goodrich in the high jump. In the other field events there will be Art Patterson in the pole vault; Sedlis, Walgren and Hendricks in the shot; Lockwood in the discus; Turner and Goss in the javelin throw; and Barry and Kunken in the broad jump.

The squad is at present an unknown quantity and Coach Wietz will get a better line on their ability in competition Thursday.

T E P's Win 2nd Straight By Defeating Owls 7-4

Tau Epsilon Phi defeated the Owls in one of this season's interfraternity softball games by the score of 7-4. T E P men grounded or flied out in the first frame, while the Owls got off to a strong start by scoring two runs by dint of walks and hitting in the clinches.

In the third round T E P started a rally by scoring six runs. Nice fieldwork by the Owl nine finally retired the side.

Walks by the T E P hurler put several men on base but the boys playing the bases showed excellent teamwork by limiting the Owls to but two more runs.

DRAFT LEGISLATION—The International Relations Club announces a lecture on "Drafting Legislation" by Attorney J. Hervey Macomber, Jr., of Burlington. Mr. Macomber, who served as draftsman at the recent session of the Vermont State Legislature and is well known in this area as a highly-gifted and entertaining speaker, will deliver his lecture in the Art Gallery of the Fleming Museum, Tuesday, April 29, at 7.30 p.m. The public is cordially invited.

Do Students Get Balanced Meals?

State Nutrition Comm. To Help Control Diet

How many U. V. M. students who board themselves or eat in restaurants actually get wholesome and well-balanced meals?

In order to aid students both men and women, in this respect, the members of the State Nutrition Committee, many of whom are on the University faculty, are going to publish weekly diet suggestions. On doing this, they hope not only to teach the student how to decide what constitutes a really good meal—one that is nutritious and wholesome, yet economical, but also to aid the student in procuring the most for his money when planning meals and buying food.

Dr. Florance King, head of the Home Economics department, is chairman of this nutrition committee; other members are: Miss Lydia Tarrant, extension nutritionist; Dr. H. B. Pierce of the Medical College faculty; Mr. J. H. Perry of the zoology department; Dr. S. S. Corbin, also of the medical faculty; Miss Milla Newland, nutritionist of the State Department of Health; and Mrs. Allen Fletcher of Ludlow, representing the consumer groups.

The first in this series of weekly articles appears below. It is hoped that all self-boarding students on the campus, both men and women, will realize the value of these diet suggestions and will follow them. Any comment or suggestions on the part of the students will be appreciated by the CYNIC.

Eat the Right Food!

Studies show that about one-fourth of the people of the United States have diets that could be rated good. More than a third of the families have fair diets or just enough to keep them going. The rest are getting poor diets. Poor diets may not put you to bed but may result in lack of pep, shifting aches and pains and certain kinds of digestive disturbances. They prevent a person from doing his best work in college. They lower the natural resistance to infection.

These poor diets may be a result of small incomes but often are a result of not selecting the right foods, not spending the income wisely, or not liking some of the right foods. College students preparing their own meals give lack of time as another reason for poor diets.

In deciding what to eat each day, plan first on one pint or more of milk. If fresh whole milk cannot be obtained, use skimmilk, buttermilk, evaporated milk, dry milk, or cheese. One tall can of undiluted evaporated milk, one-half pound of dry milk, or one-third pound of cheese has about the same food value as one quart of fresh milk. A leafly, green or yellow vegetable such as spinach, chard, beet greens, wild greens, beans, peas, carrots, or squash should be included each day for the iron and vitamin A they provide.

Each day tomatoes in some form, oranges, or grapefruit should be served. Besides these foods, serve potatoes and another vegetable and fruit, lean meat, fish, or poultry, at least two servings of whole-grain bread and cereals, butter, and dessert if desired. Eggs should be served three to four times a week separately or in cooking.

leave it, but always remember that it works two ways. Your obligation to Vermont does not end when you leave it. Visit the alumni office, get acquainted with it and its functions before you graduate."

His closing words, "Organized alumni loyalty is worth infinitely more than unorganized good-will," are well worth pondering over. Following Coach Prentice's speech was a vocal rendition of "Phi Delta Theta, We'll Always Be True" by the Phi Delta Theta Glee Club under the direction of A. M. K. Blume of the German department.

William Lockwood '27, former Rhodes scholar and present vice-president of the Howard National Bank, followed in the same vein of thought, stressing again the importance of the alumni office, and especially the interest and loyalty shown by the various alumni clubs in large cities such as Boston, Hartford, New York and Washington. He remarked that not until recently have the Vermont alumni organized a club in Burlington, despite the fact that "there are more alumni here than in any other city."

"Toast to Phi Delta Theta," another song by the Glee Club, brought the program to a close. In parting, radio editor Meyer Levin '41 announced that the Phi Delt Glee Club and the Ethan Allen Quartet will be glad to cooperate gratis with any organization which might be holding patriotic meetings.

Note.—Mrs. Belle Y. Gallup, secretary of the Alumni Council, sends a cordial request to all seniors and interested underclassmen to visit her office on the third floor of the Medical Building. Remember: You're a student for four years; you're an alumnus for life.

Military News

Colonel Spalding of the military department, when interrogated as to whether he had any news for the CYNIC volunteered some information concerning the need for Flying Cadets.

He stated that at the present, and in the future no matter how things turned there would be a very great need for Flying Cadets. The training is most valuable, and above and beyond that any young man who realizes the need for patriotic effort can be assured that he is making his full contribution if he qualifies as a Flying Cadet.

Incidentally, Colonel Spalding stated, all who have entered this work from the University have been successful.

Larry Gardner Holds Discussion With Girls

Tuesday night, April 22, Larry Gardner, baseball coach of U. V. M., presented a movie and then answered questions on baseball. The movie, entitled "The American League Movie," gave an interesting insight on how to play baseball and into the works of big league ball. Many of the leading players in today's leagues were shown, and the film was very interesting, showing the world series and various techniques.

After the picture several of the girls asked questions and kept Coach Gardner quite busy. He said that it took ten or twelve years of continuous practicing and work to get primed for the big league. The girls enjoyed the movies and talk immensely and learned quite a few things about the game which they hadn't known before.

ATTENTION OF JUNIORS—The examination in English 26 will be given in the Gymnasium at four o'clock on Tuesday, May 6.

Prof. Leon Dean Addresses Students On Founder's Day

Bases Speech on New Book, "Vermont's Admission to the Union"

The Founder's Day speaker, Prof. Leon W. Dean, an alumnus of the University of the class of 1915, took as the topic for his address this morning excerpts from his new book on Vermont's admission to the Union. The highlights of his address are given below:

In the early days of the state there was little need for any form of centralized governmental control. The isolated homesteads and tiny hamlets were sufficient to their own needs. Ordinarily, as population and social problems increased, some sort of government would develop, but this time was hastened by the New York controversy, which brought pressure from without, forcing the settlers to organize in self defense. The organization took the form of Committees of Safety in the various towns and the forming of a military group known as the Green Mountain Boys.

This incipient form of government might have sufficed to cope with the New York situation, but when the Revolutionary War broke out, bringing a new threat, it was found to be too inefficient. Vermont now set herself up as an independent state. New York, who had been claiming jurisdiction over the territory, protested to Congress, but New Hampshire, on the other side, made no disturbance.

At the first meeting of the Vermont Legislature, however, sixteen New Hampshire towns along the Connecticut requested annexation to Vermont. Vermont almost against its own better judgment, agreed to the proposal, which caused the rest of New Hampshire to take offense and protest to Congress. Vermont annulled its action, releasing the sixteen towns to New Hampshire again, but now several Vermont towns along the Connecticut which had been sympathetic to the sixteen towns took objection, and these border towns on both sides of the Connecticut threatened to withdraw from their respective state affiliations and set up an organization of their own.

U. V. M. Thespians Will Present Farce, "You Can't Take It With You," Next Week

"You Can't Take It With You" by Moss Hart and George Kaufman, the play that made such a hit on Broadway and won the academy award in 1938 as a movie, is going to be presented on May 8 at Southwick during Junior Week.

The play is under the direction of Mrs. C. I. Taggart, who has a fine cast to work with:

Mrs. Penelope Sycamore..Jane Lyons '41
Essie Carmichael.....Patricia Pike '43
Rheba, maid .....Carolyn Brown '44
Paul Sycamore.....Donald Morgan '44
Mr. De Pinna.....Paul Poulin '41
Ed Carmichael.....Roger Hunting '42
Donald .....Harold Kennedy '43
Martin Vanderhof.....Alfred Amee '43
Alice Sycamore .....Jeanne Woolley '42
Henderson.....Stanley Sirkin '42
Tony Kirby.....Wendell Harvey '44
Boris Kolenkhov.....Abram Swartz '42
Jay Wellington.....Janet Hackwell '42
Mr. Kirby.....William Preston '41
Mrs. Kirby.....Louise Mann '41
The Grand Duchess Olga,
Helaine Goldberg '43
The three government men,
Clark Miller '42, Gerald Didinsky '44,
Stanley Sirkin '42
Stage manager.....Clark Miller '42

"You Can't Take It With You" is a farce in three acts, practically all the parts being character parts. The theme of the play is Grandpa Vanderhof's philosophy of life—do what you want to do. He came home from the office one day and decided never to go back to work as he wanted to enjoy life at home. His daughter, Mrs. Sycamore, writes plays because someone left a typewriter at the house by mistake, and thus the members of the family all pursue their crazy occupations. The sanest is Penny Sycamore's pretty daughter, Alice, who falls in love with Tony Kirby and then the complications arise.

The setting throughout the play is the gathering place (might be called a living room) of the Sycamores, where the lives of the family unfold before the audience.

The play first made its appearance in New York in December in 1936. The leading parts were played by Henry Travers, Josephine Hull and Margot Stevenson, who made the play a great success, running for several years.

Keep Tradition Dynamic

Traditions are a great thing when they mean something—when they keep alive a memory or a principle worth keeping alive. Founder's Day is a Vermont tradition that does and should continue to have great meaning. It is the day when everyone connected with this University looks back and commends the foresight of those men who realized the importance of education in a free community. It is the day when the University recollects its long history and reaffirms its faith in the principles upon which it was founded.

At the same time are announced the names of those people who have been selected as the outstanding representatives of the student body and who are to be the leaders of student action in the school year to come. Upon the shoulders of those leaders will fall the task of seeing that the high aims of the University are advanced.

Coming as it does on the sesquicentennial year of the University's history, this Founder's Day is an especially significant one. It is comforting to think that in a world that has seen so many changes and has suffered so many disasters, this institution has been able to survive. It is inspiring to look back on those long years to the time when the earliest founders, confident in the future of their state and country, laid the cornerstone of our educational system. Struggles with the wilderness, struggles with hostile powers did not destroy their idealism nor their faith. In a free country, they knew that there would be great need for knowledge and liberal education.

But this is self-evident. What is not so evident is that we cannot sit back after today's exercises and think vaguely "it was nice of Ira Allen to found this University"—and then turn to a discussion of who made Boulder or who made Mortar Board. Nor should the members of the honor societies sit back with their laurels firm in their grasp and relax. The founders never finished the job of advancing liberal educational principles, of improving the opportunities for advancement offered by our educational system.

Over and above the purely routine duties of sponsoring smokers and dances and channeling student social activities, the honor societies have the all-important task of guiding student opinion, of being alive to campus problems and of organizing student action when their vital interests are affected. The honor societies should be a vital force on the campus. When a problem arises affecting student interests, the honor societies should be the first to send out a call for student action. When there is a need for student discussion, for student cooperation, the honor societies should serve as the guides for this effort. In the past too little emphasis has been put on this vital function and as a result the honor societies have failed to be more than a vague symbol of leadership on the campus.

In its widest sense Founder's Day should be a thought-stimulant. That's the use of your traditions—they keep alive the meaning of progress and liberty. They spur to action. If they fail to do that they aren't worth keeping. Today with the ever-increasing menace of a controlled educational system hanging over the campuses of the country, students everywhere should realize what a glorious heritage of unshackled education we have been entrusted with. Remember—our rights and liberties are never won, they are always to be fought for. We need dynamic traditions to constantly remind us of that axiom of human progress.

Letters From England

Compiled by DORIS JARECKIE '42
JACOB KATZ '44

This is the third installment of a series of letters from an English girl to a friend here in the United States, which we started two weeks ago in this column.

October 26, 1939.

This war is not just a fight for the maintenance of the British Empire, it is the freedom of the individual which is at stake. Therefore, they are calm today in the rain of bombs and machine gun bullets. From their old Anglo-Saxon ancestors they have learned the old and defying proverb: "It is better to be dead than to be a slave."

Dear Mary,

". . . . When I read your letter, I said 'Thank goodness there is one American who realizes the vital importance of all this—who sees and thinks and sympathizes.' Because the mass of you don't—or won't—see. I suppose it is only natural—you are so safe and self-sufficient and so very far away. . . . The great American public seems to say 'It is none of our business—it doesn't affect us!' But it is your business! You are a great world power—you believe in Democracy—and this is a fight for Democracy, a fight that must, at all costs, be won. . . . You ask me if I think it would be cowardly to try to escape? My answer is—yes. Let me try to explain. I'm not inhuman: we have heard so much about war and its horrors that I loathe the thought of it. At times of crisis I have hoped and prayed against war—I have literally wept with relief and joy when the crisis burst. I have wished I could go away to some safe place and live my life in peace, according to my own designs—I have said, as millions of other young English men and women must have said lately: 'There must be some way out—we can't go on living like this.' I know what air raids can do to towns, I know the searing agony that can be caused by gas—but I would rather endure that, all of it, a thousand times, than have my children live in the uncertainty and misery of our life today. So that's what it amounts to. I agree—this time it's different—there is none of the bravado and wild forced gaiety of 1914. That's because there is too much at stake this time—our whole future is in the balance. . . . Happiness—human happiness—is composed, after all, of very trifling things: a man's home, which he must safeguard at any cost; his feeling of security; his freedom to come and go as he sees fit; to worship as he chooses; to speak and act freely; to offer a future of some decent sort to his sons. That is what I think we are fighting for. . . . Let's not be hypocritical about it: we are trying to save our own skins—but it's more than that. So I don't think we can any of us, today, find justification for turning around and running—because, suppose that we did get beaten, it would undoubtedly be that spirit of 'it-has-nothing-to-do-with-me' that would have caused our defeat. I feel that it is, vitally, my business. . . . We have just heard the news that Scotland was raided this afternoon—so I don't suppose it will be long before we have to go through it. . . ."

November 16, 1939.

Life goes on. It is a bit inconvenient and often dangerous. They carry one, however, with happy thoughts directed towards the Future, a better Future—they hope.

". . . . In my spare time—ie., 9 a.m. to 12.30—Joyce and I walk, cycle, write letters—and knit. I am busy knitting khaki socks for my brother—he has just received his commission in the Scots Guards—one of the crack regiments. He will probably go into training next month and soon after to the B. E. F. in France. . . . Joyce and I go to bed after lunch—about 2.30; and there the war actually comes in useful! because the blackout curtains, with which every window is equipped, shut out every bit of light. . . . We have had to invest in an alarm clock which rings out raucously at 11 p.m.: that is a horrible moment. We get up and go down to the living room at about 11.30—feeling sleepy and cold. Our hostess has left a large fire there, and hot coffee and biscuits in the hearth. . . . We get up to the 'War station' just before midnight and are ready to start work as it strikes. Then—hard at it, for a steady three hours: at 3 a.m. we go over to the kitchen for supper—eggs, sausages, etc. At 5 we put a kettle on to our open fire and it soon boils and we make tea—there is nothing that tastes quite so good, or is quite so welcome as that cup of tea at 5.30 in the morning . . . . when the tea is poured, we put off all the lights and open windows and doors, and a delicious breeze blows through—the sun is usually just rising over the hills: it is beautiful; we call our shift 'the Fellowship of the Dawn!' After tea we work on till 8—when the next shift takes over. . . . This morning we went for a long walk. There was a hard ground frost—it scrunched under our feet: we all felt a bit light-headed. . . . The country looked so lovely, with its vague white mantle of frost—Lib and I both stopped dead at practically the same moment and said 'Surely this isn't going to be smashed—it can't be.' That is the horrible part of all this—the uncertainty in which loved and beautiful things are placed. . . ."

December 9, 1939.

A place of study is filled with soldiers who are standing here to safeguard this ground for further study and not for doctrines.

". . . . I came across this picture in the newspaper last Sunday: it caught my eye, as I knew the environment. I used to sit and study on that bench round the mulberry tree. All that seems centuries ago. Isn't it grotesque that the peaceful convent garden should now be full of men wearing gas-proof suits? . . . ."

December 20, 1939.

A definition of life.

". . . . For some people this war is a great adventure (the small man with a drab life); for some (evacuated slum children, for instance), certainly beneficial; for some, those with a mind that functions, it is a national duty—the safeguarding and protection of a sacred trust: the future. But if you're in love—and specially if he is in one of the forces—well, it's just plain hell. . . ."

(To be continued)

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

A short time ago you mentioned th enthusiasm for current affairs was drea fully lacking in the college. But betwe rendering soldiers incorrigible and co demning political "war mongers," t fervor for voicing one's opinion seems have increased with leaps and bounds.

Second to our tuition difficulties, t main controversies seem to involve t Lease-Lend Act. In last Friday's CYNI Mr. McNamara's opposition to this A was based too strongly on previous grie ances with Great Britain. He shoul remember, when backing up a statemer with reference to the Revolutionary Wa that this is not the eighteenth century Next to Canada, England's governmen the temperament of her people and thei standard of living resemble ours mor than any other nation. In this presen conflict I believe that if we really look into the future with the welfare of ou country in mind, we cannot be Pro American without being Pro-British.

Forgetting about the past for a minute I should like to suggest that the attention of the public be focused upon current discussions to sound out opinions on history in the making. It is my opinion that in the near future Congress will be asked to make a decision far more significant than any previous one in our generation—whether or not to convoy supplies, at least part way to Great Britain, with our own navy.

Let us ask ourselves two questions before attempting any conclusive decision for or against the convoy problem. Do we want England to win the war? Almost everyone will doubtless answer in the affirmative so decisively that the question will appear absurd. I learned through experience that people who really want

Two Men at a Switchboard Make Radio Network

Few people realize that the facilities of a single radio station can be used to broadcast more than one program at the same time.

And yet, in such a station as Columbia's key station, WABC in New York, as many as seven programs may originate together—each heard in a different part of the country—one, perhaps, on this campus, another in a dormitory in a different section of America, served by a different regional network of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The wonder of network radio is that any network is made up of a number of smaller networks, or circuits, which can be juggled, pieced together, split in any of a number of ways so that the right program goes to the section of the country for which it is intended.

This magic is performed in a room on the 23rd floor of the CBS building in New York, a room called Master Control. If the network be regarded as a nervous system, Master Control is its ganglion.

It's now five twenty-eight, New York Time, in the room. We're watching two men sitting before a panel covered with a bewildering maze of dials, keys, switches, patch cords, plugs, and loudspeakers. A welter of music and talk pours from three of the loudspeakers.

At five twenty-eight, the programs that began at 5.15 are still on the air. From Columbia's Chicago outlet, WBBM, a dramatic program is being fed to stations in the Midwest and the Pacific Coast. New York's WABC is sending a story to a Pennsylvania, Ohio, and New York state loop. In other studio at WABC, an orchestra plays for listeners in the South and New England.

It's now five twenty-nine, and these programs are ready to go off the air—their signature music has started, and their announcers are making their closing remarks. Although the subjects are quite different, all three announcements end, almost as if by a coincidence, with the word-cue: "This is the Columbia Broadcasting System." We look at the clock: they have synchronized to almost the exact second of 5:29:30, the ideal time.

When the last "'System" is heard, the two men we are watching start to move,

Air Corps Offers Many Opportunities

Can Use Able-Bodied Young College Men

At this time college men throughout the nation are keenly aware that they will soon be called upon to go for a year's military training in an army camp. Those who have not taken R. O. T. C. courses will, for the most part, be privates; and even those who have taken two years of this work can hope to rank no higher than non-commissioned officers. Here is an opportunity to become an officer in one of the most popular branches of the service—the Air Corps.

If you meet the requirements you will be sent to a flying school for seven months' training. During this period you will have spent about 215 hours in the air, and be given, in addition to the flying training, courses in navigation, meteorology, radio, and other subjects allied with military aviation. The pay will be $75 per month plus a ration allowance of $1 per day. You will be quartered in a modern barracks, and be furnished with uniforms and other flying equipment without cost.

Upon completion of the course of instruction you, as a flying cadet, are appointed a second lieutenant in the Air Corps Reserve, receiving your "wings" and the rating of pilot. Then you will serve on active duty for three years if your services are desired. Afterwards you should be able to qualify as an airline transport pilot if you choose to return to civil life.

Requirements are that you be between the ages of twenty and twenty-six, a citizen, have two years of college, and that you pass a physical examination.

For further information write to the Vermont Flying Cadet Committee, Free Press, Burlington.

Cats Take 6-3 Defeat at Hands of Williams Nine

Spaulding Squelches Cats With Seven Hits; Shaw Only Catamount to Get Extra Base Hit

Three unearned runs in the last two innings proved to be the deciding factor in Saturday afternoon's contest between Vermont and Williams, with the Williams club on the long end of the 6-3 decision.

The Cats played good ball until the eighth and ninth, when wild pitches and errors allowed the visitors to carry off the victory before a crowd of 1,200 loyal Vermont fans.

Both teams scored twice in the first, after Shaw gave Williams a run by a balk, when a double play plan had been broken up. Vermont came back with four consecutive singles to put two runs across with the aid of a Williams fielder having made a bad throw.

In the third the visitors went ahead with three one-baggers and held the lead until Vermont struck back in the seventh. The Cats' hopes were shortlived, however, for Meehan of Williams lined a single to left field in the top of the eighth and warmed the basepaths, getting to the hot corner on Hagstrom's hit to right center. Meehan scored when Randy Sullivan missed the chance for a double play on a ball hit by Fran Dolan.

Two runs for Williams in the top of the ninth settled the issue as Spaulding, the visiting hurler, squelched the Cats on seven pitches.

A characteristic of Vermont's game was that of not following up its advantages. Spasyk gained first on an eror in the third, stole his way to second, only to die there when Doherty and Beauchemin made out. In the fifth Sysko and Doherty both singled, but were again stranded by Beauchemin. In the sixth Smith worked his way around to third on a single but was left on the sac.

Shaw opened the seventh with a double to right, while Sysko followed up with a bunt, Shaw going to third. Spasyk tried a third-strike bunt, which rolled foul, an automatic out. Hagstrom juggled Doherty's grounder, scoring Shaw with the tying run. Spaulding then whiffed Beauchemin on strikes and got Smith on a fly to left field.

Both pitchers went the distance, giving up several hits which could have been snagged for outs by faster fielding. Meehan and Bush got three apiece off Shaw, with Fitzgerald and Hagstrom also contributing a pair each. Sysko, Doherty, Smith and Wood got two each off Spaulding, while Shaw contributed the only extra-baser with his double in the seventh.

NOTICE

Major Sceeld of the Selective Service Headquarters in Montpelier has sent the University copies of a questionnaire which is to be filled out by all students of draft age, including those taking the advanced course in Military Science. I understand these are to be used to determine deferment for college students. It is obviously important that every student of draft age fill out the questionnaires so that they may be returned promptly to Selective Service Headquarters.

Dean Kemp will distribute these for the College of Medicine and Dean Hills for the College of Agriculture. Students of draft age in the College of Engineering and Arts may obtain copies of the questionnaire by applying to the Office of their Dean. All such should attend to this matter as early as convenient.

I have posted on the bulletin board a list of students in the College of Arts of draft age according to our records.

Tennis Team Stage Successful Trip

Trounce Mass. State and U. Conn. Lose to Jeffs

Beaten by a formidable Amherst team in their first encounter of the season, the University of Vermont tennis squad bounced right back by taking the measure of the University of Connecticut and Massachusetts State in their Connecticut trip last week-end.

The Vermont net men proved no match for the Lord Jeffs, who romped to an easy 9 to 0 victory last Thursday, but the tables were turned the subsequent day when a determined Catamount court team rolled over Connecticut University 8 to 1.

Bill West was the only Vermont man to bow in this contest, but his opponent was forced to three sets before emerging victorious. This is West's first year on the varsity, as he is only a sophomore.

Capt. Ed. Simpson and his brother Larry won their matches in two sets, as did Dick Lynch and Sam Foti in their games. Art Wolk had to play three, before his triumph was assured.

Not satisfied with their previous day runaway, the team subdued Massachusetts State 9 to 0 with the same six players participating in this clean sweep.

Riding on the crest of this two-game win streak, which is quite lengthy in considering last year's net record, Coach Carpenter's men are preparing to invade upper New York State this week to meet Clarkson and St. Lawrence. The squad will leave Friday morning and will return Saturday night.

Usually there have been six players competing in the matches, but it has been customary to play with only five on the New York trip. Instead of six single matches and three doubles, the Vermont team has played five single matches and two double matches with Clarkson, and four singles and two doubles with St. Lawrence. Professor Carpenter is still uncertain if he will take his first six men, they being the same ones that opposed the Connecticut College aggregations.

Clarkson was one of the few teams to fall prey to the Catamounts last year, and they are not expected to offer any stiff competition this week either. The match with St. Lawrence last year was rained out, but Vermont was leading when the rain halted the contest. St. Lawrence boasts of a strong number one man in Seeler who triumphed in last year's match, otherwise the Cats have a good opportunity to stretch their streak to four, before making their first home stand against Union, May 6.

SENIORS — Commencement announcements can now be ordered at the bookstore.

Powerful Princeton And Amherst Clubs Engage Balltossers

Carlson and Healy's Return Expected to Strengthen Lineup

A week-end of baseball designed to satisfy the appetites of the most rabid fan is on the docket for this week-end when the Catamount tossers engage Princeton on Friday and Amherst on the following day. These two ball clubs should furnish the Green and Gold with all the opposition they want.

Princeton's appearance here will be the first time a Big Three baseball team has shown its wares on Centennial Field in quite some time. Little is actually known about the potentialities of the Orange and Black, but it is believed that they are a threat in the Ivy League this year.

Amherst is enjoying a good season this year, although they lost to Springfield. The pitching staff is an unknown quantity, but it is known that they lost Lefty Williams, their ace a year ago, by graduation. Williams is now pitching for Hartford in the Eastern League, a Boston Bees farm.

Vermont will be bolstered by the return to action of two of their stars, Bob Carlson and Frank Taylor. Carlson will be chucking in one of these contests according to Coach Gardner. Captain Taylor will patrol right field for the first time this year, and his big bat should be a factor in the Cat's showing. Last week Frank pinch hit in the Williams game and played right field for an inning, but this Friday will be his first starting rôle.

Dick Healy is still a man handicapped by several ailments. His knee is still weak, but a basketball injury to his back has recurred and he will have to be on the sidelines again this week. Coach Gardner wants to take no chances on hurting Dick for life, which of course may happen if he sees action before he is physically ready.

The week's preparatory drills have consisted of a lot of hitting and a concentration on tightening the infield defenses. Randy Sullivan, shortstop, has been bothered by a sore wing and has had to take it easy this week. The hitting has shown marked improvement, but hitting in the clutch is lacking.

Coach Gardner plans to use the regular lineup with Frank Taylor the only change. The infield remains the same with Hank Beauchemin, Johnny Spasyk, Randy Sullivan, and Hazen Wood comprising the inner defenses. Wood seems to have regained his batting eye, clicking two for three against Williams. The outfield is comprised of Taylor, Sig Sysko and Nails Doherty. Charlie Smith will catch the slants of Carlson and probably Clarence Akley. Gardner was not sure as to his choice of pitchers, but he imagines that Carlson and Akley will be ready with Al Shaw on relief.

Students Usually Pay

Ann Arbor, Mich.—(ACP)—Student borrowers make good risks, the University of Michigan reports.

During a 43-year period, only three-fourths of one per cent of money loaned by the student fund was charged off as a loss. The majority of final failures to pay were due to death or to permanently disabling illness, a president's report says.

Since the fund was established at the university in 1897, a total of $1,811,271 has been loaned to students.

Cat Tracksters To Tackle Colby Team

Vermont Lads Expected To Cop First Victory

On Friday, May 2, the University of Vermont track squad will entrain, enplane or ensomething for the Colby College meet on Saturday.

Sporting defeats from Williams and Union Colleges, respectively, the Cat Harriers are due for a smashing victory if one salient defect is erased—lack of fighting spirit when under fire—the boys have appeared very capable in practice, but in a meet the "do or die" spirit is completely absent. Graduation has struck so severely that Archie Post is having a difficult time attempting to patch up his lineup. But there is a lighter side to the question involved! Star Johnny Daggett, still ailing from the shoulder injury sustained in the U. V. M. football fracas, will be out of the competition in pole vaulting, sprints, and broad jump. Not taking a sadistic viewpoint, Daggett's absence from the lineup will greatly mitigate the burden of the Cat contestants in the aforementioned events.

Another factor which should be considered is that the Colbymen fell prey to M. I. T. by the astounding score of 93⅔ to 41⅓. It is certain that Vermont could have done much better than that!

Colby College will feature Peters, high jumper, who has a chronic habit of reaching 6 ft. in practically every meet. In their encounter with M. I. T., Bateman took the quarter heat in the blitz time of 53.4. Fifield broad jumped to first place. Colby's Bubar won the javelin throw to the tune of 175 ft. 7 in. Thompson has done 11 ft. 6 in. in the vault thus augmenting the odds that the Cats must strive against. In the shot put, Colby will offer Lebednick, who tied with Frankie Taylor last year.

The Green and Gold stellar hurdler, Bob Kenney, is still out of the roster owing to his recalcitrant leg muscles. Frankie Taylor will not make the jaunt because it is his privilege and duty to lead his Diamondmen against Amherst. The backbone of the Vermont team is in the person of Bert "Galloping Ghost" Mott. Archie hopes that in the very near future some of Mott's tasks will be removed, but at the present time it seems probable that Mott will hurdle, broad jump and sprint. Grosvenor is still high jumping away from Mr. Measles. Vreeland, Pratt and O'Connell will represent Alma Mater in the pole vault. O'Connell will also participate in the 220. The sprint section forms a large question mark; it is dubious who will fill the order. Red Goss will probably be the 100-yard mainstay and also will contest the hurdle and broad jump titles. Obviously the Webster Company and Bud Hoyt will entertain the Colby distance men. Arnie Becker will treat the high and broad jumps with his own brand of medicine.

Despite glaring Green and Gold weaknesses, the Colby tracksters have a real battle on hand. If Archie Post's men go into the meet with that certain punch they should return with their first victory of the spring.

Sigma Nu Nine Takes Phi Sigma Delta, 5-0

In an interfrat softball game played on Friday, April 25, the slugging Sigma Nus whitewashed the Phi Delts before a large crowd of interested spectators, 5-0. The battery of Reed and Pye was a little too much for the batsmen of Phi Delta Theta.

Fred Logan attempted in vain to stave off defeat but infield errors and a weakness at the platter made the loss inevitable. The Phi Delts loaded the bases in the last inning, but Reed bore down and earned his shutout victory.

Sports Cast

By ITZ

The spring season for teams and fans comes to a head this week with every team scheduled to see action. The freshman tracksters will start the ball rolling when they meet Burlington High at Centennial Field today. We hear that the freshman team has some good sprinting and middle distance material, and it will certainly be worth while to see just what Coach Roy Wietz has to fill the holes in the varsity team. The freshman baseball team will also open with Burlington at Centennial today to complete the Founder's Day program.

All hands will be on deck Friday to watch the Cats attempt to claw the Princeton Tigers. In previous years the Cats have visited the Princetonians during the course of their southern trip, but this year they will be greeting them on the home lot. The Vermont team will probably be at full strength against the Tigers, for the first time this year. After warming up with Princeton the Vermonters will face the lads from Amherst on Saturday. Akley will probably twirl the first of the games, and Carlson, if he's in shape, will probably serve 'em up in the second.

Going Away

Coach Archie Post will take his boys to Waterville, Me., where they will meet the Colby team on Saturday. The Vermont team is still very much unbalanced. They can hold their own in the field events, but they are still very noticeably weak on the track, and this is the last meet before Middlebury.

After their opener with the Burlington Sea Horses today, the freshman diamond men will visit Hanover on Saturday to compete with the Dartmouth freshmen.

In the Way of Compliments

The Vermont tennis team is slated for a two-day jaunt through Potsdam and Canton, where they will attempt to uphold the good record they have started. In a recent trip southward the team hopped off on the wrong foot, and absorbed a 9-0 trouncing from Amherst, but they bounced right back to take one, 8-1, from Connecticut University and followed with a 9-0 shutout of Massachusetts State. We don't know what caused the sudden perk up, but if the treatment is continued Coach Carpenter will have had one of his most successful seasons in years.

pressing buttons, holding keys. From the loudspeakers the theme music continues. Then from the local outlet speaker come the words: "This is WABC, New York." In 117 other stations, local announcers are also identifying themselves.

More buttons are pushed, and then, as the clock points to 5:30:00, a new musical theme from all the speakers, and a voice tells us that we are hearing a program originating in Columbia's Hollywood studios.

The switches the men have thrown have put the three small networks together into one large one, enabling the program from Hollywood to come through New York to the South and Middle West. While this program is on the air, our men pre-set the keys and dials which will take the program that come after this to four different split networks.

Ninety-eight thousand programs passed through Master Control last year, and yet, as we watch the two men wating for their "System" cues, we know that at the nerve center of a network, there's no such phrase as "dull routine."

Intramurals Now In Full Swing

Interfraternity softball has advanced considerably this last week and is almost in its final stages.

The upset of the week was the game between Phi Sigma Delta and the Independents as the former romped to their second straight victory, coming out on the long end of a 22-5 score. The Independents tried vainly to stem the tide of runs pounding across the plate but just couldn't stop the flying Phi Sigs. Charlie Katzew turned in another fine performance on the pitching mound and was ably aided by his teammates' superb fielding and timely hitting.

In the second game of the afternoon Earl Reed, that famous pitcher-umpire superb, hurled a masterpiece as he set the Phi Delts back on their heels. Final score, Sigma Nu 5, Phi Delta Theta 1. Excellent fielding by both teams kept the score as low as it was.

The third game showed much in the way of fielding, hitting and comedy as the T E P's handed the Delta Psis their second straight setback by winning 13-9. Fireball Shuman hurled his fast ball again and again to make the Delts pop up or fly out. Although both teams had good hitting, the fielding wasn't in any way superb. Weg of the winners led in errors as he threw three wild throws to first. This, however, did not stop the T E P's as they came out on top, winning the hard way.

Dean Kemp On Cynic Program

A Few Numbers Sung By Ethan Allen Quartet

Tuesday evening's U. V. M. radio program was fortunate in having as a guest, Dr. Hardy A. Kemp, Dean of the Medical College, who in an interview with Meyer Levin '41, gave an excellent review of the subject, "One Hundred and Fifty Years of Medical Teaching in Vermont."

He recounted the early history of the Medical College, which was not deemed as such until 1822, although medical teaching and study had been carried on by preceptor methods, the student studying medicine with a licensed practitioner, prior to 1800. It seems that our medical college is one of the oldest in America, only Harvard and Yale exceeding it in age; however, medical teaching in courses did not develop until after the first quarter of the nineteenth century. He mentioned that Dr. William Beaumont, the surgeon who is noted for making an intensive study of the human stomach, was probably taught by Doctor Pomeroy, lecturer in anatomy and surgery on the University faculty.

"The Medical College," he continued, "ceased to function after 1836, and its reorganization and reestablishment was largely due to the splendid work of Dr. S. W. Thayer, who served as dean intermittently from 1854 to 1882." Relative to this, he spoke of the early rivalry between U. V. M.'s and the other two Vermont medical schools, those at Castleton and Woodstock. These latter however, left the scene shortly after the Civil War.

He advanced the fact that those medical colleges which had affiliations with educational institutions have been the ones to survive throughout the years, pointing out, nevertheless, that our medical school has not always been as closely associated with the University as it is today. In reply to Mr. Levin's question concerning modern training of medical students, Dean Kemp listed the requirements needed for graduation from the medical school, stressing the long years of practical training and laboratory work.

In summing up the highlights of medical teaching in Vermont, Doctor Kemp gave the three salient advancements in medical education since Colonial times: (1) from preceptor teaching to the grouping of preceptors in forming a school; (2) then the establishing by these schools of stronger relations with educational institutions, until (3) today we have the rigid selection and long preparation for medical study requirements.

Concluding, Dean Kemp said with emphasis, "It is high time people realized that the medical school is a public service institution! Medical education today is now very much an established part of our social structure and is to be recognized as such."

In rounding out this interesting program, the "Ethan Allen Quartet," consisting of H. A. Mayforth, Sr., A. M. K. Blume, Fred Clough and Harry Gallup, favored the audience with a few well-sung pieces.

Placement Records Show More Women in Industry

Chicago, Ill.—(ACP)—Placement records of the University of Chicago are beginning to reflect the trend toward replacing men with women in industry, reports Miss Doris B. Larsh, placement counselor of the university's board of vocational guidance and placement.

She added, however, that "the salaries tend to be lower for women than for men who have held these same positions. For instance, one company which offers a starting salary of $125 a month to men is offering $90 to women in the same capacity.

"There undoubtedly will be a fluctuation upward, as the available good candidates are none too plentiful now and certainly cannot last much longer if employment continues to increase."

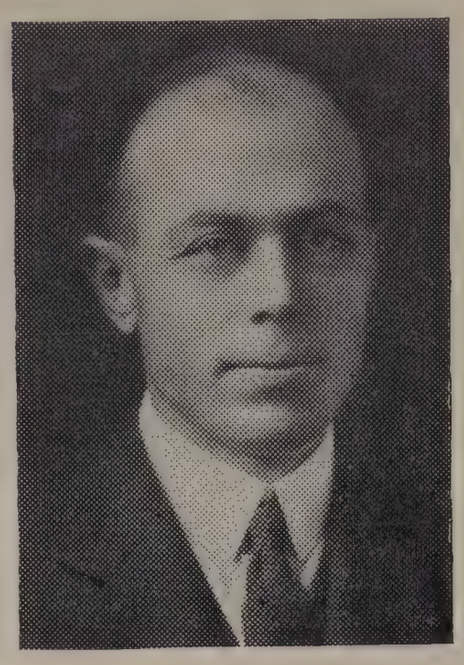
Comic Opera Draws Large Audience

"Coffee Cantata" Gives Coloring to Program

A varied and colorful musical including Haydn's comic opera, "The Apothecary," a concert by the University Orchestra, and Bach's "Coffee Cantata" was presented last evening by the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs and Orchestra at Southwick.

The concert, under the baton of Mr. Isocrates Pappoutsakis, was the first attraction on the program and included Mozart's Serenade and the Ballet Suite by Gluck-Mottl.

Three soloists performed the entire "Coffee Cantata" by Bach. They were: Theresa Coderre, Swanton; Thomas K. Malone, Jr., Burlington; and George L. Millikan of the University political science department.



The third part of the program was the colorful opera by Haydn, "The Apothecary," in which the cast of characters was: Sempronio, Robert Goss '44, baritone; Grilleta, Gloria Farrell '43, soprano; Mengone, Paul Poulin '41, tenor; young man, Keith Calkins '43, baritone.

Prof. Howard Bennett played the piano accompaniment for the opera; Mrs. Wilnetta S. Taggart was the dramatic coach, and Mme Elizabeth Bradish was the vocal coach.

A capacity audience enjoyed this fine and varied musical evening, and the music department deserves much credit for the professional manner in which this long program was presented.

Ann Corio, glamor girl of the stage and a spare-time philosopher, recently addressed Harvard undergraduates over the college's private radio station.

Address

New Hampshire, interpreting the situation as a sign of Vermont weakness, felt that the young state might be disintegrating, and put in a claim on the territory. New York's claim had been supported over New Hampshire's by the Crown, but Congress might look at the matter differently and support New Hampshire.

Congress proposed to settle the dispute by slicing Vermont down the middle, giving half to New York and half to New Hampshire. Massachusetts, however, now laid claim to the southern portion of the state, and this new complication caused Congress to delay.

Vermont, now beset on all four sides, took the aggressive, inviting in all the New Hampshire towns who wanted to come and several New York towns between Lake Champlain and the Hudson. By these two diplomatic strokes both New York and New Hampshire were thrown on the defensive. Then Vermont turned north and opened her famous Haldimand negotiations with England, threatening to go with England rather than be left to her destruction by Congress. This move kept England idle for over two years and Congress in a state of fear.

Finally the war closed, relieving the northern menace and Washington wrote Governor Chittenden, suggesting that if Vermont would withdraw into her former boundaries Congress might act favorably on her admission. Vermont acceded to the request, but Congress dallied again, and it was not until some ten years later, under a shifting and enlarging political sky, that New York agreed to relinquish her claim and Vermont was admitted to the Union as the fourteenth state without a dissenting vote.

ATTENTION OF JUNIORS—The examination in English 26 will be given in the Gymnasium at four o'clock on Tuesday, May 6.

John Hurst Adds Variety To Band

Swiss Accordionist to Play in Concert Tour

NOTE.—This is the third in a series of articles on the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. Band, which will make a tour of Vermont, May 2 and 3, appearing in parades and concerts in Rutland, Springfield, White River Junction, Montpelier, and Barre.

Very rarely in the instrumentation of a military band is an accordion used and for this reason the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. Band is extremely fortunate to have a performer on this instrument in the person of John W. Hurst of Pennsburg, Pa.

John, a native of Zurich, Switzerland, has been in this country for only two years but his musical interest dates back to the age of six when his father brought home a concertina. John's early experience consisted mostly of the playing of Swiss Folk Songs but as he became more accomplished, his attention was turned to the classics. Since the limited range of the concertina handicapped him in his interpretation of the old masters he turned to the accordion. For a while he played accordion in several Swiss bands until one day, hearing some recordings of American dance orchestras, he started his own dance band.

This band, consisting of four boys from his home town, included a piano, tenor saxophone, drums and John's accordion. Because no music was available, the boys listened to records and wrote their own arrangements. The native people were so pleased with the band that they gave them all the musical work in town.

Upon arriving at the University of Vermont and hearing about the R. O. T. C. Band, John's interest was immediately aroused. Although he was told by some of the boys that an accordion had no place in a military band, he tried out nevertheless and Joe Lechnyr, leader of the band, quick to recognize a good musician, gave John a place in the band.

Since then, he has encountered much new music, which he has handled with enthusiasm and talent. John will be heard with the University of Vermont band on its concert tour, May 2 and 3, through Rutland, Springfield, White River Junction, Barre, and Montpelier.

something will go to extremes, even involving risks, to obtain their desires. The second question: Has the average American really thought out the inevitable consequences of a German victory over England? Of course we have all listened to military analysis telling us how strong and invulnerable the United States will be in a year or so. We all know that our Navy has today the mightiest armada afloat. But there is one powerful and influential weapon from which the United States, as a true democracy, is not invulnerable—that is the ever increasing effectiveness of propaganda. England admits that this weapon is too powerful while allowing complete freedom of the press and speech—two of our greatest democratic ideals. Recently a prominent government official made the remark that we have today, in this country, two forms of foreign propaganda, the conscious and unconscious types, the latter being the most effective. Mose of us will agree that Colonel Lindbergh and the America First Committee have had more demoralizing effect upon individual Americans than tons of foreign, perfidious material. On a small scale, Mr. McNamara's cavil at the Lease-Lend Act is a good example of unconscious foreign propaganda.

Let us suppose that England has lost the war and her colonies outside of North and South America are occupied by German troops. As we look around, we see the United States guarding South America and facing virtually the rest of a hostile world. Even more slowly we begin to see our great Democracy turning into a huge military camp with the necessity of a War Cabinet to take over total powers and everything being operated on a military basis. All the things we are now so bitterly fighting against as being "non-democratic," will be inevitably forcing themselves upon us. Winston Churchill once said that Democracy's greatest fault was its failure to see danger in time to avoid it.

Doesn't this all sum up to the fact that everything we can do short of an actual expeditionary force to Europe would be "small change" in comparison to living perhaps a generation under the constant fear of war?

Many Enjoy Recital By Miss Marston Sunday

An appreciative audience heard a fine organ recital given by Miss Miriam Natilee Marston, instructor of piano and organ here, in the Ira Allen Chapel on Sunday evening. Also enjoyed were the piece dedicated to Miss Marston by Jores, and the beautiful romantic piece called "Dreams."

Reggie Childs And His Band Will Swing Out At Prom Friday Night

More Enthusiasm Urged For Wednesday's Sing

Another sing is to be held Wednesday evening at seven o'clock on the library steps with Louis Pichierri '41 leading. Let's see more out for it this time. Many of you were trained for your fraternity and sorority sings. Why not show off some of that talent? And those of you who claim you can't sing—can sing at an affair like this. Have you ever noticed how much better voices sound outdoors than indoors? Come along if it's only for a gathering of friends and a good time. These spring evenings are warm and light now and there aren't too many left. Take advantage of them!

Dancing From 9 Till 2; Deep Sea Setting

The "Rolling Styles" of Reggie Childs and a romantic "under the sea" setting—that's the Junior Prom, our big spring dance. The formal will be held in the gym on Friday, May 9 with dancing from 9 till 2. The Deep Sea promises a cool setting for Junior Prom.

Reggie Childs has played at the famous Hotel Roosevelt, the exclusive San Diego Country Club, Essex House in Newark and the Commodore Perry in Toledo. Two male vocalists, a girl vocalist, a male trio, a mixed quartet and an excellent glee club form a part of Reggie's Band.

A general preview of Junior Week will be given on Tuesday night at 8.30 on the CYNIC Radio Program. Then you'll hear some of Reggie Childs' recordings, so listen in.

Tickets for the Junior Prom can be bought at the University Book Store for $3.30 including tax.

J. J. Spasyk and J. J. White have charge of Junior Week and they have chosen able juniors to work for them on the Junior Prom. The chairmen in charge of the Prom are Catherine Peterson and J. A. White; Cathryn Grier and C. G. Miller are in charge of decorations; Joanna Metcalf is chairman of publicity committee, working with M. J. Reynolds; Jean Hall has charge of programs; floor committee chairman is R. L. Carlson; electricity committee is headed by W. L. Potter; refreshments are in charge of Frances Abel; and the financial end is being handled by F. P. Logan and C. V. Akley.

Boost Junior Week

This is the biggest week of the spring term from the standpoint of social merriment. No other week—not event Kake Walk—boasts such a varied calendar. Peerade, Junior Week play, Prom—all headline events. The ultimate success of Junior Week depends on the amount of support the students give to both the Prom and the Junior Week play. This year the directors have selected a very good orchestra. Reggie Childs has built up a considerable reputation for serving up smooth dance rhythms. Add to this the glamor and color that always attend the Prom and you can easily understand why this should be the most successful single event of the spring social season.

The Junior Week play this year promises to be one of the most entertaining ever presented at Vermont. "You Can't Take It With You" is way above average in the list of comedies and is tops in entertainment possibilities. The play is indeed a difficult production for any amateur group to tackle. We can only admire the ambition of the cast and director who are devoting so much time and effort to make this performance a memorable one. The only reward they can expect is a record turn-out by the student body.

Earlier in the year dramatics seemed to be well-nigh dead on this campus. The Junior Week play gives promise of a revival. Let us hope dramatics will not go the way most literary activities seem to be going on this campus. With Winnowings dead and Vermont dropping out of the tri-state literary contest, there seems to be a bad slump in this department. Dramatics at least should continue to find student support.

The cooperation needed shouldn't be hard to give. After all, Junior Week is the last chance students will get for a joyous fling before finals. Nothing could be easier—having a good time and at the same time cooperating to aid a truly deserving group. Let's see a good turn-out both at the play Thursday night and the Prom Friday night.

More Opinions Wanted

The controversy now raging in the CYNIC's pages over the Lease-Lend Act shows that some students at least are taking great interest in world events—interest enough to set down their opinions for publication. At present the bulk of the letters have been by a very limited group. Why can't we have more people writing letters? All of us have come to this University to prepare for a future and that future if it is to be of any significance must find us contributing our share to the progress of mankind. We are missing something, therefore, if we do not take every opportunity to discuss vital problems which will shape our future course. The CYNIC offers to each student opportunity to air his views. What should the attitude of our nation be towards the present war? What is our duty? Can we adopt the attitude of Senator Wheeler or should we back the "aid-England" attitude to the limit? What about convoys? Should we resort to them? These are vital problems of importance for all of us. Brief, pertinent expressions of opinion from the student body would be welcomed for publication. Let's not leave it to a handful of students to carry on the discussion.

Lease-Lend Bill Fight Still Rages

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Apparently Mr. McNamara favors a return to the good old rugged individualist policy of America for Americans and the devil with what Europe says and does. This attitude is almost understandable among some of the die-hard isolationists in the Senate but for a student who is supposedly conversant with current international affairs, it smacks of ignorance of basic facts.

Mr. McNamara suggests that Uncle Sam stop lending aid to Britain and employ said money in national defense. Very fine sentiments no doubt, but how and where are we going to spend this money? With Congress in its present spending dither over national defense, the army is placing its orders as fast as it decides what it wants and who it wants it from. The key to the situation is not more paper orders, but time to fill the orders already placed. If we withdraw our support, it is doubtful if Great Britain could last long enough for us to place the orders, much less get the weapons we need.

Without the British battle fleet it would be an almost impossible task for the American fleet to protect the Western Hemisphere. To be sure, we have an enormous fleet, but a large part of it is still on paper and we will have it if and when it is completed in 1943-46, with the greater part of the battleships, the backbone of the fleet, being commissioned at about the end of this period. Meanwhile the Japanese navy is equal to ours in battleships, fourteen to fourteen, and will surpass it in number and tonnage about 1943, when some of their huge 35,000-ton battleships, already nearing completion, are commissioned. Add to this the German and the remnants of the Italian fleet and erase from the present picture, or, what is a worse possibility, add to this the British fleet, and you have a rough idea of the opposition the American navy would have to face.

At this point, no doubt, somebody will demand: "Just how are they going to get the British fleet?" To which I retort, "How did they get into Norway, or North Africa or Scapa Flow? All military and naval experts said such things were virtually impossible but it must be noted that they were accomplished."

To return to Mr. McNamara's argument, if we withdraw our support and allow Britain to collapse, we must perforce embark on a program of military and naval expenditures which would make the present program and the seven billion dollar Lease Lend Act seem paltry indeed.

And to what avail would such spending be? We could not hope to keep up our standard of living in the face of the taxes necessary to finance such a program of armament. Nor could we, despite our high degree of industrialization, hope to compete either in peaceful or wartime production against all Europe with its factories and mines run by slave labor. Even with the typical American damn-the-expense attitude we could not compete successfully in a naval race against the rest of the world.

We soon ought to begin to realize that the oceans aren't as wide as they were about the time when isolation was the popular doctrine of foreign relations. Our coasts are within range of enemy fleets and submarines based either in Europe or Asia. While submarines alone can't win a war or even a sizeable naval battle, they can be mighty annoying to supply ships and small warships. Ask the British!

We have just completed construction of a bomber that can fly from here to Europe, drop a sizeable load of bombs and return non-stop. Of course we are the pioneers in aviation and have such things first, but in view of the way the Nazis have pirated our mechanized column, parachute troops, and dive bomber ideas, there is little reason to believe that we will long hold a complete monopoly on this one either. As a matter of fact, Germany is way ahead of us in diesel aircraft engines, having used planes so powered for trans-Atlantic passenger service for several years before World War II.

Of course it would be nice if we could believe Adolph when he says he has no designs on America. I've lost count of the number of times he applied the same remark to small European countries just before he took them over to protect them. Are we supposed to believe he would ignore the richest prize of all just because he said he would?

As the situation now stands, we have our industries choked with our defense orders along with those for materials destined for Britain. As long as Britain holds out, we are in little danger, compared to what we would be in if Britain falls. So if by supplying John Bull the weapons he needs we can delay or avoid entrance into the war, it seems to me that seven billion dollars could scarcely be spent more effectively in the interests of national defense. If this help enables England to defeat Hitler, it will indeed be a cheap price for the resulting benefits. And if it should prove that Britain eventually falls and the money serves no other purpose than to bolster her up until our industries have turned out sufficient arms for our own needs, it will still be money well spent.

As for Mr. McNamara's remarks concerning Senator Wheeler and Colonel Lindbergh, I feel that I cannot accord any mark of respect to men in responsible positions who exhibit such outright short-sightedness concerning world affairs. "America for Americans" is a fine sentiment but it would appear that the best way to keep "America for Americans" is to do all we can to insure the defeat of those who have the avowed purpose of taking America for themselves.

Rare Books Found By Prof. Lindsay

Some many years ago some shipments of books arrived from England and found their way to the cellar of the Billings Library. The sender was Benjamin P. Stevens of the class of 1857.

Stevens had married into the Whittingham family of England, owners of the Chiswick Press, and had sent a collection of books printed by this press. These books, noted for their especially fine print, were printed around the 1800's and numbered some 3,000. Included in the Stevens gift also were some Aldus books, some quite rare and old, printed in 1506 and earlier.

The librarians, opening these cases, checked and catalogued the books, and suspecting their worth, called in Professor Lindsay.

Professor Lindsay is an authority on old books. He sorted through them and found the ones of real value. His findings he printed in the Dolphin, a magazine for book-lovers. Besides the Whittingham collection, Professor Lindsay also sorted through the Chittenden collection, another gift to the library.

This was donated by L. E. Chittenden, who was registrar of the treasury under Lincoln. A relative of his, and governor of Vermont, was founder of Chittenden County.

These books have all been stored in the tower room of the library. When the Waterman building is complete, the rarer volumes will find a place, yet to be set aside, in the treasure room.

ALPHA XI DELTA

Mrs. Dunham F. Conger, national secretary of Alpha Xi Delta, was entertained by the Upsilon Chapter of Vermont on April 28, 29 and 30.

She has been touring New England colleges, recently having visited Tufts, University of New Hampshire and Middlebury.

Tuesday afternoon a tea was given in her honor at the chapter house. Mrs. Frank Lord and Mrs. Robert Platka poured during the earlier part of the afternoon and Mrs. Power and Mrs. Dana Bray poured for the later part of the tea.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

"Neptune's Paradise" was the official title of the Alpha Chi Omega spring formal held at the house last Friday evening under the direction of Madeline Greaves '41. While gaily-colored fish-crepe paper sea weed and glamorous mermaids adorned the walls, the stairs were festooned with counterfeit moss and the mantelpieces with large seashells and seasonable flowers. Fishing nets dotted with lobsters and sea horses formed temporary partitions and a cheese-cloth boat filled with multi-colored balloons above the dancers' heads. Various signs such as "Don't Feed the Fish" and "Don't Be a Sucker and Fall for His Line" attracted much attention and the favors were obtained by angling for them with hook and line from an old sea chest.

The Catamounts furnished the music while Prof. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Fogg, and Mrs. France were present as chaperones. Ethel Shippee '42 had charge of refreshments and Louise Peters '41, decorations.

Sports Cast

By ITZ

The Founder's Day week-end proved not too unsuccessful for Vermont varsity teams. The baseball and tennis teams started off with a loud bang as they rapped out wins over Princeton and Clarkson, respectively. But they cooled on the next day, the former presenting a 4-0 shutout to the Lord Jeffs and the latter bowing 6-3 to a more powerful St. Lawrence aggregation.

Trackmen Spring Surprise

The surprise of the week-end came from Coach Archie Post's cindermen, who rose to within two points of snatching their first victory from the Colby College track team. Although they were subdued 68-67, there is still much cause for rejoicing. The team took eight firsts which included every first in the weights; Fred Webster ran a 4:44 mile; the team swept the two mile; and Bert Mott came through with another 16 points. They meet Middlebury this Saturday and without strength in the running events prospects do not look too promising. However, we can rest assured that the team will put up a good battle.

Baseball Talk

Thus far the Vermont ball club has successfully defeated two members of the "Big Three" and they will have a crack at the third on Memorial Day. Yale was taken 4-3 in an early season game, and the Princeton club which came to town boasting victories over Fordham, Columbia, Penn and Cornell, was added to the string of Vermont scalps Friday.

The Vermont ball club is a very erratic team. When they're good, they're very good. But there are other times. The hitting in number of hits, is always high. The team doesn't have much trouble putting figures in the hit column, but they do have a tough time hitting with men on the bases. Against Trinity, as against Amherst, they collected seven hits, but in both contests they wound up behind a goose egg. In twelve games the infield has completed fourteen twin killings, and at times they're tight as a drum and pretty snappy. We have a good outfield, good pitching, and the best catcher we've had in years. Maybe it's just the breaks!

The title of "Hard Luck" should probably be shifted from Clarence Akley to Al Shaw. Al has lost both games that he has pitched at Centennial Field, but the winning margins were unearned both times. On the other hand, Akley, who held the Princetonians to six hits, and stopped Mac MacCoy, leading hitter in the eastern intercollegiate league, cold, received excellent support in that tilt.

When the battery of Smith and Akley are operating, base runners will find it unhealthy to wander far from the sacks. Chucking Charlie nabbed his share at second and Clar Akley picked off two men during the Princeton fracas.

Outdoor Sing Sponsored By Outing Club Friday

A spring sing took place on the steps of the Billings Library of the University of Vermont last Friday evening, May 2, at 7.00 o'clock. The sing was sponsored by the University Outing Club. Louis Vichierri '41 was leader. Several such informal campus song gatherings have been held in the last year, and following the usual custom the committee in charge drove up to the location of the sing a platform truck with a piano riding on it and accompaniments for the collegiate carolings were thus forthcoming. Everyone in college was invited by the Outing Club to join in the outdoor sing, and in spite of the cold weather which brought flurries of snowflakes to the campus during the day, a good-sized crowd was expected.

After exercise, nothing is more pleasant than a refreshing pause with ice-cold Coca-Cola. Its taste is delicious; and a welcome, refreshed feeling always follows. So when you pause throughout the day, make it the pause that refreshes with ice-cold Coca-Cola.

Colby Edges Cat Track Team 68-67

Cats Put Up Battle As Mott Garners Two Firsts

Needing four points to win the meet going into the final event of the day, the 220-yard dash, the Colby track team placed second and third in this event to defeat the Vermont trackmen 68 to 67. It was Colby's first win in three starts and Vermont's third straight setback.

Last year's meet between the two teams was won by Vermont and coincidentally by the same score.

Bert Mott, Vermont sprinter, again showed his prowess by winning the 220-yard dash, the 220-yard low hurdles, and by garnering a second in the high hurdles, a tie for second in the high jump, and a third in the broad jump.

Although Vermont held the edge in first places, 8 to 7, it failed to pick up the necessary second and third place points, while Colby won enough 3 and 1 point scores to make up the deficit from first place total points.

Vermont made the only complete sweep when its long distance runners moved out in front and stayed there all the way to win the two-mile event. Charlie Webster took the lead and kept it to come in first and behind him Ernie St. Mary and Frank Livak finished second and third, far ahead of the Colby long distance men.

In addition to the track events, the Catamounts showed additional strength in the field events as Walt Gage won the hammer throw and George Daly the javelin toss, in addition to Harry Parker's two first places.

Varsity Netmen Take Clarkson

The varsity tennis team returned to home port with an impressive 5-2 win over Clarkson at Potsdam, N. Y., while dropping their closing match of the week-end jaunt 6-3 to St. Lawrence University at Canton, N. Y.

At Clarkson, Bill West, Sam Foti, Larry Simpson and Dick Lynch took the singles points, while L. Simpson and Lynch took the doubles match. Capt. Ed. Simpson lost a close match to Hal Englander, outstanding New England intercollegiate player in a hotly contested match. The Vermonters took the match by a 5-2 score.

In the match with St. Lawrence, Sam Foti and Dick Lynch won their singles and Bill West and R. Swift took over Tuthill and Bartlett in the doubles competition. The Catamounts dropped the match by a 6-3 count.

So far this year, Coach Carpenter's charges have a record of three victories in five starts. There are seven games remaining this season for the varsity raqueteers. On Tuesday, May 6, they will meet Union College from Schenectady, N. Y., on the Cat's home court. On Friday, May 9, St. Michael's will drop around to the Vermont courts where they will engage the Catamounts for the first time this season.

Frosh Tennis Team Lose to Strong B. F. A.

The frosh courtmen dropped their initial match of the season to a strong Bellows Free Academy team by a 6-0 score.

Among those who performed for the Kittens were: Cleve Denton, Tom Keighley and Stan Kemler. Vin Manjoney and Johnny Hurst were lost because of the R. O. T. C. Band trip.

Cats Down Princeton 6-2 But Lose To Amherst 4-0 In Week-end Tilts

Akley Subdues Tigers But Sloppy Fielding Affords Lord Jeff Win

When the cry to play ball was sounded last Saturday, an enthusiastic Vermont crowd filled the concrete stands flanking the grandstand, hoping to see the Cats duplicate their previous-day victory. The sun was shining and the fans were present in abundance, but also to the dismay of the Vermont team, so were the Lord Jeffs from Amherst. Back on its heels went the Catamount! The Lord Jeffs had conquered 4 to 0!

Slingerland, the Amherst pitcher, really did sling the ball across the pan. He had a beautiful curve ball and break that nicked the corners to make six Vermont batters bite the dust via this route. With the commencement of the sixth, the Amherst twirler allowed only one hit which went for naught and he faced only twelve batters in the remaining four frames.

On the other hand, Al Shaw struck out seven men, allowed only eight hits, and left only six Amherst men on base. Six Catamount errors contributed to his second successive defeat in as many home appearances. Although he hit one batter, his control was good and only one Amherst man gained a free ticket to first! It seems that the nickname "Hard Luck" will have to be switched to Al instead of Clarence Akley.

The game itself was well played and the Lord Jeffs showed a corking good outfit. The Vermont team did not play as well as they did against Princeton the day before. Randy Sullivan, who has been filling the shoes of injured Dick Healy quite capably, made three errors, one of which was costly.

The Cats had a man on first and third with two gone in the first inning, but big Hank Beauchemin forced Bob Doherty at second to end the short-lived rally. Again in the second, Vermont had a man on third when Randy Sullivan tripled, but Al Shaw struck out for the third out.

Amherst brought two runs across the plate in the third with the help of two Vermont misplays. After Slingerland had flied out, Blood hit a high fly to second base. Randy Sullivan was under it, but tripped over the base as the ball fell into his glove and then rolled out. With Partenheimer up, Blood stole second, and a few seconds later rode home on Norris' single to left. Bob Doherty's peg to home plate was wild and Norris went all the way to third and then came home on Lally's single to center. Kelly, the Lord Jeff captain, struck out to cease hostilities for the time being.

The Cats loaded the bases in their half of the third, as Sysko singled, was forced at second by Spasyk, who advanced to third on the throw in from Doherty's single, the latter going to second and Beauchemin was intentionally passed. Smith bounced to the shortstop Partenheimer for the final out.

Vermont put two men on in the fifth, but they were left helpless. Al Shaw opened the last of the seventh with a tremendous triple over the right fielder's head, but failed to touch second in his hasty flight. To the scorer it was only a long single.

Amherst tallied one run in the eighth and ninth to complete the scoring for the day.

A bleak and somewhat pinching spell swept Centennial Field as the Princeton Tiger and Vermont Catamount prepared to do battle for the first time on a Burlington diamond in the history of the two schools. It was Friday, May 2, but the Tiger, unaccustomed to the Vermont climate, could have taken it for December 2. A light flurry of snow at noon must have shocked the Princetonians beyond measure, for the Cats pounced upon the men of old Nassau to triumph 6-2.

"Hard Luck" Clarence Akley took the opportunity to shake off his newly acquired nickname and subdued his formidable opponents with six hits. It wasn't until the sixth and seventh, being the last two innings of the abbreviated contest (agreed beforehand) that Akley began to weaken a little, but he ended the game by striking out McCarthy, who had obtained two hits during the afternoon.

The 500 fans who disregarded the atmospheric conditions were treated to some fancy ball playing. Vermont made two double plays to make it number 12 in eleven games. Bill Clark, the Princeton coach, was very much impressed with the Cats' infield, especially with Johnny Spasyk's smooth fielding.

Plumer, the lead-off batter for the Tigers, walloped a 3-2 pitch down the right field side lines for a two-base hit to start the game. He then advanced to third with one out, but was left stranded as the next two batters were retired.

In the second and third innings Akley caught over-anxious Princetonians off base to end the frames.

Vermont teed off in the second to score three runs. Hank Beauchemin walked on four straight pitches and went to third on Chucker Smith's double. Hazen Wood received an intentional pass to load the sacks, but George Palmer, the Princeton sophomore pitcher, failed to stop Randy Sullivan's sharp grounder on the next play to upset the intended strategy and Beauchemin scored. Expecting a bunt from the Vermont pitcher, the Princeton infield came in close, but Clarence Akley popped a meek one over the third baseman's head to score two more runs and virtually the ball game. Doherty ended the inning by striking out after the bases were once again full.

In the third Beauchemin singled and went to second on Smith's sacrifice. Wood's grounder went through Stan Pearson, the Tiger second sacker, and Beauchemin scored. With two out in the fourth Frankie Taylor and Bob Doherty singled, and both advanced on the throw in. Hank Beauchemin came through with his second hit to score two runs. At this point Rutter replaced Palmer on the mound.

Princeton broke the shutout in the sixth, when with one out, Akley walked Plumer, who went to third on McCarthy's slashing hit off Beauchemin's glove. Powers grounded to Wood, who threw to the plate but it was not in time to stop Dick Plumer from procuring the first Tiger run. Going into the top half of the seventh, Akley retired the first two but Midgley was safe on Johnny Spasyk's boot. Ritter and Plumer subsequently walked to load the sacks. The Catamount pitcher momentarily lost his fine control and Midgley scampered across the platter on the wild pitch to end the scoring.

Seven innings by agreement.

Engineer Meetings Attended May 2-3

Students and Faculty Hear Research Paper

Several members of the engineering faculty and students of the University of Vermont were absent last week-end attending meetings in Rochester, N. Y., and Boston.

Profs. E. R. McKee, R. O. Buchanan and L. F. Shorey of the department of electrical engineering were in Rochester, where the annual convention of the North Eastern District of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers was held. With them were ten electrical engineering students, including C. P. Domenichini of Readsboro and H. H. Hubbard of St. Albans. Domenichini has been chairman of the University of Vermont student branch of the society during the past year, and Hubbard will serve in the same capacity during the coming year.

At the convention Burton P. Brown, research fellow in electrical engineering, presented a paper entitled "A New Transmitting Antenna for High Definition Television," which is based upon his research work at the University of Vermont during the past two years. The convention program includes technical sessions, inspection trips and some social events.

Attending a similar convention of the Student Branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at Northeastern University in Boston, May 2 and 3, were Prof. H. L. Daasch and members of the senior class in mechanical engineering. One of the seniors, R. G. Ramsdell, Jr., of Rockville Center, N. Y., delivered a paper at the Saturday morning session on "Locomotives—Old and New."

Reggie Childs And Band Have Brief Brilliant History

When Reggie Childs and his orchestra, billed as "The Sweet Band of the Nation playing the Sweetest Music in Creation," comes to U. V. M. to provide soft music for the Junior Prom on Thursday evening, they will come directly from long-term engagements at famous supper clubs and hotels throughout the East, and many broadcasts from coast to coast over the NBC networks.

Featured with this fine orchestra of fifteen pieces are three vocalists, Lucille Doran, Steve Leonard and Paul Carley, besides a male trio, mixed quartet and a fine glee club. Using these combinations as the nucleus of his production numbers, Childs has developed the famous rolling styles of rhythm which have placed his band high in the musical entertainment world.

Reggie Childs has a fine musical background. Born in America and raised in England, he received his early musical training in the conservatories of London and Paris. As a young man he took his violin to Canada and later to New York. After playing in the country's leading dance orchestras, Childs became musical director of the Broadway hit, "Little Jessie James." During the past year he and his orchestra have been creating musical history. Last August 17 Childs opened at the Rustic Cabin, famous supper club just across the Hudson from New York, for a one month's engagement; he remained there for six months, meanwhile establishing and then breaking three different attendance records at this ten-year-old supper club.

Previously, Childs had exercised his penchant for creating dance history by going into New York's famous Hotel Roosevelt for one month, and staying three. Following the Roosevelt engagement the band made a transcontinental theater tour which ended with an engagement at the exclusive San Diego Country Club.

The band is famous for its rolling styles derived from the clarinets. Always soft, smooth and suave, the Childs rhythm beats an imperative invitation to the dance, and is one of the reasons for the band's extraordinary success.

Reggie Childs and his orchestra are under the management of the Music Corporation of America.

Do You Get Your Vitamin C?

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles on food designed to aid self-boarding students in getting healthful, nutritious meals at a minimum cost.)

Many students are not getting the foods they need because they do not know what are the most economical foods to buy and still give them the most food value for the money expended. There are, however, appearing in the market good buys in these foods if the student only knew the food values of these foods.

A good source of vitamin C is needed every day because this vitamin cannot be stored in the body. Vitamin C helps prevent infection, protects the teeth and gums, and is necessary for pep and vitality. To secure the needed amount of vitamin C it would be necessary to take at least one-half cup of grapefruit or orange juice, or one cup of tomato or tomato juice each day. It would take two cups of pineapple juice to furnish the same amount of this vitamin. At the present prices, grapefruit juice is the cheapest source of this vitamin. During the summer months when berries and melons are inexpensive, a large serving of one of these raw foods may be substituted for the grapefruit, tomato, or orange. Prune juice and vegetable juices other than tomato are not good sources of vitamin C, so when they are served a good source of vitamin C should be used also.

Colorful Floats Mark Peerade

Inferno Used by Many as Theme

Yesterday afternoon at four o'clock the varicolored and gaily decorated floats of the sororities and fraternities on the hill opened the gala Junior Week events by joining together in an impressive "peerade." The procession started from the gymnasium and rolled slowly down Main Street then progressed over Church Street and up Pearl Street back to the University campus. The R. O. T. C. Band led the grand parade. The judges, Prof. B. F. Ladd, Prof. W. H. Heicher and Mr. Pappoutsakis, were situated in a stand on the City Hall steps. Each sorority and fraternity chose scenes depicting some subject appropriate to the theme of the Junior Week play.

The Alpha Chis showed Hitler dead on a bier with the devil driving the float and the "world" on the other side, signifying that Hitler might conquer the world but that he couldn't "take it with him." The committee in charge were Marie Lanou '44, Virginia Mitchell '43 and Jean Davison '44. The Alpha Xis cleverly portrayed St. Peter at heaven's gate with his big book and Hitler trying to gain admission with the world under his arm. Peggy-Dean Abbott '42 was in charge of preparing this float. The Tri Delts showed St. Peter on one side of their truck with people coming up from the other side laden with their worldly possession. The committee in charge of the float consisted of June Riddell '42, Harriet Parker '42 and Dorothy Arnault '44.

The Kappa Alpha Thetas depicted a "gruesome" guillotine scene with a line of waiting victims, poles with heads strung

Program Previews Junior Week

To preview Junior Week to the radio audience, Johnny Spasyk '42 and "Whizzer" White '42, co-chairmen of the Junior Week committee, gave concise talks on the U.V.M. Radio Program Tuesday evening, outlining the highlights of this long anticipated weekend emphasizing the Peerade, the Junior play, the fraternity open-house dances and picnics, and the crowning event of all, the Junior Prom.

An interview with Miriam Rubin '41 followed in which the aims and practical values of the Intercollegiate Social Service Conference, held at Boston last summer, were discussed. She recounted a touching story directly related to the principal aim of this conference: that of acquainting students with modern social service work. Miss Rubin is planning to enter the Junior Probation Service following her graduation in June.

The next speaker, Harry Twitchell '43, who has come to America recently from England, told of the progress which is being made by the rugby team. It seems that rugby has been played here for the past ten years although it has not as yet gained University recognition. Phil Eisenwinter '43 rounded out the program with a news summary. The program was enlivened by the recorded music of Benny Goodman and other famous orchestras.

Junior Week Play Draws Large Crowd

Students Cast Exhibits Fine Dramatic Talent

Last night at Southwick, a large audience of students, faculty and guests witnessed the U. V. M. production of "You Can't Take It With You."

The play included a large cast of students, many of whom are well known for their dramatic talents and all of whom showed remarkable ability in this performance.

The plot involves two families of entirely opposite backgrounds, who come together in the crazy atmosphere of the Sycamore home. The rich and haughty Kirby family learn by association with the Sycamore grandfather (the lead which Alfred Amee ably portrayed), that the acquisition of money and material goods count very little when one does not also gain happiness. Through the romance between son Tony and Alice Sycamore, these people, who have had everything in life but fun, observe the lunatic actions of the Sycamores who do everything and anything that occurs to them. As in all good stories, there is a profitable ending. Mr. Kirby on realizing he hasn't really enjoyed his work all these years, follows grandpa's example and never returns to work.

The cast which put in a great deal of effort for the play did a really fine job and made the performance an excellent beginning for the Junior Week festivities.

Seven Girls Initiated

Delta Alpha chapter of Delta Phi Epsilon announces the initiation of seven new members, all of the freshman class, last Monday evening at Southwick. Following the initiation, a banquet was held at the park.

The new members are: Estelle Berkson, Mattapan, Mass.; Anita Berman, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Constance Colodny, Burlington, Vt.; Judith Isaacs, Far Rockaway, N. Y.; Florence Levin, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Cecile Rosen, Hartford, Conn.

Fraternity Picnics On Sunday To Bring A Close To Week-end

Sunday afternoon the final festivities of Junior Week will take fraternity men and their dates into woods and over sand dunes on the annual fraternity picnics.

Sigma Nu will hold its picnic at Harry Parker's camp at Highgate. Parker '42 is in charge.

John Costello '42 announces that Kappa Sigma will go to Oakledge with Lieutenant Schofield and Prof. and Mrs. George Kidder.

Delta Psi plans its picnic at Cedar Beach with Mr. Joseph G. Leeder as chaperon. Wayne Barrows '41 is chairman.

Clark Miller '42 is in charge of Phi Delta Theta's annual steak dinner to be held on the Islands.

Sigma Phi will picnic on Camp Abnaki, according to Philip Eisenwinter '43.

Kappa Phi Kappa Elects Officers

At a special meeting of Kappa Phi Kappa, national honorary education fraternity, Hazen F. Wood '42 was elected president; Melvin H. Hawes '42, vice-president; and Alfred F. Amee '43, secretary-treasurer. Professor Douglass of the Education Department is to continue as faculty advisor.

Plans were made for the annual spring banquet which is to be held next Wednesday evening in Richmond. Commissioner of Education Ralph E. Noble will be the guest speaker, and the newly elected officers will be installed.

Plans were discussed for the annual national convention to be held this year in October. Professor Douglass is one of the national vice-presidents, and it is hoped that Alpha Gamma Chapter of Vermont may be represented.

The Goodrich Classical Club will hold its last meeting of the year Wednesday, May 14, at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Professor Prindle. All members are urged to be present.

Only the Best

A well-known educator recently urged that colleges stress only the best in Americanism. What we all need now, more than ever, is faith in the validity of our essential traditions, he goes on to say. So he concludes, let us not emphasize the seamy side of our past or present if there be such. A nation has a right to be taken at its best. And at first glance the argument looks sound. There is plenty in the American system that merits commendation, there's a lot to be proud of. But we distrust this idea now being so strenuously advanced that because a crisis exists, we must close our eyes to existing evils in our system.

The path to dictatorship should be an easy one to trace by now. Two of the signposts on this path are the suppression of constructive criticism and the fostering of a blind and unquestioning faith in the existent social and political system. That is just what so many people in the United States are urging today. Let us look at America with the rose-colored glasses of unquestioning patriotism, let us see only the best, let us glory in our greatness. We wonder if such people ever read of Hitler's super race, of the irreproachable new order which has brought perfection to Germany? We wonder if they have heard of such men as Mann who were so stupid as to look for weak points in a system which could have no weak points, no seamy side?

It's too bad to find so many people advocating that we cover up our faults and proclaim loudly the perfection of our democracy. We feel sorry for these sincere but unseeing people. They have failed to realize that democracy cannot be perpetuated by forcing a false picture of it upon the people. Crisis or no crisis, tottering world or no tottering world, democracy lives and expands through a realistic appraisal of its strength and weakness backed by a determination to remove those weaknesses. A people alive to the true state of their country is a people prepared to improve their country. A people drugged to an uncritical stupor is a people ready to destroy itself and its country at the call of the first demagogue that comes along. Only out of knowledge and honest reasoning can grow a lasting faith in the principles of democracy.

A Bouquet—To the Play

Last night's performance of "You Can't Take It With You" set a new high in University dramatics. High praise is owing to both the cast and the director responsible for such a polished performance. Packed full of comic situations and so written as to demand unflagging pace, the play is one well assured to tax the abilities of any group. For this reason, the excellent performance last night was a truly memorable one. The hope expressed in this column last Tuesday that dramatics might experience a revival on the campus seems to have been realized. We hope the Dramatic Club and all the other dramatically-minded groups on the campus will continue to maintain the interest of the student body.

The Festival Again

Once again Burlington plays host to the Vermont Music Festival, one of the biggest and colorful of the state-wide events that occur each year in this city. It is interesting to note that the festival, now in its fourteenth year, will feature a chorus of 800 singers, an orchestra of 190 players; two bands which together will total 300 players and about 2,000 other musicians and singers clustered into groups to play or sing before critics and judges. There is no overestimating the value of the festival in promoting an enthusiasm for music among the children of the State. The constructive criticisms offered at the festival form the basis for later improvement. Many students later attend the University and provide excellent material for musical organizations on the campus. We look forward to seeing the festival play an ever greater rôle in the musical life of the State.

Letters From England

Compiled by
DORIS JARECKIE '42 AND JACOB KATZ '44

This is the fourth installment of a series of letters from an English girl to a friend of hers in the United States, which we started in the April 18 issue of the CYNIC.

January 18, 1940

After months of work there came Christmas, but no "peace on earth" with it. Nineteen hundred years ago one person was born who suffered so that the world might be bettered, today people suffer so that His work may be continued.

Dear Mary,

"Your letter was as welcome as always—and it came at a very opportune moment, when I was in the depths of despair having just found out that a week's hard work was a complete flop! Failures are discouraging—and there are so many of them in our line of work: successes are comparatively few and far between: and when we had an outstanding success just before Christmas, the head of my section was so delighted that he threw a party—a punch party for 65 people: we all invited our special friends among the staff. It was the best office party in a long time—certainly the best I ever remember. And, four days were added to our Christmas holiday. . . .

"I went home on the 18th December—Anna was not so lucky: she didn't get off for Christmas. So after a couple of days of frantic shopping, we packed all her presents into a gay suitcase and sent them up here in time for Christmas day—and we all phoned her long-distance too.

"I was busy every minute of the time I was home—at the skating rink, cinemas, parties—groping round in the black-out, sometimes plus fog! I almost forgot about the war: no, that's not true—how could I forget when half my heart is—where? I don't know: somewhere in France, or somewhere in England—I'm not allowed to know—I get letters and notes: but I don't know where he is, or what he's doing, or if he's half-frozen in the trenches in this icy weather: it just leaves a dull ache in me.

"That holiday went so quickly. Suddenly it was Christmas day, and a friend was 'phoning me somewhere round dawn, to get me up for Church! We walked off through a terrific fog—and after Mass stopped on our way back, to get arms full of holly and flowers for Mummy. We really did spend Christmas sincerely: not much 'peace on earth'—but certainly goodwill; this Christmas had to be the real thing, it is the last for so many people. . . ."

March 25, 1940

A ship arrives safely—a people makes peace.

". . . Everyone here woke up one morning to see the headlines announcing the 'Queen Elizabeth's' arrival in New York. It was a complete surprise. The hundreds of people of Clydeside who must have known about it certainly kept the secret well. . . .

". . . I was shocked at the callous attitude of the U. S. to the plight of Finland—and blaming the whole business on us, too. After all, the U. S. egged the Finns on in the first place. That is 15,000 lives lost to no purpose. 15,000 homes disrupted and hearts scarred for life. . . ."

May 20, 1940

Even in the peaceful countryside they cannot forget the war. The fate of Belgium and France foreshadows the future of England. Probabilities in May, 1940—reality three months later.

". . . We are now living in a tiny village called Broughton . . . we have been extremely lucky in finding such a nice place.

"The past fortnight has been crammed so full of action that I am still in a whirl. The war seems to spread and spread and spread like some deadly disease that nothing can arrest. When I think of the way that Holland has been bombarded, and Belgium, and of the aerial attacks that are launched daily on France, my heart sinks to my shoes. Because now there can be no doubt that we shall suffer the same fate. Somehow I had never quite believed that we should endure the agony of air-raids—that we should go into the streets in fear, and have to scurry for shelter; but now—well, it's coming: and it's a terrifying prospect. Up till a month ago, the war hadn't really touched me at all—but now the numbers of men that I have known and liked, who have been killed is growing larger every day—some were on submarines, but mostly they died in Norway—and heaven only knows what toll the fighting in Belgium is going to take. Joyce—I've told you about her—has felt it more horribly than any of us—her fiance, who was in the Royal Air Force, was killed when his plane crashed a few weeks ago. . . .

"A large party of us from the office are planning to go to Stratford-on-Avon next week to see 'Hamlet' at the Memorial Theatre. If we can rope about 26 people in, we will get a motor coach, and leave about six, which will get us there in time for the play at eight—and we shall have supper on the balcony overlooking the river during the first interval—sounds nice, doesn't it? And I am hoping to see 'King Lear' at the Old Vic next time I go home. I really can't imagine 'Lear' acted, at all. I've read the play several times, and the whole thing seems un-actable to me—well, I shall soon see "

"Lindbergh Is Not Another Quisling"

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

I was extremely grieved to find that Mr. Suojanen's views as to the desirability of the Lease-Lend Act have been governed by such petty and unimportant things as national descent and political and economic prejudice. I hope that he will soon realize that all minds do not run in the same channels as his.

Perhaps human rights and freedom have been evolving on the British Isles for seven hundred years, but what bearing has this upon British propaganda which is only too abundant in America at present; and the few newspapers and magazines that have the courage to buck this engulfing wave find themselves bitterly condemned as Reds, Fascists and Nazis. Does the situation in Trona speak convincingly of British "democracy"?

May I ask how Albert Einstein, an American citizen for over six months, could possibly be allowed to enter the Reichstag in Germany and criticize the government? Perhaps F. D. R. will invite Harry Bridges to a meeting of the Senate so that he can criticize our government!

Does "democracy" mean a common bond between only the people of the so-called democratic nations? Or does it mean a common bond between all men, slave or free? Should we merely discard past errors, hates and fears, or should we analyze them and get to the bottom of this mess?

Perhaps "isolationism" should be the path for America. Borah, Johnson and Lodge were no fools when they refused to sign the unjust Versailles Treaty. Long ago John Adams made a statement which should be foremost in the minds of all today, "Our business with Europe, and theirs with us, is commerce, not politics, much less war; America has been the sport of European wars and politics long enough!"

Democracy may be the "stuff of life," but will it build a bigger and better race in America by hurling us into a dark abyss? Will it build up our nation by slaughtering our youth? Will greatness instilled into the souls of a million graves bring back our men? Should we not save America for democracy before we attempt to save the world? And if we do plunge headlong into this present world conflict, will we emerge with freedom, honor, tradition, culture, and all the things we hold sacred?

It was a lesson in geography to read that America constitutes fifty-six one-hundredths percent of the world. It was a lesson in history to find that Spartacus died fighting for his freedom. It was a lesson in logic to find that Fritz Thyssen, a man who has sacrificed everything that he cherished and possessed for first his country's freedom and later his religious and political freedom, is "wheedling in slavery."

If a political platform is something as vague as Thorne Smith's elusive ectoplasm, can it be called "democratic"? Is a man who cannot live up to his word fit to hold any political office? Is this "democracy" or is this "deception"?

To presuppose an invasion of America, Mr. Suojanen, we must first presuppose much more:

1. That Hitler invades the British Isles;
2. That he wipes out the British navy;
3. That he completely conquers Europe;
4. That once he has conquered Europe, he can hold her under complete domination, and that there will be no internal revolution;
5. That he wants to invade America;
6. That he can destroy or "bottle up" our fleet;
7. That he could successfully transport troops and mechanized equipment enough to American soil;
8. That he could then conquer an army as big and strong (if not stronger) than his own—an army fighting on their own soil for their lives, liberty and property.

Anne Lindbergh's "Wave of the Future" referred, Mr. Suojanen, to democracy. Must we dodge democracy? What shall we turn to—Nazism, Fascism, Communism or Charles Chaplin?

If you must quibble over Hitler's ancestry, Mr. Suojanen, I should be delighted to add that Hitler's father, Alois Hitler, was the bastard son of Maria Anna Schicklgruber. Until 1877 he bore the name of Alois Schicklgruber, when he legally changed it to Hitler. Adolf was the son of Alois' third wife, and is commonly referred to in an insulting way as "Herr Schicklgruber."

Now that Lindbergh has resigned from the U. S. Air Corps and ranks no longer as a colonel in the army, perhaps you will change your mind, Mr. Suojanen. Since he is no longer of the same rank as Quisling (and all other traitorous (?) colonels in the world), may we suppose that we have no further worries from those quarters? Lindbergh is no man to be called the "Quisling of America," Mr. Suojanen.

Peerade Begins Week-end Festivities

n them, and a large basket filled with the bodies of people who had lost their head—"You Can't Take It With You!" Mary J. Hammond '41 was chairman for planning the float and all the girls in the sorority cooperated in putting it together. The Pi Phis based their float on a clever interpretation of the world's present political situations, signifying that material things can't be taken with you. Janet Hackwell '43 and Nancy Goodwin '42 were in charge. The Sigma Gammas humorously showed a gang of little "niggers" engaged in a crap game with an angel up above looking down. Ethelyn Chaffee '42 and Barbara Blodgett '41 headed the committee in charge of the float.

The Sigma Nu fraternity had two scenes on their float; the first depicted the carefree life of a college student and the second showed the world of strife and work. A young man was shown stepping through a mirror from the first scene to the second, leaving many things behind him as he stepped out into the life of the wide, wide world. The men in charge of this float were Bob Bloomer '44, Ed Boyden '44, Norm Boyden '42, Don Steenburn '44 and Les Brown '43.

The Alpha Tau Omega float depicted Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin attempting to pull down the American flag with ropes. Below the national flag was a banner with the word "Democracy" on it. Uncle Sam was also shown in the scene. Louis Rozek '42 and Alexander Warden '43 were in charge. The Phi Delts portrayed various people trying to do the impossible, taking something with them. The committee for planning the float consisted of Bob Lockwood '44, Jack Williams '44, Bill Potter '42 and Bill Daniels '41. The Sigma Phis showed a patriotic setting with two U. S. soldiers on top of a mound, one holding the American flag and the other an army rifle. Soldiers of the various obnoxious foreign countries are seen approaching the mound.

Ed Blakely '43 was chairman of the float committee which consisted of Jack Burgess '42 and Norm Tucker '42.

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity depicted two scenes on their well-decorated truck. In the first, a fellow is reaching out from his coffin toward a pot of gold and an angel above is restraining him; in the second, a draftee—approaching a big army sergeant who silently waits for him. The committee in charge of the float consisted of J. R. Massucco '41, chairman, Bill Neal '43 and Bill Keough '44.

The Kappa Sigs' Peerade float had for its theme a picture of a young fellow leaving his office and a good job—and kissing his girl good-bye—to go into the arms of a waiting army sergeant. "Whizzer" White '42 and John Costello '42 were in charge of plans for this float.

The Delta Psis revealed several views of the happy life of the college student and skilfully indicated that all of his pleasures could not be taken with him out into life. Frank Swift '43, Bob Davis '41, Charles P. Smith, III '44 and Ed Corliss '42 composed the committee. The Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity's float dealt with the international situation. I. Goodman '41 was chairman of a committee consisting of S. Firestone '41, H. Robinson '43 and A. Glazin '44. The Phi Sigs showed a huge carnival scene with tents, platforms and ticket booth. Barkers, dancers, clowns, pop corn venders and the typical surging crowd were all present. A pair of clowns ran along beside the truck and two mounted clowns rode in front of the float.

Cat Baseballers Engage Colby And Middlebury Teams

Akley and Shaw to Toe the Slab With Carlson in Reserve

Another busy week-end is on hand for the Catamount baseballers when they engage Colby and Middlebury respectively on Friday and Saturday.

The Green and Gold have been up and down all year, sometimes looking like champions and at other times looking like sandlotters. The Princeton triumph was a feather in their cap, especially since Princeton conquered the Dartmouth Indians on the following day. The Amherst loss is excusable inasmuch as Amherst licked Holy Cross a few days afterward.

The boys had but two good practice sessions this week as preparation due to a junior reading test on Tuesday and a freshman baseball game on Wednsday. At the time of writing it looked as though rain may cut into their second practice session. The pitchers will be getting plenty of rest, probably too much, and the infielders and hitters may lose their eyes for the ball.

The lineup will be the same as Coach Gardner has started in the last two ball games. The infield will consist of Hank Beauchemin, Johnny Spasyk, Randy Sullivan and Hazen Wood; in the outfield will be Capt. Frank Taylor, Nails Doherty and Sig Sysko. Charlie Smith will do the receiving and either Al Shaw or Clarence Akley will be on hand to throw them up. Bob Carlson has returned to uniform this week and he may see some action this week-end, but it is believed that Coach Gardner will save him for Norwich on the following week.

Colby has not had a great deal of luck in the baseball wars this season. They have potentially a good ball club capable of playing good baseball, a fact that was proven by their performance against Northeastern. A number of names familiar to fans in this sector because of the Colby football team which appeared here this fall, are in the lineup. Among those are Daggett and LaFleur. Slattery is a very dangerous man with the willow and is their most potent slugger.

Middlebury has not enjoyed a successful season to date, but behind their outstanding pitcher Van Gaasbeck they are likely to turn in a good exhibition. St. Michael's just nosed out Middlebury Wednesday by a score of 9 to 7.

The Friday game will start at four o'clock and the Saturday contest at two-thirty.

Powerful Middlebury Tracksters at U. V. M.

Tomorrow, a well balanced Middlebury track team invades Centennial Field to match strides with Coach Archie Post's stalwarts. The Cats have dropped three meets so far, but have improved considerably since the Williams encounter. On the other hand, the Panthers have been very impressive in their three contests.

The Catamounts have demonstrated a great deal of strength in the field events, but they still lack sufficient dashmen to earn places. It's the same old story that Coach Post has to contend with. From the 100-yard dash to the half mile, Vermont has been too weak to run up an adequate score.

TEPS Blast Out 9-8 Win Over Independents

On May 5, Tau Epsilon Phi won their game with the Independents 9-8. Up to the last of the fifth inning it looked as if the winning streak of Tau Epsilon Phi would be broken. They had three runs to their opponents' eight runs. Man after man got up and to the amazement of all who thought the game was sewed up, saw the runs pile up. Finally it was 7-8 and when Davidoff, one of the TEP stars came to bat, there were two men on base. With the ease of a champion, he hit one over the second baseman's head and brought in the two runs which spelled victory for Tau Epsilon Phi.

The ATO vs. Delta Psi game was also very good. The first two innings no score was made by either team. By the third the ATO started to weaken and the score was tied one to one. In the next two innings the margin was widened and the Delta Psi won their game over the Alpha Tau Omega 3-1.

Rugby At U. V. M. Becoming Popular

Four years ago rugby was introduced in an experimental way to Vermont. Since then, especially in the last two years, the sport has gradually become more popular under the able and enthusiastic guidance of Hervey Macomber, Jr., and Fred Fayette. This year the team has received further invaluable help from Fred Smith, who has played for Princeton and Harvard.

The squad is made up around a nucleus of people who have taken up this sport for their spring "elective" as a last resort. The rest of the squad consists of curious athletes and people who want to keep "in training." Every year the fundamentals of the game have to be taught anew, and as was seen both in last year's match down at Harvard and this year's against the same people up here, the Vermont team is still learning at the expense of five or six penalties per game.

But last year and this have seen great strides in rugby at U. V. M. Last year Vermont was admitted into the Eastern Rugby Union of the V. S. A., thus giving the college an opportunity to play Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell and Long Island University, as well as one or two clubs in Boston and New York.

The team's first official game was played last spring against the Harvard junior varsity at Cambridge, with the Crimson being victorious 6-3. Handicapped by blinding rain and a driving wind, plus their own inexperience, the Green and Gold nevertheless fought gamely to the end.

This year, bolstered by the appearance of several football players at practice, the squad appeared to be somewhat superior to that of last year. This fact was further evinced when the Cats defeated the Harvard JV's this time 6-0, in a contest played at Centennial Field. Hal Mayforth, with a neat exhibition of broken field running, scored both the Vermont tries. A "try" corresponds to a touchdown and counts three points. Peculiarly enough, the conversion counts two points instead of one, making a total of five points, which is called a "goal."

A return game with Harvard is scheduled for May 17 at Harvard, and Harry Twitchell, who has done a masterful job of directing the sport here, has announced tentative plans for a match with the Boston Rugby Club in the next week or two.

Rev. Treat Conducts

The Rev. Edward Treat of Waterbury conducted an inspiring chapel service in which he pointed out that in this world of chaos men like H. K. Jennings, a humble Y.M.C.A. worker in Turkey, with faith in themselves and in God can change history.

Reverend Treat stated that people who "turn their faces home to the instant need of things" are proof of good in the midst of this kind of world.

Frosh Beat Clark School In 16-11 Win

Craig Enters Game in Third and Goes Route

The Kittens shellacked Clark School's excuse for a baseball team to the tune of 16-11, in one of the poorest exhibitions of the national pastime ever held at Centennial.

For the first two innings fairly decent ball was played by both sides, but in the third frame the Kittens' pitching gave out, and after that a sad time was had by all.

To relieve the monotony, Clark had a pitcher playing right field, a catcher hurling and a second baseman behind the plate. The net result of this belated house-cleaning was the loss of the sizeable lead they had garnered earlier in the game. Carl Urie was knocked out of the box by Clark early in the game, and was followed by Ed Craig who went the distance and was credited with the win.

Early in the comic opera the frosh fell behind, only to score 16 runs from the fourth round on.

By some amazing happenstance, the Kittens scored 14 runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth on six puny singles. After this scoring flurry, they scored another brace in the seventh just for good luck.

There have been complaints of the confliction of the Men's Faculty Club meeting, which was held Thursday evening, May 8, with Junior Week play "You Can't Take It With You." The guests of the Faculty Club last night were Gov. and Mrs. William H. Wills. The faculty wishes to point out that the date of the meeting was fixed by the Governor, not the faculty, hence the confliction.

Food Problem To Be Discussed Mon.

Clinton M. Brown of Hoover Committee Talks

Is there any way in which food can be provided for the hungry populations in the small countries of Europe, such as Belgium, Norway, and Holland, without prolonging the war or contributing to the strength of the Axis nations? On Monday, May 12, at 8 p.m., in the City Hall Auditorium, Mr. Clinton M. Brown of New York City will deal with this question when he speaks on the proposals for sending food to the needy democracies of Europe. Mr. Brown is coming to Burlington as a spokesman for the Committee on Food for the Small Democracies, better known as the "Hoover Committee," because one of its leaders is Herbert Hoover.

A group of prominent local citizens believe that conditions in Europe warrant the adoption of some plan to send relief, and therefore sponsor the May 12 meeting. These people do not necessarily support the Hoover proposals as such, but believe the people in Burlington should be informed about them. Mr. Brown is well equipped to bring this information. From 1916-1919 he was in Belgium and northern France, helping to administer relief under Herbert Hoover's direction, except for a period when he served in the American army in France. From 1919-1939 he has lived in Antwerp, Belgium, where he has been in international grain and transport business; and he has traveled widely throughout Europe.

Mr. A. T. Morrill is chairman of the local sponsoring committee which includes Prof. George Dykhuizen, Dr. C. J. Speas, Miss Mary Jean Simpson, Mrs. George Ordway, Rev. G. E. Robbins, Mrs. F. D. Carpenter, Mrs. William Coulman, Mrs. Eliot Backup, Miss Adelaide Hartpence, Prof. Paul Moody, Mrs. H. D. Rolfe, Rev. Hugh J. Williams, Mrs. S. Cannon, Mr. Frederick Hall, Mrs. E. O. Herreid, Rev. Max H. Webster and Rev. Skillman Myers.

The chairman of Monday night's meeting will be Professor Dykhuizen. The address will be followed by a forum and question period, at which time critics of the plan are invited to present their objections or suggestions.

R.O.T.C. Military Inspection May 21st

The annual Federal Inspection of the R. O. T. C. will take place on Wednesday, May 21. The program will be inaugurated by a review of the entire battalion and band under the command of John S. Greene, battalion major, at 8:30, Wednesday morning.

The inspecting officer is Lieutenant Colonel William C. Collier from the First Corps Area Headquarters in Boston, Mass.

The remainder of Wednesday morning will be spent in drills and tests based on studies of the year in Military Science. Wednesday afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 there will be an inspection of property, storerooms and records.

Wednesday evening there will be competitive drills and annual award of medals, trophies and prizes in the cage of the gymnasium from 8:00 to 10:00. This year there will be no fraternity drill squad. In its place there will be a special Sophomore and Freshman exhibition of drill and combat work. The Juniors will give an exhibition of handling advanced weapons, such as machine guns, trench mortars and 37 mm. guns.

These exhibitions will give evidence of the fact that besides regular drill work, practical combat work is done. The Freshmen and Sophomores have two hours a week class work, studying practical application of combat studies. The Juniors and Seniors have this practical application of combat studies every morning.

Notice to Students Planning to Enter Medical College Next Year

Due to the many demands made on optical companies by the defense program, students expecting to enter Medical College next year would do well to avail themselves of a microscope at their earliest possible opportunity. Delivery dates after order are already becoming indefinite and there is a possibility that microscopes will be hard to obtain.

Lilac Day Will Be Held On May 23

Staff and Sandal to Present Unique Program

Lilac Day this year is planned for May 23 at Southwick, in the continuance of a custom first started by Dean Pearl Wasson in 1921. She hoped that a lilac hedge might be planted in order to beautify the lovely Redstone campus, and in later years that it might become surrounded with tradition as is the commencement ivy on the walls of the library.

It was to be a day of festival and beauty such as other colleges had enjoyed in welcoming spring. The first lilacs were planted on the site of Southwick, but with the new building taking that place, the lilacs were then planted out behind Redstone.

At the second celebration of this day of rejoicing Dean Wasson was no longer here, so the Akraia Chapter of Mortar Board had charge of the celebration, and it was dedicated to her memory.

A pageant of some form or other is given in accordance with the feeling of the day, and a Queen is elected to rule over the lilacs. The custom of electing a queen did not originate with Lilac Day but has been added to it. In fact Lilac Day shows a growth of customs, and as a tradition will always be remembered by the girls of the University of Vermont.

Cats Score Double Win Over Middlebury

Junior Prom Uses Undersea Motive

Reggie Childs and His Orchestra Featured

Amidst fish and seahorses and marine life of all description, well over a hundred couples danced to the "rolling rhythms" of Reggie Childs and his orchestra last Friday night at the annual Junior Prom. The expertly decorated gym was transformed into a portion of the undersea kingdom with brightly colored streamers and fish of all sizes and colors decorating the tables and walls. The entrance to the gym was in the form of a whale's mouth while a huge octopus occupied the position behind the orchestra which was greatly enjoyed by all prom-goers. Favors consisted of metal programs which could be converted into bracelets with the seal of the University.

Chairmen of the Prom were Catherine Peterson and J. A. White; decorations, Cathryn Grier and C. G. Miller; publicity, Joanna Metcalf, assisted by M. J. Reynolds; programs, Jean Hall; floor committee chairman, R. L. Carlson; chairman of the electricity committee, W. L. Potter; refreshments, Frances Abel; and finances, C. V. Akley and F. P. Logan. Prof. and Mrs. G. V. Kidder were present as chaperones.

Key And Serpent Holds Initiation

Honorary Society Gives Banquet for New Men

Last Tuesday, May 6, initiation of the newly elected members of the Key and Serpent honorary society took place, the initiates being Edwin Blakely '43, Joseph Corbett '43, Robert Doherty '43, Milton Kaufman '43, George Little Jr., '43, Berram Mott '43, Warren Nestler '43 and Harold Parker '43. At 5.30 the new men, outfitted in tails, hats and canes, met at the Kappa Sigma house. The group then merrily set out, directed traffic at various corners, escorted young ladies across the streets, and performed other similar "tasks." Separate little bands then migrated to the various girls' dormitories where they entertained the co-eds during the dinner hour. The versatile fellows danced or sang at any maiden's request. About 6.45 the group again assembled and marched down to the corner of Main and Church Streets where they cheerfully rendered a few musical selections to a gathering crowd of admirers. The formally-dressed young men next proceeded to the Hotel Vermont where they were given an enjoyable banquet. Professor Tupper, who is principally responsible for the first appearance of the Key and Serpent Society back in 1908 and who has always been a constant counselor and friend since its beginning, spoke to the new members, welcoming them and offering them a few choice words of wise advice. Clarence V. Akley '42 and John J. White '42, this year's presidents of the Society for the first and second semesters, respectively, also spoke. After the banquet the gentlemen again "set out." They serenaded Sanders Hall and at a request entered and performed a mock marriage there, to the great enjoyment of the young women. After several other excursions the band adjourned to the Kappa Sigma house where a meeting was held among the new members. Joseph Corbett '43 was elected the society's next president; Warren Nestler '43, vice-president; Edwin Blakely '43, secretary; and Harold Parker '43, treasurer.

Lilac Day, May 24; A Pageant In Dance

Eighty Girls From All Classes to Participate

Lilac time is here! The colorful spring pageant, Lilac Day, will be held at Southwick on Saturday, May 24, at 8.00 o'clock. This is a fine tradition in honor of the memory of Dean Pearl Wasson who started Lilac Day in 1921.

This year there will be dances from primitive to modern times to show the development of dancing.

Many weeks of practicing have gone into this Lilac Day pageant. Eighty girls from all the classes are being directed by Miss Blenda Larson. You will see how contagious dancing is and how it holds peoples together by the skillful way in which the pageant has been worked out.

Tickets may be gotten from any Staff and Sandal member for twenty-five cents. Helen Witham '42 is chairman of the pageant and these juniors are working with her: Nancy Goodwin, publicity; Miriam Fiske, decorations; Barbara Butterfield, queen and court; Judy Perry, programs; Harriet Nelson, tickets; Barbara Gallagher and Louise Davis, costumes.

The Dial of Brattleboro High School and the Green Horn of Springfield High School both repeat as winners among the larger schools of the State in the annual editorial contest conducted by the University of Vermont. The Dial wins as having the best literary publication in the opinion of the judges and the Green Horn as having the best news publication. Each is entitled to a scholarship of $175 to the University. Another repeater is the Mirror of Wilmington High School, which captured first place among the smaller schools and a $125 scholarship.

Scoring in first place among the medium-sized schools was the R. H. S. Chips of Richmond High School, which is awarded a $150 scholarship. The Poultney Polonius of Poultney High School received honorable mention in this class, and among the small school publications the Campus Yankee of Canaan High School received honorable mention.

A scholarship of $100 for the state publication showing the most improvement went to the Burlington High School Register for its smart handling of news and picture work, headlining and makeup, making it one of the most readable publications of the State.

To the Sentinel of Spaulding High School, Barre, goes a $100 scholarship for some outstanding features, the award being made for the quality and appropriateness of the publication's editorial page.

The judges, who were Phillips D. Carleton, Elliott T. Merrick and Leon W. Dean of the English department of the University, made favorable comment on the contribution to the State's sesquicentennial observance made by several of the publications.

Akley Pitches Two-Hitter As Nine Wins 6-0; Bert Mott Sets New State Record in High Hurdles As Tracksters Triumph 74½-60½

Not satisfied with the triumph in the track meet over Middlebury, the Catamount baseball club darkened the horizon even more for the Panther aggregation by shutting out the visitors 6-0. It was Clarence Akley all the way for Vermont, and he gave the Junior Week spectators a masterful pitching performance. For seven and two-third innings he had his rivals baffled with his superb twirling. But Steve Arnold, the Panther backstop, broke the ice with two gone in the seventh to gain the first hit of the day.

In allowing two hits, Akley fanned nine men and issued seven walks. Not one Middlebury man went beyond second until, with two gone in the ninth, Harry Van Gaasbeck, the Panther twirler, lined a hit to right field and advanced all the way to third when Sig Sysko bobbled the ball.

Van Gaasbeck had two bad innings, the first and third, when the Cats scored all their runs, but he settled down in the later stages of the game and only two Vermont men reached third after that.

Sig Sysko started the Catamount rampage by obtaining a walk in the first inning. A driving double in left field by Johnny Spasyk put Sysko on third. Frankie Taylor sent Sysko scampering home and Spasyk to second on a roller to the second baseman. Frankie was out but Bob Doherty scored Spasyk by singling to center. Big Hank Beauchemin sent Bob home with the third run on a beautiful triple to right center.

With only one gone Hank was out at the plate on an attempted squeeze play, but Vermont proceeded to fill the sacks once again. Akley finally ended the inning by striking out.

The Panther hurler was in trouble in the third when, after two outs, Doherty, who was safe on an error, crossed the

Students Present Musical Pageant

One of the largest crowds ever assembled in the Memorial Auditorium witnessed the final concert of the fourteenth annual Music Festival. Thirty-four hundred students were in Burlington during the past week-end to present this musical extravaganza.

The concerts, nine in all, were very well attended and appreciated. Music of good taste and of excellent caliber was one of the outstanding characteristics of the concerts. Probably the most difficult number was "The Procession of the Mastersingers" by Wagner, which was played Saturday evening by the All-State Orchestra. It moved the audience to prolonged applause by its beauty and power. To have so completely mastered such a difficult number is a compliment to the high school musicians of Vermont. The very large All-State Chorus was encored in one of its more varied numbers, "Mexican Serenade." High point from the audience standpoint of Friday evening's All-State Band concert was the side-splitting treatment given "The Rampage of the Old Grey Mare." As if the music weren't enough to convulse the audience, the old mare appeared "herself" and took the house down by "her" antics.

Saturday morning's parade was excellent. A great deal of improvement had been shown by the marching groups. Literally ablaze with color, it was witnessed by crowds the entire length of march.

The critic, Dr. Harry R. Wilson of Columbia University, was more than enthusiastic in his praise of the festival. His main points of criticism were tactfully presented and very much to the point. Expressing himself clearly, he stated that

It couldn't be done, but they did it! Saturday afternoon, at Centennial Field, Coach Archie Post's miracle-men completely subdued one of the greatest Middlebury track teams in years by the score of 74½ to 60½.

The first event of the day forecasted what was in store for the Panthers. U. V. M.'s Bert Mott set a new state record of 15.8 seconds in this event, the 120 high hurdles. After three hurdles had been topped, Bert was trailing Middlebury's Rasmussen by four yards, but finally overtook him to win going away. Wood of Middlebury was third.

Middlebury came back to tie the score at 9-all when Whitlin won the shotput with a toss of 42 feet ¾ inch. Zan Warden of U. V. M. was second at 41 feet 9¼ inches, and Frankie Taylor was third. U. V. M.'s foe then swept the 100-yard dash with Hicks, Middlebury's high scorer for the day, winning in 10.1 seconds. For runner-up honors, Rasmussen and Hollister edged out Vermont's Red Goss.

Webster Wins Mile

U. V. M. returned the compliment when Becker and Grosvenor tied for first place in the high jump, both men leaping 5 feet 7 inches. Mott of U. V. M. and Byington of Middlebury tied for third. Fred Webster won the mile run in 4:46. Middlebury's Stebbins almost caught him in the last 200 yards. Norm Stoddard of Vermont was a fair third.

The 440 was all Middlebury's. Butler, who finished in 50.5 seconds, was six yards ahead of his teammates, Hollister and Gale. U. V. M.'s Ed O'Connell, who had kept up with the leaders for half of the race, ended far behind in fourth place.

Vermont swept the pole vault. O'Connell, Pratt and Vreeland were in a triple tie for first, all vaulting 10 feet 6 inches. The latter two men afterward passed 11 feet, but try as they did, they could not break the record.

Middlebury came within one point of tying the Cats when Parker of the Pan-

Still Looking

As an interesting footnote to the present world situation and as a highly significant comment on the attitude of youth in this country toward the war, the Atlantic recently published an article by a former Marxist. Like so many other young men and women of the post-war generation, the author saw in the Marxist conception of history and society a way out of the problems of a capitalist society. This theory found fault with existing conditions and could give reasons and causes for those faults. It was a reassuring faith because it answered all questions for the believer and left no room for doubt.

But as time went on there came a gradual disillusionment, a growing understanding that many of the principles in the solid-looking edifice of Marxism were not so sound. Capitalist society was still very imperfect but was Marxism the way out?

But as those thousands lost their fondly cherished dreams of a new order, they began to cast about for a new faith. They began to look for a set of principles which could guide them through the shifting currents of a world plunging toward a new war. They had been driven to Communism, to Marxism, to revolutionary socialism because they looked about them and saw that despite the lessons learned by the first World War, society was still condoning evils that one generation had died trying to eradicate. Youth was eager to believe in democracy—millions of war dead testify to that. Now that the war was over democracy should have shown a new generation of youths that it was prepared to continue working for progress.

Then the fun began—armies pouring into Russia on an international "red hunt"; the League of Nations becoming the pawn of a couple of nations; Germany rearming with the blessings of the international bankers; Mussolini riding to power and quote: "there was the need of a strong government in Italy"—"Mussolini has undoubtedly been a good influence for the Italian people"; China overrun by Japan and to quote one committee of investigation—"we can find no evidence of an armed conflict in China"; Spain fighting the first battle of World War number two and quote—"they are all Reds down there and the more Reds killed the better"—"the issues are too confused in Spain to permit us to act." Then a little later the issues were very clear—"Poland, that gallant democracy" where the peasants lived under Medieval conditions, and "noble little Finland" whose government came to power in a bath of blood.

Along with the confusing shifting of ideals in world politics went depression and disorder at home. Confronted with breadlines, while wheat rotted in the granaries; confronted with the most ironical paradox of all times—"we starve because we have too much"—is it any wonder that youth went searching for a philosophy which offered them something more than platitudes grown odious because they lacked concrete evidences of good faith on the part of the government?

This is no defense, no attempt to whitewash any group—it is a statement of a process. It is a process to be studied carefully by a nation on the brink of war. Democracy has never been made clear to all these youths searching for a faith to be loyal to. Democracy has been pro-Fascist one minute, anti-Fascist the next. The so-called anti-Fascism of many of our patriots today is an anti-Fascism that goes only skin deep. Anti-Fascism with democratic governments in the past has been that type of anti-Fascism which becomes manifest only when it begins to affect them directly. And that doesn't help to create a faith in people because they demand something more human and permanent. They demand a democracy which feels for liberty no matter where it is menaced and a democracy that loudly condemns tyranny no matter whom it hits. Give your people that assurance and you won't have to bull-doze them into a war with propaganda and brass bands. They'll know "for whom the bell tolls."

"A Moral Man Must Defend Freedom"

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

There are many points in Mr. McNamara's last letter which could be refuted and I expect that you will get many letters from the student body as an answer to his statements, so I will limit myself to one point only.

I am indebted for some of the thoughts expressed here to an article I read some time ago in The Nation.

Mr. McNamara speaks always of "slaughtering our youth . . . . millions of graves . . . . saving America first" . . . . etc. Mr. McNamara thinks, therefore, that we can escape moral responsibilities by averting our eyes from the ashes of innocent people's homes and by stopping our ears against the roar of battle. But a moral man does not bargain with thugs and murderers for his personal safety. The man of moral integrity does not consider the personal consequences of what he says and does when his brothers are starved, tortured and killed. If someone tries to violate the code by which we live we should correct them without contemplating what might happen to us. Mr. McNamara said that he holds freedom sacred and still he does not mind seeing it destroyed in one country after another. He said that he holds culture sacred and still he does not mind its destruction wherever the Nazi flag waves. He said that he holds honor sacred and still he asks us not to do anything when we see those nations perish who tried to live up to the same ideals we cherish.

I am afraid that I cannot agree with Mr. McNamara. Faced with eight years of barbaric violence which has been raging all over the world, driving millions into exile, sentencing whole populations to slavery at the point of a rifle, murdering men, women and children in convulsions of terror, crushing the truth that we have labored for centuries to lift out of darkness, I find only one way for us to go. We have to help all the free nations as far as we can and with them build up a new world.

Mr. McNamara said that we should take as a lesson that "Spartacus died fighting for his freedom." But let us remember that it was a freedom he never had and tried to get, that it was later won because men like him never gave up. If people would have taken Mr. McNamara's "lesson in history," we would not have had a fight for American independence or a French Revolution. Fritz Thyssen did not "sacrifice everything that he cherished and possessed for his country's freedom." Mr. Thyssen was one of the men who financed Hitler so that he could get into power. (Nobody could call that "a sacrifice for his country's freedom.")

Mr. McNamara says himself that "democracy means a common bond between all men and if he excludes the Nazis, as I hope he does, all of these "all men" ask us now for help. Yes, there is a common bond and if we hold our honor sacred, we will defend freedom wherever it is attacked.

Book Notes

By JULIA FLETCHER '44

The following books reviewed in this column may be found either in the Billings Library or in the University Book-Store, or in both.

Our Family

By ADET and ANOR LIN

You all know Lin Yutang, Chinese author, and will be very pleased and surprised to hear about this book written by his daughters. The three daughters, aged sixteen, thirteen and eight, started writing as a sort of exercise in composition but soon they progressed further. This book is the humorous and candid inside view of the Yutang family and their travels, as only young members of a family can give them. Their patriotic remembrances of China, heightened by Japanese invasion, are very moving.

A Smattering of Ignorance

By OSCAR LEVANT

Six monologues make up this book—six monologues disguised as essays dealing with the qualities and vanities of some of the great contemporary conductors. George Gershwin is an important character; the life, opinions and silences of Harpo Marx come in here too, but the whole book is really a collection of the best witty, self-deprecatory lines of Oscar Levant. A profound musical knowledge as well as an incorrigible sense of humor help him give what turns out to be a sound, authoritative picture of musical America.

Reaching for the Stars

By NORA WALN

Nora Waln, a Quaker, interprets in this book, to the best of her ability, the feelings of the German people. With her musician husband, Nora Waln lived for four years, between 1934 and 1938, in Germany, in the midst of the German people. The author gives a true picture of Germany, of the terrible persecution begun under the Hitler regime, and tries to interpret the feelings of the apparently dead "old Germany."

The A.B.C. Murders

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

If you like murder mysteries, and especially surprising ones, don't miss this thrilling tale of stealth and killing. The police are sure they have spotted the criminal, and you are, too, when; bingo! out comes Hercules Poirot with the solution and the true murderer.

The Circular Staircase

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Mary Roberts Rinehart comes forth with a detective fiction novel with one of the most absorbing plots yet seen. She is said to have made the most significant advance in American crime novels since Edgar Allen Poe. In this fascinating book, in which a man is found murdered at the foot of the staircase in his country home, there are no clues to point the way to the killer. The finger of suspicion points to as many characters as there are in the book, before the mystery is at last solved. If you like suspense and thrills, don't fail to read this one.

Music Festival

he felt that so much attention had been paid to the technique of the music that the young musicians had failed to grasp the meaning of the music as a whole. For this he suggested the development of a more flowing quality to be introduced into the music. He also discussed the tone quality of the singing and suggested to the choristers that they open their mouths wider.

Governor Wills pointed out the significance of the teamwork which was being shown by the musicians in the presence of our national defense drive. Bringing out the quality of voluntary participation, he pointed out this as one of the outstanding qualities of a democracy such as ours.

Sports Cast

By ITZ

Saturday was a great day for the Catamount. He clawed the Panther on the diamond and chased him from the cinders. The trackmen presented Coach Archie Post with his third consecutive state title, and the diamond lads put on an exhibition of heads-up baseball of which Coach Larry Gardner can be proud. Yes, it was a great day for the wearers of the green and gold!

Heads Up

As was remarked in a previous column, when the Cats are good they are very good. They took the field Friday against the Colby lads, played tight ball behind the portside slants of Roy Alberghini and beat out a 7-3 victory. Again on Saturday, after a hectic Junior Prom, the Vermont ball club played with their heads up, and shooed the Panther, bearing the brunt of a 6-0 shutout, back to Middlebury.

Here's baseball! Johnny Spasyk watched the man who guarded the hot corner for the opposition come in close after the pitch as if to field an intentional bunt, so Johnny faked a bunt and then belted a liner right through the little man who wasn't there. Bob Doherty, standing on first base, lit out for second after the catcher made a put out on a foul fly. He caught the Middlebury backstop flatfooted.

Sully, too, paid attention to the Panther third sacker and his habit of coming in to field bunts, and when Akley bunted with him on first, Sully went right on and into third in a cloud of dust. The first baseman was caught off his guard, and the third baseman, well the little man just wasn't there—on time.

Heroes All

The Vermont team has perked up in their last two games to look like all that they were cracked up to be. Every man on the team is playing ball! Space does not permit us to throw bouquets at all who deserve them, but we would like to throw a few. Clar Akley did justice to the team that backed him up as he starved the Panther into submission with two measly hits. Roy Alberghini showed Larry that he had another dependable pitcher by winning Friday's tilt. Randy Sullivan sewed up the hole at short. He has played errorless ball in the last two games, and seems to have gained the confidence that makes a fair shortstop good, and a good one great. He collected three hits in four trips Saturday, and has really been applying the hickory mightily. Bob Doherty leads the team in batting and has hit in every game to date.

Upset and State Title

The Vermont tracksters pulled their second straight surprise in two weeks by upsetting the favored Middlebury team 74½-60½ and thus gaining the state title for the third consecutive year. The team's top-heavy power in the field events was the deciding factor. They swept the javelin, discus, pole vault and high jump. Bert Mott again took high scoring honors with 11½ points. He also set a new high hurdle mark of 15.8 seconds in what proved to be the best race of the afternoon. Nice going Coach Post! Give you a team with few runners and some good and potentially good weight men and you give us a state championship.

thers won the two-mile run in 10 minutes 24 seconds. Twenty yards behind was U. V. M.'s Ernie St. Mary. In third place were Frankie Livak and Charlie Webster. In the 220 low hurdles the Panthers resumed the lead when Bates in 24.7 seconds beat Vermont's tired Bert Mott by three yards. Rasmussen of Middlebury was third.

The Green and Gold swept the javelin. Daley, with an excellent throw of 177 feet 6 inches, copped the event and Nichols and Taylor followed in second and third places respectively. The climax was the 880-yard run in which Middlebury's Morehouse won this race in 2 minutes 3.8 seconds. He was followed by a fellow Panther, Butler. Four yards behind Butler was Vermont's Norm Stoddard. The score was now tied.

Then came the results of the discus. Vermont had swept the event and had assumed a commanding lead. Big Hugo Squire hurled the saucer 117 feet 4 inches, while Parker and Long trailed in the runner-up positions.

Middlebury made a last futile attempt to get the lead in the 220-yard dash. Hicks of the Panthers won in 22.3 seconds. Vermont's Mott was second and Bates of Middlebury was third. But the meet was now clinched. Gage won the hammer with a throw of 118 feet 4 inches. Squire was second and Ingalls of Middlebury was third.

Red Goss ended a perfect afternoon by winning the broad jump. He leaped 21 feet 2½ inches. Rooney and Lundrigan, both of Middlebury, garnered four points for their team in this event as the meet ended.

Green Mountain Scores 7 to 1 Win Over Frosh Nine

Blanchard Limits Freshmen to 3 Hits; Conti Scores Only Run

It was a good ball game for seven and one-half innings last Saturday at Poultney, but Green Mountain Junior College bats blazed in their half of the eighth to account for four runs and clinch the contest by a 7-1 count.

Lefty Blanchard went the route for the Mountaineers and set down the freshmen with three hits, two of them by lead-off man Reno Conti. Blanchard also weighed in with a single and a long home run with two mates aboard.

Green Mountain took the lead in the second inning when they pushed over one run, and were leading three to nothing until the first of the sixth when with one out Reno Conti blasted a drive over the head of the opposition's left fielder which went for a triple. Larry Killick drove him in with a long fly to left field.

The ball game was well played with several fine fielding gems turned in. Ed Craige pitched well for the freshmen but suffered one bad inning.

The first group comprises four members, Manjoney, Keighley, Norton and Denton; the second group, Hunt, Cognetta, Schoenberg and Kemler. May 9 the first group went on a trip to Poultney to play Green Mountain Junior College, but the game was called off on account of rain. Six more matches are still remaining.

Frosh Tracksters Win Over G.M.J.C. And Vt. Jr. College

In spite of a heavy downpour, the freshman track team emerged victorious in their meet with Green Mountain Junior College and Vermont Junior College at Poultney. Aside from placing in every event, the Kittens swept a first position in all of the track competition.

Johnny Reed won both the 100- and 220-yard dashes and Mart McLaren the mile run. Bart Barry took the broad jump and high hurdles, while Pulleyn copped the 440- and 880-yard run and Lockwood the discus. Vermont acquired the balance of their points with the placing of men in all events.

The final results gave Vermont freshmen 74, Vermont Junior College 3, Green Mountain Junior College 69.

The summary is as follows:

High jump: Won by LaMay (GM); Goodrich (V) 2nd; Walgren (V) 3rd; Simpson (VJC) 4th. Height: 5 ft. 8 in.

Broad jump: Won by Barry (V); Snider (GM) 2nd; Fabriano (VJC) 3rd; Reed (V) 4th. Distance, 19 ft. 10 in.

Pole vault: Won by Liggett (GM); Paterson (V) 2nd; Bethel, Fisher and Olson (all GM) tied for 3rd. Height: 11 ft.

Shot put: Won by LaMay (GM); King (GM) 2nd; Sedlis (V) 3rd; Walgren (V) 4th. Distance: 45 ft. ½ in.

Javelin throw: Won by Taft (GM); Bottagleri (GM) 2nd; Goss (V) 3rd; Korts (GM) 4th. Distance: 158 ft. (new field record).

Varsity Netmen Lose To Union 6-3

There was one flaw in the ceremonies which occurred at the dedication of the new tennis courts in back of Centennial—the visit of Union College was a disastrous one for the hosts. The Union netmen made things miserable for Coach Carpenter's boys by taking a 6-3 decision.

Union ran up a 4-2 lead in singles, then took the doubles 2-1, with four matches going to three sets.

Ed Simpson, Vermont captain, met his master in placement ace Charlie Keeler, the big gun of Union. Ed went down before Keeler's vicious chops, 6-1, 6-3.

Larry Simpson succeeded where his brother failed, coming through in three sets to defeat Hutchins 3-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Art Wolk, a veteran netman of U. V. M., took his first set from Sharpe 6-3, but dropped his lead in the second, losing 7-5 and 6-1.

Phil Potter finished off Dick Lynch of Vermont in short order 6-1, 6-4, but Sam Foti brought Vermont within one point of Union with a 6-4, 6-4 win over Woodward.

The final singles match saw Sherman of Union squeeze past Bill West with a 2-6, 6-2, 6-3 victory.

Needing but one doubles match for victory, the Union team of Keeler and Hutchins salted away Simpson and Foti 6-3, 6-1. Potter and Sherman took Wolk and Pratt 8-6, 6-1.

In the final doubles match Larry Simpson and Dick Lynch tallied another point for Vermont by defeating Sharpe and Vunck in a drawn-out affair, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5.

Cats Behind Roy Alberghini Take Colby Mules 7-3

Fifth Victory Out Of Thirteen Starts For Catamounts

After losing to Amherst last week the U. V. M. nine tore into two Colby pitchers to collect 11 hits to pound out a decisive 7-3 victory for the Cats.

The winning pitcher was Lefty Roy Alberghini. This sophomore hurler allowed only five well-scattered hits to win his first start as a Catamount hurler. In addition to his fine pitching performance Roy collected two hits, batted in one run, and struck out three men. So effective was his hurling that in six innings he allowed only one man to reach second base.

This victory is the fifth out of thirteen starts for the Vermont team. It wasn't a brilliant victory but a decisive one in that it showed that Vermont is beginning to hit its stride.

It was a well-played game of ball with sharp batting, generally good fielding, and spectacular catches. In the fourth frame Colby's right pasture tender, Joe Slattery, made a dashing, one-handed snare of Randy Sullivan's clout. Had he never caught it, Randy would have had a probable home run.

Fielding Gems

Sig Sysko, right fielder for the Cats, also shared catching honors with Slattery, making a fine running catch of pinch-hitter Hi McIntosh's clout in the seventh frame. In addition to his catching, Sig collected two hits, stole a base and executed a perfect sacrifice bunt for a fine afternoon.

It was Bob Doherty, however, who provided the telling punch. Doherty continued his fine batting streak to collect a pair of singles and knock in three runs.

Johnny Spasyk accounted for the first run of the game in the third inning as he pulled a neat squeeze bunt to score Randy Sullivan after the latter had been pushed around to third by two singles. The Vermont ball club tallied three more times that inning by a walk to Captain Taylor, Doherty's two-run single to left, and Hank Beauchemin's single.

With a lead like that to support him, Alberghini breezed through like a seasoned veteran, although he allowed two runs to score in the seventh and one run in the eighth.

Healy Back

Dick Healy made his first appearance since his injury sustained in the first game of the year by replacing Randy at short in the seventh. Dick took part in a double killing, knocked in a run with a long fly and made one error.

During the late innings of the game Colby put Johnny Daggett into the lineup. Johnny has still to fully recover from his encounter with Misty Rice during the football season. Johnny covered second base admirably, showing that his shoulder is getting along in fine shape.

U. V. M. Alumnus Is Chief Pilot For American Air Lines

(Buffalo Evening News)

If everything goes well in the way of mail subsidies, Charles F. Blair, Jr., Chief Pilot for the American Export Airlines, will be on his way across the Atlantic to Lisbon. The American Export Airlines is a subsidiary of the American Export Steamship Lines, and Blair's headquarters are now at their office, 25 Broadway, New York City.

Fourteen years ago when Colonel Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, Captain Blair was a University of Vermont sophomore. On that day Colonel Lindbergh became Captain Blair's idol. Today, thirty-one-year-old Captain Blair is chief pilot for American Export Lines, blazing new air trade routes to the Panama Canal Zone from the United States.

In charge of training and co-ordination of flight crews for proposed services for the last six months, the School twenty-two and Hutchinson High School graduate has flown the company's twin-motored Consolidated flying boat on pioneer flights of 2,500 miles from New York to the Canal Zone via Jamaica and 665 miles from New Orleans to Havana. Last November, he commanded a crew of nine on its second survey flight from New Orleans to Cristobal, C. Z., a distance of 1,800 miles. The plane averages approximately 175 miles an hour.

Capt. C. F. Blair, Jr., of the American Export Air Lines flying boat "Trans-Atlantic" which recently made a survey flight between New York and Jamaica on behalf of the Company. Capt. Blair, left, is seen talking to Flight Engineer M. C. J. Doyle immediately after the boat came to anchorage in the waters of Kingston Harbour.

"After Lindbergh flew the Atlantic, Charles' one ambition was to become a flier," Charles F. Blair, Sr., of the class of 1899 at Vermont, now an attorney residing at 125 Woodbridge Ave., recalled today. He switched from an arts course to mechanical engineering, took a year of aeronautical engineering at the University of Michigan, and returned to Vermont to graduate in 1931. He was in the Naval Reserves for two years, and then went to United Airlines and was co-pilot and senior flight captain over the Rocky Mountains until last summer. He's had over 8,000 flying hours.

"All this might not have happened if, in 1932 when he was with the Navy and flying off the West Coast, he hadn't had a little luck," his father recounted. "His motor quit on him while he was over the Pacific, and he just managed to deadstick in for a landing in a tomato patch. Didn't hurt anything except the tomatoes."

The purpose of these flights has been to connect Chicago with the Panama Canal Zone by a new airline from New Orleans to the Canal Zone by way of Central America, and to connect New York with the Canal Zone by way of New York to the Bahamas and Jamaica to the Canal Zone. The Company now has applications pending with the Civil Aeronautics Authority for the opening of these lines, and also a line from New Orleans to Havana, Cuba.

The most detailed article of any concerning these flights appeared in the Memphis Commercial of January 19, 1941. They have also been reported in the Chicago Tribune, Havana Post, New Orleans Times-Picayune, and various aviation periodicals.

Charles F., Jr., after two years in Naval Aviation at Pensacola and San Diego, Calif., became in 1933 a co-pilot on the United Airlines, with his domicile at Cheyenne, Wyo. During the following years, until last summer, he operated most of the time on the Western Division of the United Airlines, between Cheyenne and Salt Lake City, and Salt Lake and Oakland, Calif. About half of this time he was living in Salt Lake City, and for about a year in Oakland. He went through the successive ranks of co-pilot, Captain and Senior Flight Captain, with about 8,000 flying hours to his credit, most of them over the Rocky Mountains between Cheyenne and Salt Lake City, or Salt Lake City and Denver.

In June, 1940, he was transferred to Chicago as Senior Flight Captain on the New York-Chicago Division, and shortly thereafter received the offer of Chief Pilot of the American Export Airlines, which he accepted. His residence address is now 111 Old Mill Road, Manhassett, Long Island, New York, where he and his wife, the former Janice E. Davis, of his class at Vermont, and their daughter, Suzanne, now six years of age, reside.

Eat The Right Food

Have You Had Your Vitamin A ?

Nutritionists recommend the inclusion of one or more servings of green leafy or yellow vegetables in the daily diet. These foods are good sources of vitamin A, which is essential for life, health and growth. The lack of it in varying degrees may cause defective tooth formation, cessation of growth and normal bone development, night blindness and a change in the mucous linings of the respiratory and other systems which reduces their normal protective function.

Green leafy vegetables are an excellent source of vitamin A and also of iron. The thinner and greener the leaf, the higher its value for vitamin and iron tends to be. Among the excellent sources of these substances are the wild greens such as dandelion, lambs quarters, purslane, dock and mustard, and the cultivated greens including kale, spinach, chard, collards, escarole, water cress, and turnip tops.

The yellow vegetables and fruits are also high in vitamin A and include sweet potatoes, carrots, yellow squash, apricots and yellow peaches. Prunes and ripe tomatoes also are rich in vitamin A. With this variety of vegetables and fruits to choose from, it should be fairly easy to include one or more servings of them in the diet daily. In view of the additional vitamin A contributed to the diet by eggs, butter, cream and liver, it should be possible to maintain the vitamin A requirement of the body.

VOL. 59 BURLINGTON, VERMONT, FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1941 NUMBER 57

Kappa Phi Kappa Holds Annual Spring Banquet

President H. F. Wood Introduces Education Commissioner Noble

The annual spring banquet of Alpha Gamma Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, professional education fraternity, was held Wednesday evening in Richmond where thirteen members and three guests met for their final get-together of this college year. H. F. Wood '42, newly-elected president, presided over the business meeting, commended the out-going president for his fine leadership through the past year, and called upon several members for brief remarks. Professor Douglass, faculty counselor, and Professor Youngert both offered constructive thoughts.

Noble Speaks

The guest speaker of the evening was State Commissioner of Education Ralph E. Noble, who spoke very interestingly of his work in the field of education. In the State of Vermont, he said, where there are approximately 358,000 people, there are 269 school districts, the affairs of which are a legislative function. The schools of each district are supervised by a Board of Directors who meet yearly in a state organization at Montpelier to study school problems and to present new policies of education to the people through the State Legislature.

The experience of trying to explain the aims and objects of education to the public through the State Legislature requires sound philosophy. The Legislature was good to education this year, the Commissioner said. Thirty bills directly and importantly related to education were introduced and acted upon. For the first time in the state's history, money was appropriated for an adult education course in arts craft. Larger appropriations were made for teacher-training institutions. (Seventy-four percent of the beginning elementary teachers in Vermont last year were trained in the state.) Opportunities for a more extended course in vocational education were provided for. Equipment money was set aside for the installation of a new heating system in one of the state normal schools.

Grave Summary

Commissioner Noble was very grave as he said in closing: "Times are somewhat serious, and all of us who are interested in education must get in front for the next ten years, especially, and see that public support of education is not reduced. People are going to have to make severe sacrifices in order to build up adequate military defense. And through it all, 'we must,' in the words of Superintendent Studebaker, 'find a way of keeping both soldiers and teachers at their posts.'"

Ladenheim Wins Kingsley Contest

The Kingsley Prize Speaking contest, held Tuesday night at the Fleming Museum, was won by Jules Ladenheim '44. His subject was "His Appeal for Dreyfus" by Emile Zola. The prize was $25.

Second prize was won by Harold A. Durfee '41, who gave Winston Churchill's "Europe in Suspense." He was awarded $15.

Third prize money, $10, was won by Robert Norton '44, whose subject was, "Should Our Ships Convoy Arms to Britain?" by Sen. C. Waylan Brooks.

Prof. Leon W. Dean was chairman. Professors Prindle, Moody, and Carleton were the judges.

Appropriate Theme Set For Lilac Day

H. Witham In Charge of Pageant

"The Bridge of Understanding" is the appropriate theme for Lilac Day to be held May 24. This dance pageant will show how dancing bridges barriers of color, creed and nationality. Primitive, Scottish, Oriental, Spanish, Russian, Irish, American Indian, Swedish, and Negro dances all have their place in the history of this art, which is going to be portrayed by the skillful dancing of girls who are taking part because they love to dance.

A tradition started several years ago, and carried on with much excitement for the past Lilac Days, is the choosing of a Lilac Queen, who, with her court, reigns over the festivities. No one knows who will be chosen for the honor this year, but we can say that it will probably be a senior. The identity of the queen will be kept secret until 8.00 at Southwick, May 24.

About eighty girls from all the classes are taking part, wearing colorful costumes depicting their dances, besides a gay court for the Lilac Queen. Miss Larson is directing the dancing and Helen Witham '42 has charge of the pageant.

Tickets may be bought from any Staff and Sandal member for twenty-five cents. Harriet Nelson '42 has charge of tickets.

Final U.V.M. Radio Program Given Tuesday

The final U. V. M. radio program in the current series, which has been heard over WCAX every Tuesday night for the past school year, presented an interesting symposium centered about the topic, "What Is the Value of a College Education?"

To answer this question from the viewpoint of a high school student who is planning to enter college next fall, Meyer J. Levin '41, radio editor of the Cynic, introduced Ruth Jordan, a prospective graduate of B. H. S. Miss Jordan, who is to major in child psychology at the University, believes that a college education is worth while principally in that it helps the student obtain a good job when he graduates, affords the opportunity for meeting people, gives one a better capacity for judging character, helps one formulate a simple though concrete philosophy of life and, lastly, introduces one to the social side of college life.

Evans Speaks

Two members of the graduating class at the University followed. Shirley Gray '41, retiring member of Mortar Board, emphasized those worthwhile things which she has extracted from her four years at U. V. M. "College is one of the greatest institutions of democracy," she ventured, "in that a person is judged by merit and not by the amount of money he has." Both she and Miss Jordan pointed out that you can get out of college only as much as you put in.

R. P. Kenney '41, a prominent member of this year's Boulder Society, stressed the rounding out process which the mind goes through during the four years at college. "A steady mind will be very necessary for those of us who graduate this year and, although the prospects seem dark, we should be able after four years of college to look into the future with an optimistic view."

To present the faculty's reply to this question, Paul D. Evans, professor of history at U. V. M., showed how a college student can learn what has happened in the past and utilize this information in setting up the standards of his own individual life.

In closing, Meyer Levin '41 expressed his sincere gratitude to all those who have aided in making the U. V. M. radio program a success. He also expressed the hope that the program had achieved its goal: that of providing a medium of closer understanding between faculty, students and neighbors.

R.O.T.C. Plans For Federal Inspection

Lieut. Collier Inspecting Officer

After weeks of intensive training the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. Battalion is nearly ready for their annual Federal Inspection. Col. M. E. Spalding, Professor of Military Science and Tactics, announces that this year's evening performance, which takes place at 8.00 p.m. next Wednesday will be a departure from those witnessed in previous years.

In the light of the recent decision of Key and Serpent regarding the Traynor Trophy competition, the Junior Society which decides what events shall be included in the competition for the trophy, voted last year to discontinue the fraternity drill squad competition from the list of events. As plans for this competition had already been made by several fraternities, when this announcement was made last year, it was decided to put on the exhibition drill just as in previous years, even though no point toward the Traynor Trophy would be awarded the winning squad. Accordingly, most of the fraternities entered a squad in the competition last year and a very creditable performance resulted. However, this year there will be no fraternity drill squad competition. In its place, the department has arranged a series of demonstrations by the juniors, sophomores and freshmen.

The entire program of events follows:

Battalion review, 8.30 a.m. Wednesday, May 21.

9.30 to 12.00 the examination of students by inspecting officer.

From two to five p.m., inspection of property, storeroom, and records by the inspector.

8.00 p.m., Wednesday evening ceremony by all classes.

11.00 a.m. Thursday, May 22, Battalion Parade on back campus.

The inspecting officer this year is Lieut. Col. William A. Collier, General Staff Corps, First Corps Area, Headquarters.

W.A.A. Plans Annual Picnic

Around five o'clock next Tuesday evening all the members of W. A. A. will meet on the steps of Southwick preparatory to setting out on the annual picnic in Redstone Quarry off Ledge Road. A large crowd is expected to be on hand both for the picnic and for the following Green and Gold competition to decide who will get the candle. Most of the girls from the dormitories will furnish their own lunches while five cents a person will be charged for drinks. At the same time the honorary varsity certificates for the whole year will be awarded and the members of the all-sports club, highest athletic honor, will be announced.

Cathryn Grier '43 is in general charge of the picnic, while Marjorie Abell '43 is in charge of the food. The W. A. A. Council urges all W. A. A. members that they will be very welcome at the picnic.

Local Newman Club Host For New England Conference

Three Guest Speakers; D. Sawyer Chairman Of Dance Committee

The U. V. M. Newman Club will be host to Newman clubs of practically all New England colleges, May 17 and 18.

The visiting delegates will register at Cathedral High School Saturday and then will be shown around the city or will attend the baseball game between U. V. M. and Springfield.

Saturday evening there will be a general session from 7.00 to 9.00 at Southwick Memorial. Chairman of the meeting is the Rev. J. Desmond O'Connor, chaplain of the University of New Hampshire Newman Club.

Many Speakers

Short talks will be given by the speakers of the evening. Katherine E. McSweeney, M.D., will welcome the delegates and speak on "Newman Club Activities at the University of Vermont." M. Virginia Morrissey, LL.B., of the Portia Law School, Boston, Mass., and regional chairman of the N. E. Province Federation of Newman Clubs, will speak on "Newman Clubs: Their Provincial Organization." Lucille Keating, A.B., B.S., of Wellesley College, national vice-president of the Federation of Newman Clubs, will speak on "Newman Clubs: The National Organization." Prof. Harold J. Tobin, professor of political science and international law at Dartmouth College, will speak on "The Catholic Student in the Secular College."

At 9.00 an informal dance will be held at the U. V. M. gym. The Catamounts will play. Admission is thirty-five cents per person. Prof. and Mrs. M. E. Witham will chaperone.

Sunday morning the meeting will end with a Solemn Pontifical Mass at Centennial Field.

Sawyer, Chairman

Dave Sawyer '42 is chairman of the dance committee which consists of Tom Keighley '44, Margaret Crowley '41, Sally Rome '42 and John Zellinger '42. Helen Witham '42 is chairman of the reception committee, which consists of John Costello '41, Dick Healy '41, Bob Thayer '42, Hilda Paquette '42, Patricia McCormack '44 and Palmina Frabotta '43. Justine Whalen '44 is chairman of the publicity committee which consists of Patricia Crowley '44, Helena Anderson '43, Joe Corbett '43, Priscilla Young '44, Marie Lanou '44 and Jim Tennien '43. Mary Germain '43 is chairman of the housing committee. Her committee consists of Barbara Gallagher '42, Ita Casey '44, Henrietta Facteau '43, Katherine Hayes '44 and Jane McAuliffe '44.

All members of the U. V. M. Newman Club are urged to attend the conference, and all other students cordially invited to attend the conference and the dance.

Osler Society Plans Dance

Tonight from 9.00 to 1.00 the Osler Clinical Society of the Medical College will sponsor a semi-formal dance at the Country Club. This is the first time that such a dance has been recognized as an official college function and thus it may establish a precedent. Besides the medical students, the faculty of the College of Medicine have been invited. Frank D. Eddy '42 is chairman of the committee on arrangements and Robert E. Johnstone '43 is chairman of the floor committee. The Catamounts will furnish the tunes and the chaperons will be Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Amidon and Dr. and Mrs. R. G. Daggs.

VOL. 59 MAY 16, 1941 NO. 57

What About It?

Last issue, we commented on the loss of youth's interest in democracy because it hadn't been made real to them. This week we would like to get a little closer to home and comment on the unfortunate refusal of students at the University to make an attempt to solve campus problems or to form active organizations through which they can express their views. Whether this attitude is widespread among American colleges, we cannot definitely say, but proof exists to show that some colleges have a very wide-awake student body which interests itself in the educational problems of the school and strives for constructive action through well-knit student councils or similar organizations. The purpose of these student organizations is to co-ordinate student opinion, to represent the entire student body and to see that the administration and faculty know what student opinion is on the problems which affect them.

We refuse to believe that the case for student organization and spirit is hopeless here at Vermont but it certainly is at a very low level. For the past week, the CYNIC has been interviewing various students with a view to finding out what improvements they would like to see made at U. V. M. and many shrug their shoulders and say: "What's the use? There's nothing we can do about it." Considering the fact that the Governor and Dean Packer are conducting a special educational survey of the school at this moment, this attitude seems very disheartening. The recent tuition poll, also, showed a very widespread ignorance in the student body of problems which affect them. Just what the cause for this general lassitude is we don't know.

One fundamental factor is probably the lack of leadership on the campus. We have a faculty-student council but how many students, may we ask, know about it? Why don't they know about it? Because no one has ever bothered to tell them. This organization which supposedly should be the rallying point for student organization is a deep, dark mystery to everyone but the members—what is its function? What is it accomplishing?

As far as we can ascertain the council is made up mainly of people who are very active in campus activities already and so cannot spend much time in this work. Apparently something should be done to make the council a truly representative organization. But before this can be done, the politics here at the University must be revised. At the present time, student elections are a farce. A handful of people do the nominating, a handful of people do the voting. This gives small groups on campus an excellent opportunity to run things.

If we are to have a representative council on this campus, some of the members must be elected by the student body. Under the present system, we would have the same old story of non-representative elections and that would certainly smash any hopes for a really hard-working student council.

In the second place, over and above the matter of interest in elections, the students must strive to elect people not because they have this or that honor but because they have the ability and enthusiasm for the job. The idea of the student council would not be to give the members just one more honor to include on the list of their activities in the Ariel, or a chance to appear in a group picture but to provide an organization through which student action can be channeled and student interest in the school can be maintained. No students who are out for the mere honor of a thing can ever do this job. That's why so many organizations on this campus are "dead on their feet"—too many members belong merely because they like the honor not because they enjoy taking part in the group's work and furthering its aims. Because of this grand scramble

"Is Lindbergh A Real American?"

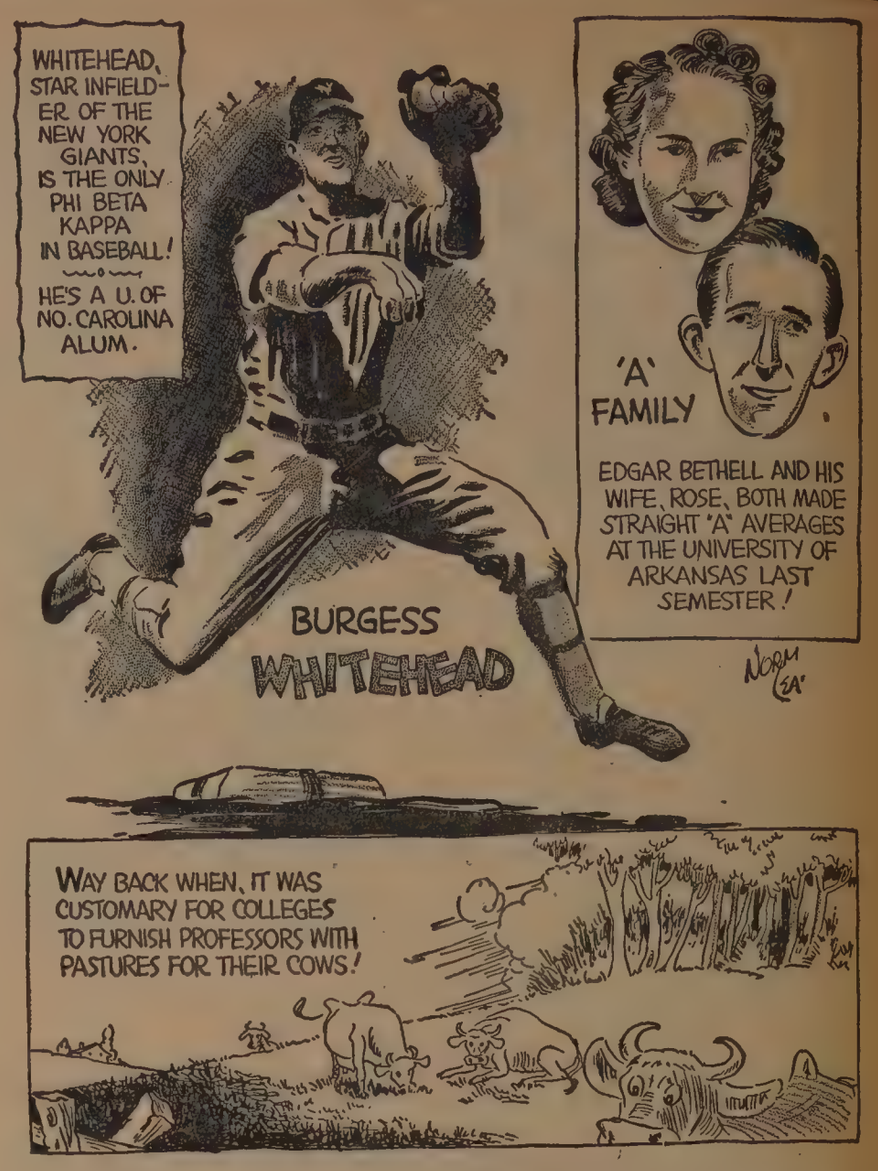
To the Editor of the CYNIC:

It was with a great amount of interest that I read an Associated Press dispatch on April 25 with a Berlin date line of the previous day. I quote the translated version of the article by the editor of the Hamburg Fremdenblatt. It was headlined "America First" and went on to say, "Colonel Lindbergh, a real American of Swedish descent from the Middle West, opposes war," and continued, "He is not a war opponent through emotionalism but through devoted love of his country." I wonder how anyone in the United States can call Mr. Lindbergh a "real American" when "Heel" Hitler's official stooges say the same thing.

There is a certain group in America which has been called the "Riviera" set. During peace they condemned America, sneered at those who worked for their daily bread, but did nothing more productive than sit on the beaches and howl at the size of the income tax. But when Europe was enveloped in war, they hurried home to secure those blessings that this country affords. Among these was Ex-Colonel Lindbergh. He left this country in a huff, incensed at the treatment he had received here; he is back today telling us what we should do and how we should save our civilization and our democracy.

This Quisling, I repeat again, criticizes the appeasers, yet disregarding the lessons of appeasement, he urges a negotiated peace. We are to believe that Hitler, who has violated every treaty he has felt like violating, will not repudiate this one. He speaks of intra-European wars, when conflict ranges in three continents and all six are involved. He says that we have incurred the antagonism of every great military power in Europe and Asia except England, implying that we should cooperate (in other words, appease) these powers.

Mr. Lindbergh is appealing to the well-known sentiment of the American people to be "hero worshippers." He condemns "college presidents and idealists" for forcing us into war, while his colleague, Senator Wheeler, shouts that the "international bankers, Jews and munitions manufacturers" are responsible for our imminent entry into the war. About the only group, according to them, who are not pushing for war, are themselves.



Mr. Lindbergh also recognizes that we must arm to the teeth on the land, the sea and in the air. Against whom? A defeated England? No, against those powers now fighting against her. He further claims that the United States and the British Empire cannot defeat Nazi-dominated Europe today, but that tomorrow the United States alone can defeat a Nazi-dominated world!

Since we are arming ourselves against the Axis and Britain is fighting the Axis it seems only logical that we should aid her. Further than this, I wonder how much our word will be worth in South America if we fail to support Britain after having given our solemn pledge to do so. Will our Pan-American neighbors have any faith in us if we fail our friends at the crucial moment?

If we should admit, as Mr. Lindbergh suggests, that Dakar, the Suez, Gibraltar and Singapore are of no concern to us in any way, how long could we send ships in impunity to get rubber, tin, manganese, bauxite, coffee, sugar, bananas, cacao, coconuts, silk, tungsten, wool and other commodities vital to our standard of living from areas which are controlled by these strategic areas? I admit that we could refrain from using these commodities to some extent and that we might manufacture "Ersatz" materials to replace others, but in the meantime our foreign trade would disappear completely. Couple this with increasing taxes and the inevitable consequences of omnipresent "Prussianization" which would be necessitated to maintain the "Lindbergh plan," and it is my belief that a progressive decline would occur in our standard of living. Given this, the majority of our people would lose faith in whatever democracy remained extant and totalitarianism would be left as the sole alternative.

May I also state that Mr. McNamara is being very inconsistent in his views. In previous letters he stated that Britain was doing nothing to protect this country from Nazi aggression. Yet in his last letter he states that before Germany can attack us, Britain must be invaded and her navy destroyed. In other words,

"Campus Politics Bad," Says Frank Livak

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

This may be termed as an enumeration of viewpoints on various things, or, getting a load off my chest.

First, some points as past president of the men's non-fraternity group:

Some people may know the motto of the Vermont Independents is "Vermont First." My interpretation of this motto has been that the student's first consideration is the University. Therefore, when a man had done his bit for the University should he take an active part in the Independents? Only after a non-fraternity man has completed his studies and taken part in extra-curricular activities should he take active part in this non-fraternity group. His interest should be directed so that in later years the individual will feel himself to be a member of the University as a whole rather than of a clique.

Furthermore, there seems to be a lack in unity of non-fraternity men as a political group on the campus. Campus politics at the University of Vermont, I think, are some of the rottenest existing. They are disgusting even to those who participate in these political "ventures." My viewpoint on this matter is that if the non-fraternity groups controlled the campus the condition of unfair elections and committee appointments would still exist as bad as before but only run by a different "combine." This setup certainly would not be helping the cause of democratic elections on the campus.

Now speaking only as a student, I shall touch upon another point. A short time ago honorary society members were named. I think it is a pity that with little exception only athletes and fraternity men are worthy of this recognition. The choices are very good, but the ones chosen already have their time taken up by athletic and fraternity activities. Why not put in a few men who are capable and not all brawn and sinew? Non-fraternity men and women are slightly less than half of the total enrollment of the University. Yet they comprise a greater part of those in musical, literary and other extra-curricular activities, excluding sports. This indicates something of their ability. Why do they have such a small representation in honorary societies and campus committees? Is it a compliment to the University as a whole to say that only half of the student body which belongs to Greek-letter social groups is capable or worthy of recognition?

I know that there are vital international issues at stake, but do we need to allow conditions on campus to thrive in corruption? These views are mine alone.

Coach Larry Gardner has developed another excellent pitcher in the form of Roy Alberghini, sophomore, who won two games in the last week by defeating Colby and Norwich with comparative ease. Alberghini, who reminds one somewhat of Alex Pesarik, star of 1939 and 1940 clubs, also showed promise as a hitter by cracking out two hits in the two games. This new addition brings Coach Gardner's starting moundsmen to a total of four if the recuperating Bob Carlson is counted. Carlson is slowly recovering from trichinosis, a disease cured only by time, rest and a careful diet, but if his condition continues to improve he will soon be back in the lineup. Al Shaw, right-handed hurler, will be out a few days, being laid up with a case of measles.

Poor attendance is quite evident at baseball games and track meets this spring. With such a fine home athletic program presented this season for the students' benefit it would seem as if a few of those attending college could rearrange their complicated itineraries so as to include in it a few minutes for beholding the various spring sport events. There is a baseball game at Centennial Field practically every Friday or Saturday. Some of the leading teams in the East appear here, the seating facilities are excellent, the diamond is in good playing condition and every student has a ticket book, yet only a handful of the faithful manage to attend. A well-filled stadium with a lusty cheering section instills a certain amount of spirit into the individual players and with such a spirit, which is conducive to good baseball, the team might improve on an otherwise mediocre season. Vermont is annually one of the finest teams in New England and deserves support from a lackadaisical student body. Vermont ranks much higher in baseball than any other sport but receives a minimum of support.

for positions which will further one's name and aid one to make an honorary society, every club and activity on the campus suffers. The fraternities indirectly foster this attitude by pushing their own members, regardless of ability, into all the positions and activities possible. In short there is no attempt to pick men suited for the positions. The student council can be a way out of the present jungle of indifference but not unless it is wisely and democratically selected.

What about it? We are all in college for the express purpose of learning how to cope with problems affecting society. Can we expect to have a nation worth defending when the future citizens sit back and do not even bother to deal with the comparatively simpler problems of campus and classroom; when they refuse to use the opportunity to exercise democratic principles in their more narrow range of activities at the University?

Vermont Engages Springfield Nine

Springfield will be the opponent this Saturday at Centennial Field, when the Cats interrupt their state series contests to play host to the Connecticut aggregation.

Swede Carlson seems to be the logical choice for the pitching chore, if Coach Larry Gardner's plans are not muddled by the Middlebury encounter. The rest of the team will be the same.

Springfield boasts of a good pitcher in Smith, who will no doubt receive the nod from his mentor against Vermont. Gibney, an outfielder for the visitors, played on Larry's team that journeyed to Havana this past summer.

"Is Lindbergh?"

he admits openly that Germany today is being delayed by Britain.

I took the examples of Thomas Mann and Albert Einstein for only one reason. They are implacable foes of regimentation and, in the public eye they represent martyrs to all that is contrary to human standards of ethics and tolerance. I knew Mr. Einstein was an American citizen, but I hope that Mr. McNamara will follow the papers more closely. If I was six months behind in regard to Mr. Einstein, he was a year behind in regard to Mr. Chamberlain. I leave it to the readers of this paper to judge who committed the grosser error.

I would prefer to see myself "slaughtered" today than have my younger brothers blown to bits five, ten, fifteen years from now. If airplanes today fly seven thousand miles, tomorrow they will fly fifteen. A cynical attitude avails little when speaking of war. I wonder if the Finns and Greeks would be better off today if they had not fought. Are the Danes or the Rumanians or the Baltic peoples?

It is also interesting to note that among those organizations in this country which have taken Mr. Lindbergh's stand are the German-American Bund, the Ku Klux Klan, William Randolph Hearst, Father Coughlin, the Silver Shirts, Mrs. Dilling, the Communist Party, the Knights of the White Camelia and many others too numerous to mention.

When I think of those who would close the tent flaps of democracy in America, those who demand complete isolation, those who would grant Germany, Italy, the Soviet and Japan the right to enslave less strong people I say, "There is none so blind as he who will not see."

Title-Bound Cats Swamp Norwich In 11-5 Slugfest

By Alan Glazin

They are on their way to the state championship! Tuesday afternoon the Vermont baseball team traveled to Northfield where they decisively defeated the Norwich Cadets by the score of 11-5. It was never a battle, the Cats sending eleven runs across the platter during the first four innings and then merely coasting along through the rest of the game behind the fast balls and slow balls of Lefty Alberghini. Ray held the Norwich lads to four hits until the eighth inning, the Cadets getting three each in the last two innings.

In the second inning Smith doubled to deep left center. Wood reached first on the second baseman's error, Smith stopping at third. Wood stole second. Sullivan walked. Alberghini walked, forcing in Smith. Sysko reached first when the first baseman threw home too late to get Wood. Spasyk flied to the second baseman. Taylor walked, forcing in Sullivan. Doherty fouled to the catcher. Beauchemin singled to center, Alberghini and Sysko scoring, Taylor going to third. On the play Beauchemin purposely allowed himself to be run down, first baseman to second baseman, while Taylor scored.

In the fourth Alberghini singled over second base. Sysko singled to center, Alberghini going to second. Spasyk sacrificed and was out, pitcher to first. On the play Alberghini moved to third and Sysko to second. Taylor flied to center, Alberghini scoring. Doherty singled to center, Sysko scoring. As the center fielder fumbled the ball, Doherty went to second. Doherty went to third on a passed ball. Doherty scored and Beauchemin was safe at first on the pitcher's error. Smith flied to the shortstop.

Norwich Nibbles

The team lunched at Waterbury and after the game traveled to Fayston, where Vermont alumnus Bill Randall, a good friend of Larry Gardner's and Sabe Abell's, gave the boys quite a feast. Each player's plate was heaped with hors d'oeuvres, a whole chicken, spaghetti and most deliciously prepared lettuce. Each one of us repeats, "Thanks loads, Bill." . . . That Vermont double play in the sixth inning was the twentieth started by Randy Sullivan and Johnny Spasyk. . . . Three cars, driven by Larry Gardner, Sabe Abell and Rannie Slack, were used on the trip. . . . Russ West received a shock when he called "Betty" to a lovely Montpelierite, for the name of the pretty lass was "Betty." . . . Dick Healy met a fellow Lynbrooker in the Norwich stands. . . . A portly gentleman sitting in the left-field stands made a nice catch of a high foul and later came over to the dugout to tell Larry he decided to tarry a while when he was passing through Northfield, after he heard that U. V. M. was playing. . . . Charlie Smith hit a long one over the left-field stands which was but a few feet short of fair territory. . . . Sig Sysko found it difficult playing half way up a steep hill in right field. . . . When one sits in the Vermont dugout he can see why Larry Gardner is the great coach that he is. Larry is always calm and collected, brimming with shrewdness and wise advice. What's more, he is one of the swellest fellows one could ever hope to meet.

There will be a meeting of all the members of the Women's Bowling Club on Monday, May 19, in Room 3, South College, at 1.30 p.m., to choose a manager for next year. Any girl interested in being the manager may sign up in the Y room.

U.V.M. Tracksters Enter Eastern Collegiate Meet

Coach Post Gloomy As to Team's Chances; Field Men Counted On

This year, as has always been the custom, Worcester Polytechnic Institute will be the welcoming host for the annual Eastern Intercollegiate Field and Track Meet. The meet will take place this Saturday, May 17, and will be the twentieth meet to be run since its first run in 1922.

As has been the custom Vermont has entered a team into the competition. Although Coach Archie Post's harriers are not the best track men ever produced at U. V. M. he nevertheless has hopes of winning a place after all the events have been run off.

To date Archie has had a little trouble in his previous meets resulting from the close scores and neck to neck struggle to win. For instance, there was the Colby meet in which Archie's boys lost a close one by virtue of one point—the score being 68 to 67. In the meet against Middlebury the score was very low with Middlebury pulling closer and closer and it wasn't until the very end that the Vermont tracksters pulled away and came out on top.

"Saturday's meet isn't going to be any set-up for the boys." So quoted Archie. Besides Colby, Middlebury and Trinity, the U. V. M. boys will go into action against such teams as Boston University, Connecticut State, Massachusetts State, Tufts, and Worcester Tech.

Coach Gloomy

Coach Post's predictions as to how Vermont will make out are very dismal and disheartening. As has been said before, the afore-mentioned teams will push our boys to the hilt and we'll have to do some fancy stepping to keep up with them, least of all win. Tufts University and Boston University will give the most competition. Especially tough will be Tufts with Ed Dugger, their star 120-yard hurdler showing his heels to the rest of the field. Dugger is said to breeze through the hurdles in 14.5 seconds. This time is very close to the world's record and Bert Mott, U. V. M. hurdler, will have to have plenty on the ball to win this event.

The trial events will be held in the morning and the finals will be run off in the afternoon.

Last year Vermont placed fourth and the year before placed seventh. In the former event we did not win any firsts but came through with enough places to come out in fourth position. The situation this year is almost the same. Coach Post does not expect any firsts except if Mott, F. Webster, or Gage come through in the hurdles, mile and hammer throw respectively. Another possibility for first place may be in the javelin thrown if Daly could hurl it for some 180 odd feet.

Approximately fourteen men will make the trip to Worcester. To date only twelve of the fourteen have been selected and the other two will be chosen soon. Those sure of making the trip are Gage, Goss, Grosvenor, Mott, Nichols, Parker, St. Mary, Squire, Vreeland, Warden, F. Webster, and Daly.

Field Men Strong

Vermont will not enter men in the 100, 220, 440, and 880-yard runs. The reason for this is apparent for Coach Post is going to depend upon his field men to garner most of the points.

The men listed below are those sure of going and the events they will probably be entered in: Gage, hammer; Goss, broad jump; Grosvenor, high jump; Mott, 120-yard and 220-yard hurdles; Nichols, javelin; Parker, shot put and discus throw; St. Mary, two-mile run; Squire, hammer and discus; Vreeland, pole vault; Warden, shot and discus; F. Webster, mile; Daly, javelin.

In last Saturday's meet Mott broke the college record and not the state record when he took the 120 high hurdles in 15.7 seconds.

Next Saturday will find U. V. M. host to Trinity in a meet which will prove very interesting as Vermont will learn much about Trinity in their meeting at Worcester.

Cat Netmen Smash Crack Colby Club

Singles Matches Are Long and Hard Fought

Vermont's racquet wielders did it the hard way last Monday to overcome a valiant Colby tennis team by a decisive 6 to 3 count. It was the fourth victory in seven starts for the Green and Gold netmen who are enjoying a very successful season. The new clay courts near Centennial Field was the scene of the Cats' latest victory, one which was well earned and well deserved.

The singles matches were examples of U. V. M. tenacity, as most of the men lost their first sets but came back strong to take their matches. In the third, fourth, and fifth place matches the Vermont players rallied after dropping the first set.

The Colby number one man was a great tennis player. He was Charlie Lord, the singles champion of the State of Maine and a member of the Junior Davis Cup team of the United States. His beautiful style carried him to an easy victory over Ed Simpson of Vermont.

Vermont garnered four points in the singles matches, all but one match going the full three sets. Larry Simpson defeated Cappy Dyer 8-6, 6-3 and displayed some beautiful form. Larry was hot. He did nothing wrong and looked brilliant in this match.

Art Wolk dropped the first set 1-6 to Ed Alexander of Colby but rallied and won the last two by 10-8 and 6-4 counts. Dick Lynch lost his first set, got his mind off his calculus exam, and pulled through in the next two. The scores were 6-8, 6-2, 6-4.

The fourth point was obtained when Sam Foti licked Norris Dibbie in a hard-fought battle that lasted over two hours. Fish sandwiches were served between the sets of this match. Bill Pratt was playing his first singles match of the year, and went down after a close battle to the strokes of Burnett, who thus obtained Colby's second point.

The match was clinched for Vermont when Larry Simpson and Dangerous Dick Lynch teamed up in the doubles and soundly spanked Grover Cleveland Alexander and "Peru" Prizzano 6-4, 6-1, after "Good" Lord and "Vat" Dyer had conquered Ed Simpson and Sam Foti. The Catamount sixth point was gained by Pratt and Wolk with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Dibbie and Burnett.

Thursday the squad travels to Middlebury to match lobs with the Midd netsters in a state title match.

Scribes Hold Final Meeting

Though the Scribes held their final meeting of the year last Wednesday evening, their activity has by no means ended for the year. For another literary page is to come out in the CYNIC before exams set in. In it are to be included short stories, essays, sketches, poetry and cartoons.

Wednesday's meeting consisted of reading and criticizing each other's creations as well as eating refreshments without comments. Plans for the coming page were feverishly discussed and it was stated that any students who would like to enter original material for the page should leave their manuscripts in Fulvio Bardossi's box in the CYNIC office before this coming Monday noon.

It was with a great deal of pleasure that Jean Young '42 was welcomed back into the group. She read what was practically a novelette dealing with skiing and hospitals, but with a happy ending. Dorothy Thornton '43 brought forth a story dealing with life as it is in the army, a subject with which the writer is very familiar. The language used was clever slanguage. Other members brought sketches and poetry. The latter, which was modern to an exscream, brought forth many valuable comments by Jacob Katz '44 who is well versed in the classics.

Though everyone had a wonderful time, they regretted that Prof. Elliot Merrick, charter member of Scribes, was unable to attend. At present he is very busy judging in a literary contest run by the State High Schools.

The date for the Lilac Day Pageant is May 24, Saturday night, not May 23 as announced in Friday, May 9, CYNIC.

Should We Feed Small Democracies?

"Is it common sense that we should condemn to death 37,000,000 people of the European democracies?" This was the question posed by Milton M. Brown, Monday evening, May 12, when he gave a short speech to the girls at Robinson Hall. Mr. Brown was entertained at dinner at Robinson, and Dean Simpson was a guest also.

Mr. Brown represents the Committee on Food for the Small Democracies. In citing his experiences in the last war, he claims that relief can be administered to Belgians without aiding Germany. He said, "We should feed those people to keep them for ourselves."

Later that evening Mr. Brown spoke at the City Hall on this subject.

Student Union Tag Day On Wednesday

Money To Finance Conference Next Year

Wednesday is to be a big day on this campus and we want all your cooperation to help make it so. Why? Well, this Wednesday is to be a tag day for Student Union. What for? The subject could cover a lot of space, but it will suffice to say that Student Union needs money and lots of it. Next year there is to be a conference here, with students from colleges in all the northeastern states and the U. V. M. group has to finance it. The tags are to be sold for any amount you can afford to give, from one cent to one dollar (or more, of course), and by all the members of the S. U. Council. Some others will be selling these tags, too. Yes, you've guessed it, the Beauty Queens of our campus! All will be identified by red, white and blue arm bands, and will be around school all day Wednesday and at the military drill Wednesday night, May 21. Student Union does a great deal to help all of you. How about turning out this Wednesday to help it.

Last Big Sing To Be Held Thursday Night

The third big Vermont Sing will take place on the library steps on Thursday night, May 22, at 7.15 p.m. Sponsored by the Outing Club, these sings are led by Louis Picherri, who is enrolled in the musical education course. Every student is urged to attend, and songs will be sung from the Outing Club song book.

Parade and Mock War Part of Military Inspection

Two Days of Events Highlighted By Ceremony in the Gym Tomorrow Night

Warfare under realistic combat conditions will be graphically demonstrated by members of the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. Battalion at their annual evening ceremony scheduled to take place this year at 8.00 p.m., Wednesday, May 21, in the gymnasium annex.

According to Col. M. E. Spalding, Professor of Military Science and Tactics at the University, the formal Federal Inspection will be made this year by Lieut. Col. W. A. Collier of the General Staff Corps from the First Corps Area Headquarters in Boston, Mass., on May 21 and 22.

Although the evening ceremony on Wednesday is the highlight of the entire inspection, many other colorful events are scheduled for the two-day period, including a review of the battalion at 8.30 a.m. on May 21 and a battalion parade at 11.00 a.m. on May 22, both to take place on the back campus.

Colorful Program

Colonel Spalding announces that the demonstrations next Wednesday evening, although departing from ceremonies presented in recent years, are entirely in keeping with the times as they will accurately portray the type of military training received by young men at the University of Vermont.

He states further, that although there will be no fraternity drill squad competition this year, the program will be just as colorful and exciting as previously, due to the introduction of a variety of demonstrations never before presented.

Among other things, the cadets will put on a gas mask and bayonet drill and a series of demonstrations dealing with automatic rifles, trench mortars, antitank weapons and heavy machine guns, as well as an exhibition drill by crack members of the freshman class.

Actual Combat Simulated

Most of these demonstrations have been planned with the idea of simulating actual combat conditions in a manner understandable to the civilian. Student commentators from the four classes will describe and explain the demonstrations as they are presented.

A part of the program will be reserved for the University R. O. T. C. Band which recently returned from a concert tour of the state. Mr. Joseph F. Lechnyr will be the conductor.

Numerous prizes, awards and trophies will be presented at the close of the program.

Those unable to be present at the evening ceremony will be given the opportunity to witness a short, sparkling display of mililtary precision at the battalion parade Thursday, May 22, at 11.00 a.m.

More on the Council

Last week we suggested that the lack of student interest in campus affairs here at the University was due in part to lack of efficient leadership and concerted effort. We suggested as a remedy for that an active student council.

This week it would be well to take a single problem and see how an active student council could cope with it. Many students have expressed the opinion that they would like to have a reading period established which would enable them to have sufficient time to review before final examinations. They feel that this would make the present set-up more fair for those students who have many exams coming in the first days of the examination period.

As far as we can ascertain one of the major objections to a reading period is that the school calendar is already cut to the minimum of teaching days now. Taking out two or three days for a reading period would necessitate the addition of extra days elsewhere in the calendar or else the elimination of some holidays. Would the students be willing to accept such a solution?

Or is there some better way to deal with this problem? It has been suggested that perhaps a schedule could be worked out that placed examinations in definite groups. In this way all exams that could not under any circumstances conflict would be lumped together on the same day. English I and English II could come together. Many of the language courses could be so arranged. Of course, with the present system of courses in existence at U. V. M. there is much overlapping and a social science student, for instance, is taking courses in the literary-scientific curricula and vice versa.

At any rate a study could be made of this system. Various forms of such schedules are in use in several universities and if properly handled this solution eliminates the need for a reading period. If it is found that no alternatives will work then by all means we think some time should be set aside for the purposes of review at the end of semester.

That this problem is not a simple one to solve should be evident. There's where your student council comes in. The CYNIC as a newspaper can suggest improvements and even sample student opinion but it should not be the only agency on the campus concerned with student problems. There must be some representative group elected by the student body that can consult with the faculty and present the students' point of view on vital issues. There must be a reliable group with the authority to approve measures on behalf of the students. Such a council would make it a point to find out what students thought about introducing a reading period. They would ascertain whether or not the number of students affected would be large enough to warrant such a reform. If any alternative proposals came up they would take them into consideration.

The next step would be for the student council to get in touch with the faculty and administration and discuss the matter with them. Just what are the obstacles to the proposed reform? How can they be removed? Has the faculty or administration any suggestions for improvement? In short the administration and faculty would be made aware, if they did not already know, that a problem existed and they would be fully informed of student opinion on the matter and proper action could be taken.

The students would then feel that they had some stake in the University. The faculty and administration would not be utterly ignorant of student interests. And the students would have an organization to represent them.

Can't we get things going now before two months of vacation obliterate the issue?

Letters From England

Compiled by
DORIS JARECKIE '42 and JACOB KATZ '44

This is the fifth and last installment of a series of letters from an English girl to a friend in the United States which we started in the April 18 issue of the CYNIC.

July 17, 1940.

Dunkirk.

Dear Mary,

". . . . The past few weeks have been a nightmare. France, whom we believed in, started a furious surge of blaming and useless recriminations. Then came the ghastly (but I'm sure, absolutely necessary) action against the French fleet: what a tragedy—when we had endured so much together; above all, having gone through the agony and the glory of Dunkirk side by side, to have to turn and fight our ally, our trusted friend. It is one of the most horrible things that has happened so far. . . . Jim was killed at Dunkirk. God knows, it has been awful. I knew he was in Flanders when Leopold surrendered and for ten days I lived in hell while the army fought a magnificent losing battle trying to cut its way to the sea. People said, 'If 10,000 men get out of Belgium alive we shall be lucky.' We heard that everywhere: in busses, on the wireless, in restaurants. For about three days after Leopold capitulated we did not hear a word. All we knew was that our men were fighting desperately and there was not much hope. Then a few thousands started arriving home—tired and ragged, but grinning. That night I was pretty miserable and a friend who was on leave took me out to dance to cheer me up. We went to a night club and there was a group of officers who looked as if they hadn't slept for days—they hadn't; they had just got back from Dunkirk. When the band was resting they went up on the platform and soon had us all singing 'We'll Meet Again' and other war songs. Then we sang 'It's A Lovely Day Tomorrow' with tears in our eyes and then one of the officers asked us to sing a special song, and told us that he had to leave right after it to get some sleep, as he was going back to Belgium the next day to get the rest of his battery out. He said: 'It's the army song; we sang it on our way into Belgium and we are going to sing it all the way out.' We all sang 'Roll Out the Barrel' together and prayed hard . . . . 350,000 men got out safely; miraculously, really—I'm sure it was nothing less than an answer to prayer—but Jim was not one of them, though I prayed harder than I have ever prayed in my life. I was so sure that he would get out safely. I have so often thought, but never really believed, that this could happen. But now it's come. Something seemed to die inside one when we got the official notification: 'Missing—believed killed.' So when we got the War Office confirmation 'Willed in action' it just couldn't hurt more than it had done already. We were going to have such a wonderful life together . . . . we should have been married as soon as war broke out; you can't afford to play around with happiness these days. . . . Now I know what real hell is. Now, for the first time, I feel afraid, afraid for the future. I feel I want to run away and hide and get away from the storm and horror. While Jim was here I didn't mind what happened. He had such great strength and faith. I'm lost without him. But I'm thankful that we had such happy times together; there's always something to look back on."

January 1, 1941.

Another Christmas passed with even less hope than the last one. Jim was gone and the destruction did not cease. Very faintly only we hear carols—they tell too much of things we haven't got.

". . . . I did not go home for Christmas. I thought that it would be just as well to spend it working, since last year I was home and Jim was on leave and we had such fun. So I stayed at the rectory and worked the night shift. The rector and his wife were so sweet. Their two daughters were home and they had large family parties nearly every evening. On Christmas Eve we went out singing carols, which was lovely. It did not snow this year, but was very cold; so it was lovely to be asked in for a drink of coffee after singing and to have it round a huge fireplace. We sang to the men of a searchlight detachment a few miles away. They enjoyed it so thoroughly. I suppose they get awfully lonely in so isolated units like that. . . ."

January 10, 1941.

A new year just started, but it does not seem to be a new one. It is not better than the old one, there is still no success, no early victory is in the offing. The people wait till the war is over and then they will celebrate all the New Years since the beginning of this war together, which will mark the beginning of a new and we hope better future.

". . . . Oh, how glad I am that 1940 is over. It has, I suppose, been the most momentous year of my life—and the hardest. There are so many things about it that I shall remember all my life: my 21st birthday; getting engaged; those ghastly days of Dunkirk; hearing about Jim; going to Buckingham Palace and receiving his D.S.O. from the King; long days and nights of work trying to forget; the first days of the blitzkrieg in London; working in a horrible canteen during my last week's leave—during the nights in badly bombed areas, seeing ghastly destruction and horrors I would not have believed possible—and through it all, smiling faces, and willing hands, and laughter louder than tears. The morale and determination of people who have lost everything in air raids is good to see and yet it never ceases to amaze; it is really magnificent. . . . I saw the movie 'Our Town' a few weeks ago. It certainly brought back memories of New York. . . ."

January 29, 1941.

". . . . Actually right now (it is 3 p.m.) there is an air raid in progress. I can hear planes overhead and A.A. guns are firing on all sides. Bits of shrapnel from them are falling in the streets. I can see them just outside my bedroom window."

Here our letters close. Planes are overhead. They return night after night. Two years ago our English girl lived in the same way you do. Then came the war and everything changed. We tried to show you that change. In the beginning she still tried to combine her war duties with cultural and social interests. But then came Dunkirk and the continuous bombing of England. Not only her best friends were killed but also houses and monuments, towns and countrysides, artistic and cultural values, everything she held dear began to be destroyed one after another. To be or not to be was not any more a question of whether she in particular would survive, but whether England would not only be able to win but would also be strong enough to rise to the old standards and far above them again. Duty and work was the only way where she could find peace and hope. Duty will be her life until the war will be over. Then she might find joy and happiness again in a new rebuilding, but now—"planes are overhead; I can see them just outside the bedroom window."

Ann Sheridan, movie "oomph" girl, was known as Clara Lou Sheridan when she attended North Texas State Teachers College.

Research Being Made In Air Conditioning

Urbana, Ill.—(ACP)—Because of pioneering research started nearly 25 years ago at the University of Illinois, thousands of American homes are heated more efficiently and economically today. The research is being increased to cover year-round home air-conditioning.

Study of warm-air heating has gone on since 1924 in a typical ten-room frame house, the university-operated Research Residence, erected on the campus by the National Warm Air Heating and Air-Conditioning Association.

Bert Mott led the Catamount tracksters to their 17-point fourth place in the Eastern Intercollegiates this past Saturday. The U. V. M. sophomore ace scored Vermont's only first place by breasting the tape three feet of Ed Dugger, the Jumbo prize package, in the 220-yard dash. Other Vermont point getters were Dick Grosvenor in the high jump, O'Connell and Vreeland in the pole vault, Squire, Parker, and Gage in the discus, Squire in the hammer, and Daly and Nichols in the javelin.

Although he didn't gain a scoring place, Norm Stoddard showed a remarkable improvement in the mile. In dual competition this year Norm has never bettered 4.48 in this event, but Saturday he turned in a 4:35 performance. We haven't any idea what Norm ate for dinner, but we sure hope he continues to include it in his meals.

The weight men were the whole Catamount team. They scored eleven of the Cats' 17 point total. The discus showed plenty of green and gold as Vermont men annexed second, third, and fourth in this event. The javelin was also tinged with green and gold, although the spear heavers didn't come up to expectation.

Ed Dugger and Walter Hall, co-captains of the Tufts' cindermen, accounted for five firsts and two seconds between themselves. Dugger stepped over the high hurdles in face of a strong wind in 14.6 seconds to set the only new record of the meet. This long-limbed Jumbo has entered national competition in the 120-yard high hurdles, and was more than a match for the Eastern college lads.

Bob Carlson Back

The title-bound Cats will most probably be backing up the well-controlled tosses of Bob Carlson when they face the Norwich Horsemen on Tuesday. Bob has been inactive since his win over Yale at the close of the Southern tour and will be making his first home appearance this year. Thus far the Catamounts are leading the state league with three victories in the same number of starts. They were held inactive Saturday, and we hope they take it out on Norwich!

U. of Pennsylvania Celebrates 200th Year

Philadelphia, Pa.—(ACP)—Gifts totaling nearly $5,000,000 from 16,000 friends and alumni were given the University of Pennsylvania at its 200th anniversary celebration.

The week-long observance drew representatives from hundreds of colleges, universities and learned societies.

Highlights included conferring of honorary LL.D. degrees upon President Roosevelt and Sir Lyman P. Duff, chief justice of Canada.

Planned for four years, the discussions centered on America's role in the world crisis. Religion, art, politics, social science, economics, literature and all the natural sciences were the subject of more than 200 papers by men eminent in their fields.

College Athletes Still Shine After Graduation

Minneapolis, Minn.—(ACP)—A survey of the employment record of former University of Minnesota athletes discredits a common belief that collegiate stars shine less brightly after graduation.

Clarence Osell, instructor in orthopedics, made a study of the extensive file on former Minnesota athletes.

He discovered that 27 per cent of the former athletes now are professional men, 13 per cent salesmen, 9 per cent engineers, 7 per cent executives, and 6 per cent teachers.

"Only five of 722 athletes are now engaged in professional athletics," Osell said.

Athletes are potentially better automobile drivers than non-athletes, according to tests at Pennsylvania State College.

Akley Allows Four Hits; Sullivan Clouts Triple

The Cats, in the person of one Clarence Akley, chalked up their third straight victory in the state series and their second straight over Middlebury with a score of 6-3. Akley who subdued the Panthers with two hits just a week before, was nearly as successful Thursday, holding the home club to four safeties. He was not as successful in the run column however, for one of the hits was the four-bagger by Ed Yoemans which brought in two runs in the fourth inning. Harry van Gaasbeck, the Middlebury twirler, was responsible for eleven solid hits. His teammates made six errors to lessen his effectiveness.

Sig Sysko led off by beating out a bunt for a hit, going to second on Spasyk's drive through short. Frank Taylor intended to bunt, but landed on second when Turner, the Middlebury third baseman overthrew first, allowing Sysko and Spasyk to score. Doherty, Beauchemin and Smith were easy outs to retire the side.

The Panthers tied it up in the fourth when Bob Sheehan beat out a roller down to third. Yoemans than slammed the next one out into deep right for a home run, scoring Sheehan and himself.

The score remained 2-all until the top of the seventh, when Sysko started it off by singling to center field, only to make it a round-trip on Shea's error. The Cats made it 5 to 2 in the eighth, with Beauchemin and Wood rounding the paths on three Middlebury errors. Spasyk singled in the ninth, went to second on an infield out, and scored on Doherty's single to centerfield.

The only Panther threat was in the ninth when, Cruess, pinch-hitting for Hawes, received a pass from Akley. Taking second on a passed ball, he scored on Turner's hit.

Akley was pitching great ball, making the Panthers hit into the air or into the dirt, and was given excellent backing-up by the infield. He struck out four and walked two, with one walk bringing in a run in the ninth.

Spasyk had a perfect day, handling eleven chances without an error, figuring in Vermont's 16th double killing of the season, and getting three singles out of five trips to the plate. Sysko, Doherty and Wood got two apiece, with Taylor getting a double and Sullivan a triple to complete the Vermont hits.

Cat Harriers Take Fourth Place In E. I A. A. Meet

Kittens Trackmen Victors In Dual Meet

Barry and Reed Each Capture Two Firsts

Friday, May 16, the Kitten harriers made their third entry in the victory column by overwhelming the combined talent of Brattleboro and Bellows Falls High Schools by the score of 65⅓-51⅔.

Sparked by stalwarts John Reed and Bob Barry, who annexed two first places each, the Frosh trackmen glided along comfortably, garnering markers in every event except the javelin throw.

In the 440-yard dash, Bob Pulleyn in masterful fashion broke the tape at 54.1", leaving his opponents in a cloud of dust.

A few minutes later, Pulleyn was leading the crowd in the 880-yard run; to the surprise of the frenzied rooters, Sherwood Moore, state scholastic 880 and mile champ from Brattleboro, put on a brilliant sprint in the last 88½ yards and passed Pulleyn to win in grand stype.

Vermont's Paterson and Brattleboro's Gunzinger were awarded first place titles for their ten-foot pole vault.

Freshman Goodrich high jumped 5' 5" to first place.

Lockwood took a first in the discus with a beautiful throw of 105' ½", followed closely by teammate Red Paterson. Barry received his first places in the 120 high hurdles at a 16.7" clip and the 220 low in 25". Reed took the 100-yard dash in the speed of 10.5" and completed his day's successes in the 220-yard dash with the lightning velocity of 23.3 seconds.

If the result of this fracas is any criterion, Archie Post can rest assured that his task of refining next year's track material will be much easier than in the recent past.

The summary:

100-yard dash: Won by Reed (V); 2nd, Walgren (V); 3rd, McMann (BF). Time: 10.5 sec.

Bert Mott Beats Tuft's 220-Yard Dash Star, Ed Duggor

A jubilant U. V. M. track and field team returned Sunday from Worcester, Mass., and the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association's annual track meet with fourth place tucked away and a first place in the 220-yard dash held by Bert Mott, who defeated Tufts' great colored ace, Ed Dugger, by three feet in this run. Mott's time, running against a head wind, was 22.8 seconds.

Tufts, with Dugger and Hall, its co-captains, scoring five firsts and two seconds between them, rolled up 43¼ points to win the meet once more as it did last year. Second place went to Connecticut University with 37⅙ points, Colby was third with 19⅚ points and Vermont fourth with 17 points. The rest of the field were Boston University, Worcester Tech, Middlebury and Massachusetts State in that order.

Mott also competed in the 120-yard high hurdles and the 220-yard low hurdles, finishing in fifth place in both events. Entered in the broad jump, Bert was forced to withdraw because his legs tightened up.

Mott's win was the only first place for Vermont all afternoon as Norm Stoddard finished fifth in the mile run and F. Webster finishing seventh in the two-mile run.

In the other events Vermont scored consistently. Hugo Squire got second place in the discus throw and a fourth in the hammer. He tossed the platter for a distance of 114 feet.

In the javelin Daly of the Cats annexed a third, giving Vermont three more points. Grosvenor also aided, squeezing into a four-way tie for second place.

In the pole vault Vreeland and O'Connell were in a four-way tie for fourth place. They both jumped 10 feet 6 inches.

Cat Netmen Bow To Middlebury College, 6-3

The varsity tennis team journeyed to Middlebury last Thursday where they were taken by a 6-3 score.

Today the Cats meet Norwich and on Thursday Middlebury will play a return engagement on the Vermont home courts. The Catamounts will probably line up with the Simpson brothers, Sam Foti, Dick Lynch, Bill West, Wolk and Bill Pratt.

Shot put: Won by Masten (BF); 2nd, Sedlis (V); 3rd, Kent (BF). Distance: 45 ft., 4 in.

Discus throw: Won by Lockwood (V); 2nd, Paterson (V); 3rd, Bergquis (BR). Distance: 105 ft., ½ in.

Javelin throw: Won by Duffy (BR); 2nd, Bergquis (BR); 3rd, Fontaine (BF). Distance: 144 ft.

High jump: Won by Goodrich (V); 2nd, Walgren (V); tie for third, Moore and Pierce (BR) and Lockwood (V). Height, 5 ft., 5 in.

Pole vault: Tie for first, Gunzinger (BR) and Paterson (V); tie for third, Lovell and Fontaine (BF) and Duffy (BR): Height: 10 ft.

Broad jump: Won by Duffy (BR); 2nd, Barry (V); 3rd, Lockwood (V). Distance: 19 ft., 4½ in.

Frosh Ballers Lose To Green Mountain J. C.

For the second time in four days the Kitten baseball team lost to G. M. J. C. by a 17-4 verdict. For the first three innings it was a ball game, but after that turned into a rout.

The first inning saw the Kittens with one run. By the third the score was tied 3 all. In the fourth the Mountaineers piled up four more runs and then added a lone run in the sixth. All this time the Kittens remained scoreless except for the three runs they already had acquired. A big burst of nine runs in the eighth by the Mountaineers gave them a lead of 13 runs and victory.

Eat The Right Food

Prepared by MILLA NEWLAND

Vitamin B_1

Vitamin B_1, or thiamin chloride, to give it its chemical name, has been occupying the center of the nutrition stage for quite a time. One can hardly turn on the radio or glance through a paper or magazine without having this vitamin brought to one's attention. Why all this special consideration?

First, because vitamin B_1 is necessary if people are to make proper use of the starches and sugars that they eat. Lack of thiamin also affects certain nerves, causing a variety of muscular and nervous conditions.

Second, because vitamin B_1 is especially apt to be lacking in the diets of Americans who allow habit alone to guide their food choices. This vitamin occurs in many kinds of foods: Milk, meat, eggs, vegetables, and fruit, but not in particularly large quantities in any one of them. Seeds are the foods richest in thiamin: nuts, beans, peas and grains. However, no one wants to eat beans and nuts every day, and in the manufacture of white flour much of the thiamin is removed. Our great-grandfathers used to get about ten times as much in the bread they ate as we can from ordinary white bread today. To make up for this lack, at least two servings of a whole-grain bread or cereal or of the new enriched bread should be eaten daily.

The enriched flours and breads now offered for sale have had thiamin chloride added to them to make up for that which was taken out in manufacture. The use of the whole-grain or enriched breads, along with the milk, meat, eggs, vegetables, and fruits in the protective diet should furnish the five hundred to six hundred units needed daily by adults for a full degree of health.

Governor Wills Urges Faculty To Strengthen Morale Of The University

Legislation Appropriations and Financial Reports Discussed at Meeting Held at Museum

Assuring the faculty of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College he has absolute confidence in the future of the University and in the cooperation and united effort of all interested groups, Gov. William H. Wills told faculty members in the Fleming Museum:

"It would be of tremendous help to have you say now: 'We will face realities, we will make present sacrifices for the sake of the total and future good, we will show the people of Burlington and Vermont that we are ready, willing and anxious to do our part whatever it may entail.'"

The governor spoke to U. V. M. faculty and to student representatives in the Fleming Museum here in a preliminary and general report of his views of the University problems. It was the first public report he has made since he began an investigation of University affairs the week after legislature adjourned in April and was given at the faculty's request. The legislature appropriated $150,000 for the College of Medicine and State Agricultural College and authorized the University to bond for a sum not to exceed $675,000, both contingent upon the governor's approval of a financial program to be submitted to the governor by the trustees.

No Survey Data Disclosed

Although the governor secured the services of R. S. Johns of the New York auditing firm of Haskins and Sells, and Dr. Paul C. Packer, representative of the Carnegie Foundation and dean of the College of Education at the University of Iowa, in conducting a financial and educational survey, his speech contained none of their reports.

After reviewing previous crises which the University has weathered, Wills declared, "Today this institution does face a real crisis, but it is a crisis relatively no more serious, and in many respects not so serious, as it has faced in the past, from which it always has emerged with renewed vigor and vitality."

Small Considering Assets

Terming the fact that the operating deficit is running at over $200,000 a year, the most serious phase of the present crisis, the governor pointed out that upon the completion of the Waterman building the University will own real estate, furnishings and equipment valued conservatively at over $6,000,000 and that its debts are comparatively small in relation to that sum. The debts are made up of loans from banks and annuity payment obligations. "These payments, incidentally, will cost the college about $45,000 in 1942," Wills remarked.

He added, however, that in the great majority of cases these annuity contracts have worked out to the great benefit of the University.

Use of Securities Restricted

"On the other side of the account," he continued, "the University owns securities which have a market value in excess of all debts, but the greater part of which are held subject to various restrictions and for certain special purposes, and therefore are not available for application directly to the payment of University debts. In addition, the University has several hundred thousand dollars invested in student loans, which constitute a revolving fund for the assistance of worthy students."

Urges "Building Up Morale"

The governor mentioned the various groups interested in the University's welfare, and urged them to "organize and unite as a single force acting in one direction and striving for a definite goal building up the morale of this institution," and to "follow leadership in building this University upon a firmer foundation than ever before, both along educational and finan-

President Invited By Governor Wills

To Speak at Capitol Regarding Anniversary

An official invitation to the president of the United States to visit Vermont and speak to a great throng of Vermonters from the steps of the Vermont state house as the climax of the state's sesquicentennial will be forwarded to Washington shortly by Gov. William H. Wills, in the hope that the president, notwithstanding the pressure of events, will find it possible to attend. Similarly, an invitation will be extended to the governors of the thirteen original states which admitted Vermont into the Union 150 years ago. The dates tentatively set for this great meeting in Montpelier are Friday, August 29, or Saturday, August 30; but if the presidents find those dates unfavorable, the time may be changed.

The foregoing were some of the decisions reached at the joint meeting of the legislative sesquicentennial committee, headed by Senator Walter Hard of Manchester, and the citizens' sesquicentennial committee, of which Prof. Arthur W. Peach of Norwich University is chairman.

Present

Others present were: Senator Alfred Heininger of Burlington and Representatives Mrs. Julius A. Willcox of Plymouth, Chester M. Kirby of Williston, and Raeburn McMahon of Morrisville, all members of the legislative committee; and Mrs. C. Leslie Witherill of Shoreham, Prof. Leon Dean of the University of Vermont, Secretary James P. Taylor of Burlington, former Mayor Birnie L. Hall of Montpelier, Charles L. Dennison and Charles E. Crane.

The joint committee went on record as sponsoring all forms of local celebration throughout the state during the summer and as urging the co-operation of all civic bodies. Professor Peach announced that from 50 to 100 communities have some

Reading Contest Held Wed., May 21

Gloria Farrell '43 won the first prize in the Julia Spear Prize Reading Contest held at Southwick the evening of May 21. The runners up were Flora Fifield '42, second prize, and Faye Lipman '43, third prize. The awards were $15, $10, and $5.

"Thrush" was the title of the selection that Gloria Farrell read so well. Flora Fifield gave "A Dilemma" and Faye Lipman, "Sans Camouflage."

This unusual contest was started by Miss Julia Spear who liked to have people read to her and left money to the University of Vermont to be distributed to the girls who showed ability to read.

The judges for the evening were Miss Louise Reynolds, Miss Mary Sullivan, and Dr. C. H. Benedict.

Senior Class Plans Boatride and Song Fest

To close the year with something to remember all summer, the senior class is planning a moonlight boatride and song fest on Saturday, May 31. The festivities are scheduled to begin at 8.00 p.m. at which time the Ticonderoga will set sail with its crew of merrymakers. There will be dancing to the music of the Catamounts and a song fest during the sail. Students are urged to support this scheme because it will be the last time everyone will have to get together before summer vacation and the seniors, especially, should be out in a body. Some faculty members have promised their support and it is hoped that more will swell the ranks of the celebrators. If this ride is successful others may be held in the future.

Tickets for the ride are on sale at the University Book Store for 75 cents per person. In charge of the affair are Eddie Guilbert and Lyman Gallup.

Bayonet Drill and Weapons Demonstrated At Review Held in Gym; Many Awards Made

The Annual Military Inspection was held Wednesday and Thursday, May 21 and 22. Lt.-Col. Wm. A. Collier of the General Staff Corps, First Corps Area headquarters, was the inspecting officer.

At 8.30 Wednesday morning the Battalion Review and Inspection was held. During the remainder of the morning the students were examined under the direction of the inspecting officer. Wednesday afternoon property, storerooms and records were inspected.

Wednesday evening at 8.00, as the highlight of the entire inspection, warfare under realistic combat conditions was graphically demonstrated by members of the R. O. T. C. Battalion. The ceremony was different from the ones presented in recent years, but accurately portrayed the type of military training received by young men at the University. No fraternity drill squad competition was held, but special demonstrations were given by the freshmen, sophomores and juniors. The freshmen gave a demonstration drill, the sophomores a bayonet and gas drill, and the basic and advanced course men a weapon demonstration. Trench mortars, anti-tank weapons, heavy machine guns, and automatic rifles were among the equipment used by the cadets. Student commentators from the four classes described and explained the demonstrations, as they were presented. The R. O. T. C. Band, under the direction of Mr. Joseph F. Lechnyr, played various musical selections during the program.

At the close of the program the prizes were presented. Awards were announced by Cadet Major John S. Greene and Cadet Adjutant L. A. Simpson. They were awarded as follows:

Formation of battalion, Cadet Major John S. Greene; the National Anthem, R. O. T. C. Band; welcome by the professor of military science, Col. Merrill E. Spalding; bayonet and gas drill, sophomore volunteer section; musical selection, R. O. T. C. Band; weapons demonstration, basic and advanced course men; musical selection, R. O. T. C. Band; demonstration drill, freshman volunteer section; musical selection, R. O. T. C. Band; announcement of awards, Cadet Major John S. Greene and Cadet Adjutant Lawrence A. Simpson; dismissal of colors.

Guy M. Page Will Discuss Tuition

Will there be any further tuition raises? What was the reason for the recent raise? What is the financial condition of the University? These are some of the questions Guy M. Page, trustee of the University of Vermont, will discuss with the student body at 4.00 p.m., Monday, May 26 in the Ira Allen Chapel. All students are urged to attend as Mr. Page has prepared a special statement on the present condition of the University and plans for the future because many members of the student body have been complaining at the lack of information regarding tuition raises and general problems affecting them. Any student who has a question he would like to have answered by Mr. Page is requested to leave it with Dean Swift or Mr. Page.

Recitals Planned By Music Students

On Tuesday evening Southwick Hall was the scene of the first recital of piano, voice and violin students of the Music Department. Excellent music was presented to an appreciative audience by the several students, the majority of whom were underclassmen and juniors.

Those appearing in the recital were Errol Slack, piano; Keith Calkins '44, baritone; Dorothy Rockwell '42, soprano; Nora Hill '42, piano; Gloria Farrell '43, soprano; A. Elizabeth Cole '41, violin; Nora Hill '42, soprano; Earlene Jenness '43, soprano; Orrin Brawn '42, bass; Ruth Cooley '42, soprano; Dorothy Rockwell '42, piano; Ruth Hopkins '41, soprano; Doris Squire '43, contralto; Theresa Coderre '43, coloratura soprano; A. The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College

VOL. 59 MAY 23, 1941 NO. 59

Hearing that some of the students were desirous of knowing the pros and cons of the recent tuition raise and also about the general financial condition of the University, the administration has asked Guy M. Page, one of the trustees, to talk to the students on ths present condition of this institution and future plans for settling difficulties. We think it is only proper to expect that every student be present in the Chapel, Monday, when Mr. Page reads his statement.

The recent tuition poll published in the CYNIC revealed that the students had in many cases little knowledge of the problems now confronting the University. It, also, revealed that many students were doubtful as to just what changes might be expected in the future. Conversations with several administration heads indicated that they were very much interested in this expression of student opinion. No statement has been made prior to now because many on the administration were not aware of student sentiment.

Naturally Mr. Page cannot be expected to answer all questions as to University finances and plans definitely but he is going to try to give the students a clear picture of the existing situation and its effect on student interests. Mr. Page already has a tentative list of questions to be answered at the meeting Monday and would welcome others from the students.

Here's your chance! For some time now we have heard students asking for information or saying "What can we do about it?" when confronted with a campus problem. The administration has chosen a spokesman to present its views. It is up to us to at least lend him an ear. This should be a definite step toward cooperation between student body, faculty and administration.

For two weeks now we have been advancing the idea of an active student council. The foregoing remarks seem to emphasize this suggestion. If we had had an alert student council it could have informed the administration what students were thinking on the matter of tuition and University finances and the report might have come sooner. Also, the student council could have given the administration an idea of the effect on students of a tuition raise. This would have kept the issues clear right from the start and avoided much confusion.

Perhaps we are a little optimistic in believing that a simple organization will solve all our problems. But certainly it will be a start toward removing present defects. Right now the students do not believe any effort on their part will influence faculty and administration and the latter have very little knowledge of student opinion. No coordinating agency exists.

We hope that something can be done about this before vacation comes on. We realize that examinations start next week and all that but isn't the present student council in a position to at least formulate plans to be approved and put into effect next year? Two problems to be considered, we have already mentioned, namely, how to obtain a democratic election system on the campus? and what sort of group the council will be? Why not consider answers to these two questions right now?

Reading Period—Again

Thus far suggestions for a reading period have had no definite answer. With examinations almost here we think it is too late to work out a better schedule system, perhaps it could be arranged to provide one or two days to the period with the intention of finding a more satisfactory solution to the problem next year. At any rate we would welcome some notice from those in charge of the examination schedule.

The Body of An American . . .

From the Novel (1919) By John Dos Passos

(The following is an excerpt from "Nineteen-Nineteen" second in the author's trilogy "U. S. A." mirroring the pageant of American history during the period of the First World War. With the military inspection coming off this week and Memorial Day not far off, this excerpt may still have value as representing a point of view which Archibald MacLeish has called "irresponsible." We present it here without comment. But may we ask—"Quo vadis, America. Quo vadis, humanity?" Was the tragedy of the post-war world pacifism or was it a failure to find the right kind of pacifism?)

All the Washingtonians brought flowers.

Woodrow Wilson brought a bouquet of poppies.

Herbert Elliott Writes Poetry "Just For Fun"

"A farm is an artists' colony all by itself. It has the mountains, the romance of great winds, barn swallows shooting through the dawn, cows with fine music in bells... It has the fire of maples in October, and the sudden blossoms of snow. It has wild raspberries and thrushes, quick rains and slow fogs. Anyone who has lived on a farm, especially, a Vermont farm, and had used his eyes and ears has met all sorts of poetry, even though he has never read a poem in his life.

And now a word or two about by experience with writing poetry. First of all, I read dozens of volumes of poetry and liked it. Then I tried writing it. I found that some of my friends liked what I wrote, so I began to send some of my best things to editors. They liked them too—sometimes, and mailed me nice checks. So I made a rule not to send them to magazines which didn't pay for the poems they printed. There is money in poetry, but remember, it takes sincerity to write a poem. It's more than a matter of meter and rhyme."

And that in a nutshell is how Herbert Elliott, U. V. M. El. Ed. junior feels about his poetry. Herbert hasn't been writing tor too long—he started about three years ago "just for the fun and because I liked it." Apparently others liked it too. He sent some of his things to the New York Times where several of them have been printed. Others have appeared in Yankee and a number of religious publications, and they're still coming on.

Herbert's favorite poet is Robert Frost whom he met a few years ago. His subject matter is much like Frost's—mainly concerned with New England countryside about which Herbert is well qualified to write.

Born in Canada

He was born in Canada but came to the United States at the age of six and has spent the intervening years on their farm near St. Johnsbury where he became as he says, "thoroughly Yankeeized." He is the second of five boys, but doesn't plan to work the farm. Before coming to U. V. M. he went for two years to normal school, then taught for four years, and when he gets out he plans to return to teaching. When asked if he'd rather teach than write poetry for a vocation, he answered in the affirmative. "After all," he reasoned, "I've got to make a living." Most papers and magazines pay rather well for poems—as far as pin money goes.

Odd as it may seem, for all his reading poetry and liking it, Herbert never tried writing it till a few years ago. He usually writes at night before going to bed—that's when you're most relaxed except for the thought of getting up next morning. Sometimes he spends a few hours on a short poem so as to get the effect he wants—as for instance this one, printed in the New York Times, May 6, 1941:

Spring Tonic - More or Less Literary

"The Color Of Your Truck"

by Doris Jareckie '42

Nancy felt happy walking up Main Street in the lights, arm in arm with Nathan. Her mind was still filled with rosy images from the movie they had seen, it was Saturday night, and they were hungry. They passed an especially bright window, and she looked up at Nathan and was proud. She was proud of his honest brow and nose, his strong mouth, and his blue eyes that looked at the world so squarely. She was even proud of the rough redness of his skin, and the thick knuckles of his hands. That showed that he worked often and hard. It made her proudest of all.

She felt very fine in the hat that she had newly decorated and wore tilted forward over her forehead. The little veil around the edge gave her a smart feeling that was intoxicating. What did it matter if her old brown coat was worn on all the seams, and needed taking up? What if there was a mended run in her stocking? . . . They passed a mirror in a furniture dealer's window, and she furtively glanced at their reflection. They looked like any ordinary couple out for some Saturday night fun. She reached out and took the picture into her heart; they might look like anyone else to the world, but that image belonged to her, and was too precious for anyone to see. She looked up and knew that Nathan had not seen, and was secretly glad.

Nathan steered her through the wide door of the five-and-ten, and in and out through the crowd. People pushed them up against one counter, and they both looked down and saw that it was the jewelry. On a big piece of plush rings were displayed. Something leaped inside of Nancy, and she looked up to catch Nathan's eye, and saw that he was pretending he had not thought of it too, that he was ashamed. He pulled her on, and they went over to the candy counter where he bought a bag of gumdrops. Later they were standing by the chinaware, admiring the patterns in the dishes.

"Nathan," she said.

"What?"

"You know—it really isn't the price of the ring that counts. It's what it stands for. . . . It goes around in a circle and never stops, and that means eternity. That's the part that counts."

His eyes turned down and met hers.

"But wouldn't you be ashamed? Women like to have nice things that they can be proud of."

"I'm proud of you."

He looked off into space. A fat woman with straggly gray hair pushed past, shoving against them with a big wastebasket she was carrying.

"It would take a long time."

"Yes."

He took her arm again, and she could feel the warmth of his hand through the coarse material. They passed people and did not see them.

It was a thrill to lean over the counter and know that there was a choice to be made. Nancy fingered the plain rings first. There was one with little crystal stones all the way around it. She liked it.

"Try it on," said Nathan. But the ring was loose.

The salesgirl looked under the counter and found another just like it, only the stones were set every-other-one close, and that one was just right. Then they looked for a ring with just one stone.

"Here's one just the color of your truck." She held up one with a red stone and a tiny crystal one on each side of it. It fitted almost perfectly.

Bluettes

Georgina Greene '42.

The two great pine-crowned hills
Forked out toward a ridge,
Forming a misty darkening valley
In between.

And the valley was a world
Peopled by towns and cities
And villages of pale-standing silver-wet
Bluettes.

And ever the rain fell,
A soft twilight-shining mist
Making the pines feathery-dark, and the Air sweet.

Introduction . . .

Yes, this is another literary page. Like its predecessors it makes no claims to literary perfection. The idea is simply to get student writings before the student body. If the page can stir up interest in literary activities on the campus it will have achieved its purpose.

This year Winnowings suspended publication. Also, U. V. M. dropped out of the Tri-State Literary Competitions with New Hampshire and Maine. The reason for these two events—was—lack of student support and interest. Getting manuscripts for Winnowings or the contest was like pulling teeth. Those in charge had to literally pursue people and beg them to submit something. It's a sad commentary on a University when students cannot even write enough to fill a small twenty or thirty page annual literary magazine or submit the grand total of three poems, three essays and three short stories for a literary contest.

The writing courses at this University languish for lack of takers while other universities boast crowded schedules for such creative writing courses. Unless something is done about it all literary activity on this campus will simply cease. Some sort of tonic or blood transfusion seems necessary.

Scribes hopes this page and others like it will lead to a revival. All students interested in literary activity should support this attempt. If only interest can be stirred up again Vermont will be able to get back its magazine as well as rejoin the Tri-State contenders.

Judge not what follows too harshly. Remember—if there were more manuscripts to pick from there might be better manuscripts for publication.

Footnote On The Army Brat

Dorothy Thornton '43

He was wanted in three states, and kept the army authorities from finding it out when he had enlisted to get out of a hot spot. It took him only three months to wind up in the guardhouse, supposedly for a long, long stay. Slugger had no such intentions, however. He had wormed his way out every time, he had outwitted every kind of law and he called the United States Army no exception.

Slugger laughed when they told him to quiet down and serve his time. He began planning the first day. There was a young rookie in "C" battery who he could wrap around his little finger. The rookie could make the arrangements for a fast car as soon as Slugger gave him twenty dollars. Twenty dollars—he had figured it down to the last cent. Winning the rookie had been easy, but for a prisoner to get a hold of twenty bucks.—It had taken ingenuity but he had found a way.

Slugger was on garbage detail, an unlovely occupation to be sure, but one that offered golden opportunities in the form of bottles. Yes, bottles—medicine bottles, milk bottles, perfume bottles, whiskey bottles, every kind of bottle was thrown into garbage pails and from pails to the big lumbering garbage wagon that made the rounds of the post and creaked out to the post dump. Slugger had neglected not a one, with infinite care and patience he saved them from breakage in the wagon and at the dump he had a special section just for his bottles, where the guards would not bother them. For seven months he stuck to it—collecting bottles until he never wanted to see another bottle. At last one day he figured he had enough. The fellow from "C" battery paid a call.

"Did you see that junkdealer?" asked Slugger.

"Yep. He says that he'll be out this afternoon. He'll see you at the dump."

"That's swell," said Slugger. "That easy-going fellow is on guard and he'll let the dealer talk business with me. As soon as I get the dough for the bottles I'll pass it on to you. Now you've got to make the arrangements for the get-a-way."

The rookie promised and Slugger went to work, sure that this was one of the last times he would be on garbage detail.

They had reached the non-com back line when a couple of boys, "army brats," began following them, sticking their slingshots in their belts and mocking every movement of the guards. When this failed to amuse either the guards or the prisoners they began questioning the latter.

"Say, Slugger," asked one, "what did they put you up there for?"

Slugger, thinking of his approaching freedom, did not answer.

"Hey, Slugger, gettin' high-hat, aren't you? Maybe they made you a serg."

The boys and the guards broke into laughter at this.

Slugger felt his anger rise. "Go home to your mammas, babies," he shouted.

This caused an explosion from the boys, which Slugger answered with more remarks of a similar nature. The wagon progressed quite a-ways, while this bantering continued, until finally one of the boys picked up a smooth stone and aimed his slingshot very carefully at Slugger.

"This will take care of you, you ole jailbird."

As Slugger supposed, the guard intervened.

"None of that. You can't go shooting rocks at our prized prisoner."

The disappointed boys trudged on behind, searching for comebacks to the remarks hurled at them in rapid-fire succession from the grinning Slugger, who was having the time of his life. He felt even better when they reached the dump and he spied a man waiting for him.

"What have you got for me, bud?" called the junkman.

"The finest mess of glassware you ever laid eyes on. Everything from punchbowls to jelly jars. A bargain at twenty dollars. I'll show it to you," answered Slugger and nodding towards the guard, if my escorts willing I'll go around to where I keep the stuff and you can see it."

It was then that Slugger noticed a faint crack and then another and another, until finally there was a continuous stream of tiny explosions.

Slugger, with the guard in tow, hurried over to the bottle pile. When he reached it he gave a cry of dismay. Perched in a tree, well-supplied with pebbles, the two army brats were loading and firing away with deadly accuracy at his beautiful glass collection. Slugger swore, screamed, and threatened murder, while the boys answered with cat-calls and more shots. The junkman mumbled something about wasting the afternoon and left. Slugger sat down and watched, unable to believe it, as seven months of back-breaking work went to pieces. Finally the last quart jar went crash and the last wine glass ping, and Slugger stared at a pile of broken glass.

"I can't understand it," moaned Slugger aloud. "I thought I had planned on everything. Why did it go wrong at the last minute?"

"Slugger," said the guard, "you took account of all except one little thing—the fact that an army brat was, is, and always will be an army brat. Come on, we've got another load today."

Consuetude Consumed

Huddee Zwick '43.

You were born in the shadow of watching eyes
And always played in the shade of the white oak;
You never drank the cool wine with much surprise
For lips were always there to taste it first
And your thirst was always satisfied.

But what happened last night
With the flare of wild duck wings
Singed by tumbling sun?
What happened with the pounding hum
That dissolved the silent score of night?

You uttered an unuttered cry;
I saw your cold eyes plunge down
And then leap up,
Heaped up with orange wings flapping
In those long-napping cold eyes.
The birds are still whirring North
But their wings are in your eyes.

It Is Up To Us

by Jacob Katz '44

We face many problems today. What can we do with them? I cannot give you a solution, but I hope that through our mutual help we shall find ways and means to realize our present position and try to solve some of our troubles. Whether you agree or disagree with me, please, voice your opinions, because alone we are mightless; united, however, we can shape our own destiny.

I know that during spring and summer our chief interest is baseball, but let us remember that Hank Greenberg is in the army now. We might find our greatest trouble to be at the moment, whether to go twice or three times to the movies each week, but also there one famous actor after another disappears to devote his time to more important things than giving enjoyment to other people for a couple of hours.

Is there something more important? Have we to "revalue our values" in a time of crisis? Or can we go on living in the same old pattern even today? We do not know. We are dumbfounded. Is it worth while to study, we ask ourselves, when we realize that we might not be living in a few months? Isn't it futile to construct when all this destruction is going on? We become discouraged; in the background the old grinning fiend appears and whispers into our ears, "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we might die." We follow his guidance and arrive safely at the sugarhouse. There our worries cease for a while, emptiness remains longer; however, no solution is found.

We have a hard time. We are told to make sacrifices and we do not feel like sacrificing. Didn't we proclaim just yesterday that we are selfish, that we intend to live only a life which will give us the fullest measure of personal enjoyment without regarding the needs of the world? Today we resent because the near future might destroy this selfish structure and we look out for immediate enjoyment, as much as we can get, and do not try to find a solution to the problem which confronts us at this moment and which has confronted youth for thousands of years; the problem of how to avoid wars. After that problem will have been solved, we will lose our uneasiness and will be able to derive happiness coupled with a great striving for improvement.

Whenever we discuss the factors necessary for a permanent peace, we usually despair quickly. What's the use, we say, point at the present situation and realize for a second the hopelessness of our present position. We never realize, however, that it might be our own fault that we have to go to war every twenty-five years. We never realized that a problem cannot be solved by getting drunk or evading the issue, by saying that it does not bother us or by admitting a defeat in stating that we are too small and too weak to do anything about it. We must find a solution to every problem, as there would not be any value in our living, in our constructive building if we, homines sapientes, would not even be able to control wars. Then let us rather go back to the ape stage where our wars would at least be an individual fight for existence only and not a wholesale slaughter of men, women and children. There the fight would destroy merely some of the trees we swing about and not all the structural feats of civilization we have erected by means of the efforts of our best men.

I cannot present the solution to our problem. It is a fault of our education that we only gather information and lack the capacity to apply it in our daily lives. We are not taught original thinking. We avoid the labor of "chewing" our problems and merely absorb them in a predigested solution without any efforts whatsoever. We have to learn to think and to draw our own conclusions. We must realize always that every issue has to be faced at one time or another and that a long delay does harm our interests. We have to start immediately.

In a few weeks all of us shall go home and we shall have time to consider all our problems, whether they are personal, national, or international. We shall be back at school some three months later and let us then be in a better position to deal with the tasks before us. We, the college students, should be the mental elite of the country. We have the opportunities and must not waste them. We have to work not only for our private interests but much more for the good of the whole which in the end will more than repay us. We have to demand that we see, think and act.

English Harbor

Margaret Joy Sandall.

There will be morning mist, drifting,
Here on the water's crest
Long years from now.
And fog will spread long fingers to the shore.

There will be tall trees surrendering, quietly,
To cool color
Emerging from a weary winter dawn.

From a cottage window
A flutter of white,
And out in the harbor a captain will momentarily turn
Waving an answer to his love,
Then with a curt command
Look once more to the churning sea.

So it was some twenty years ago
And so it will be tomorrow.
There will be courage, streaming,
Here on the water's crest.
For sons of England will always turn from shorelines
With the morning and the mist
In their hearts!

Sing For Your Supper

by Fulvio Bardossi '42

"This is one swell day for ducks," muttered Red as he hit the cinders, feet braced to take the shock. Naturally the freight had to be the wrong one. God, but it was coming down.

There ought to be a shack along here somewheres. There was one the last time he was through. He shifted his pack a little more comfortably on his shoulders, jammed his hands in his pockets and shuffled along the ties. The rain crawled into all the convenient places—his shirt collar and the thin soles of his shoes. Pretty soon he was his own accompanist with a monotonous two-tone variation of "squish."

All in all, it had been one hell of a day. First there was that railroad dick at Tidewater. A lead pipe behind the ear would be just the thing for a guy like that. Then there was that cross-eyed spinster at Midville who thought that two-bits and a prayer equaled one cord of split wood. God bless my infernal soul. And now the rain was running down the visor of his cap and cascading off his nose. If he didn't find that shack pretty quick he'd be sprouting web feet.

But the bacon and the cigarettes made up for it. He felt in his pants pocket for the fixings and felt cheerful as his hand came in contact with the dry tobacco sack and the thin papers. The bacon was safe in his pack.

"Courtesy of A&P," he thought and would have smiled only the rain found another breach in his shoe. The store had been a self-service store. "Self-service is right." It took a little ingenuity but the clerk wasn't looking and the bacon fitted nicely between the sport page and Emily Post. Nothing like a newspaper. The chain stores would never miss a pound of bacon.

It was pretty dark by now with the sky the color of muddy branch water and the rain dropping down in solid bars. The shack leaned toward him forlornly, its door swinging outward like a feeble arm. Red stepped inside, stamped his feet on the dirt floor and then proceeded to hunt for his jack-knife. With this he went out into the rain again and hacked off some limbs from the trees which lined the embankment. The water laid cool fingers on him. Fervently he swore.

With his damp cargo he went back to the shack and proceeded to baby a fire into being with the aid of some shavings from the loose board on the door. By God, this was more like it. Just wait until he got that bacon and those beans going. His stomach went jumpy at the thought.

Catamounts Wallop Cadets 12-2 For Fifth Straight

Carlson Hurls Eight Hit Ball; Norwich Commits Eight Errors

Taking advantage of eight Norwich errors, the Catamounts hung up their fifth straight win of the year by whitewashing the Cadets 12-2. Having recovered from a long illness, Bob Carlson returned to the mound to hurl a splendid game, allowing only eight well-scattered hits. This is the second time this year that Vermont has turned back the Horsemen and this victory gives Vermont a perfect score of four won and none lost toward annexing another Vermont baseball championship.

For two and one-half innings both teams played scoreless ball but in their half of the third the Catamounts unleashed their attack. After the smoke had cleared, U. V. M. had scored five runs on three scratch hits, two bases on balls, two Norwich errors, and one wild pitch.

Bud Sawyer, the Cadets' freshman speed-baller, was victimized by the most unimaginable support ever witnessed on Centennial Field. Eight official errors were recorded against Stuffy McInnis' boys as they handed the game to Vermont letting eight unearned runs cross the plate.

Sawyer, after pitching two hitless innings in which he struck out two men, had the dam burst in his face. It was in this hilarious frame that the Catamounts scored their five runs without once hitting the ball out of the infield. With such poor support, one could hardly blame Sawyer for his erratic pitching.

Coming in for their half of the fourth Norwich pushed their first run across. Raymond hit out to Doherty in left making it one out. Then Don Maynard stepped into the batters' box. With the count nothing and one against him, he stepped into one of Carlson's side-arm offerings and blasted a mighty triple to right field, the ball bouncing where the marker reads 400 feet. In any other ball park it would have gone for a circuit clout but with the long fields at Centennial, it only went for three bases. Cronin sent him home with a ringing single to left but the following batter, French, hit into one of the two double plays Vermont executed against the Horsemen.

There was no scoring done by Vermont in their half of the fourth and Norwich was held scoreless in their half of the fifth.

In the home half of the fifth the Catamounts again unleashed a barrage. Big gun Capt. Frankie Taylor uncorked a double to left center. Doherty pushed him down to third with a sacrifice bunt. Beauchemin strode to the batters' box and sent Frankie home with a fielder's choice. Smith popped out to the third baseman. That made it two out with a man on first. Wood sent Hank to second with his single and Randy Sullivan screened a double to left center to send two more runs across the plate.

The sixth inning again found both teams scoring. Costin of Norwich hit a double, an error by Vermont put another man on first. With a man on first and second Maynard hit into the second double play of the day, sending Costin to third. Cronin's single sent Costin home for the Horsemen's last scoring for the afternoon. But Carlson forced French to hit out, thereby ending the Norwich threat.

Vermont evened things up by sending across four more runs. Four singles, a batter hit by a pitched ball, and one error were responsible for this scoring spree.

Hank Beauchemin provided the highlight of the inning coming through, a solid single with bases loaded, to knock across two markers.

The seventh and eighth innings found both teams retired as pitchers Sawyer and Carlson apparently finding the range.

The ninth inning found the Norwich coach entering substitutes into the game but this only proved futile as Carlson effectively turned them back.

Vermont's win over Norwich was its forty-seventh whereas Norwich has defeated U. V. M. only ten times.

The two twin killings executed by the Cats raises their seasonal total to twenty-two in seventeen games, which is believed to be a new record for Vermont.

Score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Norwich	0	0	0	1	0	1	0	0	0	0— 2
Vermont	0	0	5	0	3	4	0	0	x	—12

W.A.A. Terminates Successful Season; Retiring Officers Honored At Picnic

Members of W. A. A. brought to a close a very successful season, Tuesday, May 20. At five o'clock seventy-five members gathered on the steps of Southwick Memorial and then walked to Ledge Road where a picnic supper was enjoyed. Nancy Fawcett '44, introduced Catherine Peterson '42, next year's president.

After welcoming all members and guests, Miss Peterson told of the number of new members in W. A. A. this spring, a total of over sixty, bringing the whole number of active members to 320. Plans for purchasing a cabin for the use of members for week-end parties and picnics were discussed. This will necessitate an increase in the cost of freshman membership and a renewal of upperclassmen's.

Next year's program will include many of this year's events such as the boat ride. There will also be an All-State college field day in the fall on October 11.

Barbara Gallagher '42 then presented Elizabeth Gurney '41, retiring president, a manicure set as a taken of appreciation for all she has done for W. A. A. during the past year. Miss Gurney in turn thanked all members, managers, and especially Miss Cummings and Miss Crowe for their splendid cooperation. The success in all W. A. A. activities is due to the great amount of time and effort spent by Miss Cummings.

Sports Cast

By SCOOP GOLDBERG

A dramatic sequel to the famous "Comedy of Errors" was presented at Centennial Field, featuring the Norwich baseball aggregation. This nine-act play started seriously, but in the fifth act, the Horsemen really began to give out—with five easy runs for the Catamount batsmen and laughs for the spectators. The deluge continued—by the end of the sixth frame, the Cats had amassed their twelve marks. There are only two plausible reasons for the 12-2 final score. First, the matter of the Cadets' erring infield, especially the battery. They demonstrated about the sloppiest ball seen at the field in quite a while. The Norwich pitcher, Sawyer, evidently has had more training in pitching hay. He hurled to batters very poorly and played baserunners worse, never being certain that a throw to first or second would be successful. Also when their catcher, Angier, heaved one to second, the chances were that the ball would find itself in the outfield.

Carlson Parsimonious With Hits and Walks

The second and by far the more important reason for this one-sided contest is the Green and Gold's magnificent playing, much credit being due Bob Carlson. Though this was Bob's first job since April 8, his twirling was that of a busy veteran. He allowed only seven well-scattered safeties and three free passes. Hank Beauchemin's baserunning added that certain circus atmosphere which is usually lacking in most baseball contests. And thus was written down in the annals of the Green and Gold how the baseball nine fully avenged the fiasco in a football encounter with Norwich last fall. Remember No. 50? This victory puts Vermont on top in the state baseball series with four victories out of four starts.

The Cat diamondmen meet Dartmouth College here on Memorial Day. Vast improvements have been made in the Catamounts since the southern trip era. The boys are playing heads-up ball, each man fitting perfectly into the intricate mechanism called a ball club. Precision and accuracy seem to be the keynotes of the Green and Gold's ability on the field, one result of such prowess being the twenty-two double-play record, a laudable achievement indeed. Dartmouth may have beaten Harvard, but that doesn't cut any ice. The Cats will be out there, contesting any Indian attempt to score.

With the Net Men

Commendations to Professor Carpenter are in order. His netmen started the season with a humiliating defeat by Amherst; Der Professor conjured up some supernatural power which is now working wonders with his charges. While the Vermont baseballers were hashing the Stable Boys on the diamond, their tennis brothers were mashing the Stable Boys on the courts.

Bert Mott—Jesse Owens

It is interesting to note that Bert Mott's time in the E. I. A. A. 220-yard dash was only 2.5 seconds short of the A. A. U. record made by Jesse Owens.

Kappa Sigma Annexes Soft Ball League Title

The interfraternity softball league championship was annexed by the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

The final series was the two out of three set-up played against the Phi Sigma Delta team. The Kappa Sigs took the first game 5-3 and the second by a 10-2 score to win the honor for the second straight year.

Vermont Netmen Defeat Norwich

Sweeping the first eight matches, the Vermont tennis team mauled the Norwich netmen 8 to 1 at the Centennial courts. While the Catamount baseball team was demolishing the Horsemen on the diamond, the Vermont netmen were making short work of their visitors, who succeeded in playing only two three-set matches in the six singles matches. Bill West and Larry Simpson were forced to come from behind and win the second and third sets before victory was certain for either of these two men.

Capt. Ed Simpson, Art Wolk, Dick Lynch and Sam Foti mowed down their opposition without much trouble.

In the doubles Sam Foti and Ed Simpson went three sets before obtaining the Cat's seventh straight. Art Wolk and Bill Pratt made it eight in a row, but the team was stopped from a grand slam, when West and Dick Swift bowed in straight sets.

It was Vermont's sixth win as against four defeats. This is a remarkable improvement over last year's aggregation whose average was way below .500. Middlebury will be the next opponent this week.

Morningside College Seniors Fred Davenport and Garry Wallman, who were tied in the all-campus election, are serving in a dual rôle as class president.

Senior scientist with the Byrd Expedition is Dr. F. Alton Wade, a 1926 graduate of Kenyon College.

Catamount Nine To Meet Bowdoin

A three-day trip is in store for the Catamount tossers, who have done considerable traveling this year to complete their twenty-seven-game schedule, this week-end into the beautiful state of Maine. The squad will leave Thursday, play Bowdoin Friday, play Bates Saturday, and return late Saturday evening.

This sally into Maine will bring the Cats up against two of the best nines in that state. At present Bowdoin is assured of at least a tie in the state series with but one more game to go as the deciding factor. Bates, Maine, Colby, and Bowdoin are all fairly evenly matched ball clubs, and it has been a typically hard fought state series with perhaps Bowdoin showing up to best advantage. Coach Linn Wells, who will manage Claremont in the Northern League this summer, must have confidence in two of his players, Dolan and Small, who he has signed to play shortstop and the outfield for him this summer.

The Green and Gold, fresh from victories over Middlebury and Norwich, had a day of rest Wednesday. Bob Carlson showed that he is all that has been said about him when he set down Norwich Tuesday in easy fashion. That gives Larry Gardner four good starting pitchers in Clarence Akley, Al Shaw, Roy Alberghini, and Bob Carlson. For these impending contests it looks as though Roy Alberghini or Al Shaw, if he has recovered sufficiently from the measles, will toe the slab in the first contest and the other in the second. That will leave Coach Gardner with Clarence Akley ready to fog them in against St. Michael's College next Monday in a more important battle, which will bring together the two undefeated teams in Vermont. St. Michael's just recently knocked off Middlebury by a 9-0 count.

The rest of the Vermont line-up will be the same with Charlie Smith retrieving them behind the counting station, Hank Beauchemin, Johnny Spasyk, Randy Sullivan, and Hazen Wood forming the infield, and Bob Doherty, Capt. Frank Taylor, and Sig Sysko patroling the pansy patch.

"Now we'll get one for you, with a real big stone in it." Nathan bent over the counter with his chin in his hand, looking intently. Nancy fingered them all, but he was afraid to touch them.

"I like that green one, Nancy, with the square stone." She picked it up and slipped it on his outstretched finger. It refused to go farther than the second knuckle.

"Never mind—here's another. . . . Oh, it's just right!"

"I like it."

They went up the street hand in hand, proud and happy. Nathan looked at her and smiled, and she smiled back, and then turned away, afraid that someone might intercept their thoughts.

Blackout: Vermont Style

Along the fields the slow fog crawls
And stamps out pastures, woods, and walls.
The hills where grazing cattle were
Are turned into a misty blur,
And grazing cattle in the fog
Are bells along a silver bog.

Herbert doesn't follow any particular rhyme scheme or meter, but just writes according to his mood and the poem.

Recently he entered a manuscript of fifty poems in the Yale University Poets' contest. If he wins, it means that that book of poems will be published and Herbert Elliott may find himself well in the public eye.

But whether he wins or not, in his poetry he certainly follows his own maxim, "Be sincere."

Sing For Supper

The fire was going good now and soon he had the coffee sending up a satisfying odor. The bacon was crinkling up in beautiful brown curls and the beans were simmering in the thick tomato sauce. His last hunk of break was toasting to a smooth texture. Just right for soaking in red hot bacon grease. Damn the rain and damn the whole dripping universe. He spat in the direction of the doorway and bowed in the general direction of A&P. "Our hero sat down to a hearty meal."

"Evening, boss." The words sort of crawled lazily. Red's eyes took in the saddest, longest and droopingest six feet of slapped-together, glued-in-a-hurry negro he had ever seen. Beginning with a hat that had given up the struggle and philosophically lowered its brim, umbrella fashion, the figure included a very spacious forehead, a foot-long chin, arms with hands the size of boxing gloves gently scraping the floor and a pair of shoes curling up in front with a modest appearance of a retiring disposition belying their size (12).

The apparition broke the quiet. "Please, can I share yo' fire?"

"It's there, ain't it?" spat Red and then turned to the important task of eating. The negro stood in front of the blaze, silent and inconspicuous—all six feet of him. And Red began shoveling down warm beans and bacon accompanied by steaming coffee. Then he looked up and saw the negro following the food down—tongue to throat to stomach. His hands waved back and forth like washing on a line. Red was just about to yell "scram" or something worse and then thought better of it. "For the love of Mike sit down and quit staring."

The negro fell in a heap gently like a deflated balloon and without a word took the food and coffee Red half-shoved at him. "Blessed are the charitable for they shall inherit the earth. Oh damn, oh damn, oh damn!" Then it was quiet and the fire talked to the rain.

Red pushed his plate aside, rolled a cigarette and then relaxed. The negro licked his lips, rolled his eyes once and then stared back at Red. The latter scowled. First the dick, then the dame and now this shine. God, what a day! And the rain plugged away outside.

"Like a little music, boss?"

The negro fished a mouth organ out of his pocket and started to shuffle his monstrous feet. And just like that Red began to laugh. God it was funny. He just sat there and laughed and rolled with the pure joy of it. Soon the negro joined in. And there were two of them just sitting there laughing in an old wreck of a shack in the rain with the sky like muddy branch water.

"O.K., Bojangles. Swing it."

And Bojangles flapped his arms twice like a rooster, wiggled his feet and began to scare up "The St. Louis Blues" on the harmonica.

God it was funny!

Staff and Sandal to Sponsor Annual Lilac Day Pageant

Lilac Day is the most beautiful and inspirational tradition of the women of U. V. M., but how softened and hazy this tradition has become through the passing of time.

Lilac Day was planned by our first Dean of Women, Pearl Randall Wasson in 1921, with a two-fold purpose that from the planting of a lilac hedge on Redstone campus, which would greatly increase the beauty of the grounds, there would also be an increase of feeling for the ideals of service and the beauties of nature.

The first Lilac Day was carried out quietly under her guidance. But at the second, Dean Wasson was no longer with us, and Lilac Day became a memorial service under the direction of Mortar Board. A pageant was written by the Literary Club, picturing King and Queen Redstone saddened by the lack of flowers. A prize of gold and the princess' hand was offered to the peasant bringing the most beautiful flower, which turned out to be the lilac. There could be no more appropriate setting for this first pageant, with the brilliant sunlight of a warm spring afternoon, the blue sky, budding flowers and hazy purple mountains in the background. The second tree was planted in the hedge between Redstone and Robinson, and speeches of dedication were given by Student Union officers and class officials. This pageant was repeated for several years and in 1923, a loving cup was established by the alumnae in Dean Wasson's honor, and awarded annually to a junior girl who had been self-supporting and held a high scholastic average.

Interesting innovations were introduced every year in the program. Step singing after the dedication was popular for several years, and in 1925 the seniors wore their caps and gowns. In 1927, the pageant and planting of the lilac tree was held at sunset, followed by singing on Redstone steps and a lantern walk, a procession of girls carrying lights, winding among the trees, a lovely new interpretation of their expression of beauty. In 1928 the program was preceded by a field day at Grassmount.

There have been many different pageants, but it wasn't until 1932 that the aesthetic dancing, to us the most free expression of the joy and beauty of spring was introduced. Ever since, the pageants have been colored by the creative interpretation of dance groups and dance soloists. This year the theme will be "The Bridge of Understanding," showing that the many different races in this country can be more deeply bound together through their mutual love of art, particularly expressed in the freedom of the dance.

The actual planning and carrying out is under the direction of Staff and Sandal, the junior honorary society, but it is the participation, if not physically, at least spiritually, of all the college women which makes this tradition of Lilac Day the supreme expression of beauty in college life.

Museum Notes

Now on display at the Fleming Museum is a hollow bronze head. This bronze casting has a very ancient history and it represents a tribe and a place in Africa which is not in existence now. On one side of this bronze work of art is a map locating the Kingdom of Benin, and also a brief history of this ancient kingdom. On the other side there is a very interesting description of the process of bronze casting. These articles and the map were done by Evelyn Fuller '41.

This Kingdom of Benin is located on the western coast of Africa. It was very important from 1400 A.D. to 1700. This importance was due chiefly to the fact that it exported raw materials. The downfall of the kingdom was due to its religious ceremonies which required human sacrifice. As her religion became decadent, thus calling for more and more sacrifices, it became very dangerous for foreigners to set foot inside this kingdom. Regardless of this, a peaceful group of Englishmen, near the end of the nineteenth century, were all massacred on their way to the city of Benin. As a result of this action an English expedition was sent out to avenge the atrocity and the Kingdom of Benin ceased to be an independent state.

Air Corps Exams Taken Last Week

Thirty-two Vermont young men of 20-26 ages arrived at Boston and Chicopee Falls last week to take Air Corps educational examinations, which occupied two days, May 13, 14, announced the Vermont Flying Cadet Committee recently.

Middlebury, Northfield and Burlington are among the communities sending aspirants. All have passed their final physical examinations.

The candidates who pass these May educational examinations will have appointments to the Army Flying Cadet Corps. They may expect to start their training in southern flying fields in July or August. This seven months' training including about 215 hours in the air and several technical subjects leads to a pair of coveted wings and a second lieutenancy with flying pay and duties. At that point the young pilot will have received specialized individual training, costing Uncle Sam $20,000.

Several scores of Vermont young men are starting this month to refresh or review their high school education. Evening courses are being held in eleven to fourteen different centers in the State. They are preparing for August 12 and 13 Air Corps examinations, which will be held at Fort Ethan Allen as well as in Boston and Chicopee Falls. The State Department of Education, NYA, CCC camps are cooperating with the Vermont Flying Cadet Committee to provide facilities for the qualified young Vermonters who want wings.

Three Seniors Will Do Research Work

Seven students of the Electrical Engineering Department of the University are soon to enter the employ of the General Electric Company. David L. Clark, formerly of Burlington, now completing his work for a Master's Degree at Iowa State College, and a graduate of U. V. M., will be assigned to the Schenectady Test Department. Burton P. Brown who came here from Denver, Colo., and has held an appointment as research fellow, will go to the Schenectady plant, Radio Transmitter Department.

Three of the men to be employed are members of this year's graduating class. They are G. Bernard Dunn, Jr. of Craftsbury Common, Harold G. Carlson of Brattleboro, and John R. Burnett of Burlington. The first two men will go to the Schenectady Test Department, and the latter to the Schenectady Industrial Control Department.

One junior and one sophomore in electrical engineering have also been placed with the General Electric Company. G. H. Stickney '42 of East Thetford will spend the summer in the Turbine Department at the Lynn works of the company, and R. H. Marshall '43 of North Adams, Mass., will spend the summer on lightning research.

form of summer programs in mind, and Secretary Taylor is eager that all persons who are concerned in organizing such local celebrations should send to him definite information about dates and programs in order that a calendar of events can be drawn up with some degree of accuracy. Many inquiries are coming from outside the state regarding Vermont's plans for the summer, and it will be in the interests of each community to make its program known now.

Local Celebration

The Montpelier celebration, in addition to the speech by the president of the United States, and the presence of the thirteen governors, will probably include a parade with historical floats, a baseball game and a public ball, which the Arab patrol will have in charge, and other features which it is hoped will attract the largest crowd Montpelier has known since Admiral Dewey was welcomed home from his triumph at Manila Bay.

Automobile plates to superimpose upon registration plates on automobiles have been designed attractively in colors, and the distribution of these is in charge of the Boy Scouts organization and will be announced soon. Also, there have been cast thousands of token coins in the size of a half-dollar, imitating gold, bearing in relief the likeness of Governor Chittenden and sesquicentennial dates. Former Mayor Birnie L. Hall has charge of the distribution and a full announcement of these plans will be made soon.

Seventy-five Girls Participate In Lilac Day Pageant

Jane Allen Reigns As Queen of Pageant: The Bridge of Understanding

Saturday night the annual Lilac Day Pageant in memory of Dean Pearl Wasson was presented by the Dance Workshop. Seventy-five girls appeared in "The Bridge of Understanding," written and arranged by Miss Blenda Larsen, dance director of the Physical Education Department. Helen M. Witham '42 was general chairman.

Seated on her throne against a background of pine trees, Jane Allen '41 reigned as queen of Lilac Day. Her attendants were Mary Jane Hammond '41, Mary Letta Root '41, Margaret Sandall '42, Jean Saul '41, Sarah Wilson '42, and Harriet Woods '42. Carrying chains of lilac were the queen's court: Maywood Metcalf '41, Laura Hawley '41, Gloria Oling '42, Frances Abel '42, Nancy Goodwin '42, Sally Rome '42, Alice Needham '43, Natalie Spear '43, Margaret Wishart '43, Phyllis Savage '43, Shirley Buckingham '44, and Marilyn Eimer '44.

Janet Hackwell Gives History

The overture was played by the University orchestra under the direction of Mr. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis. Janet Hackwell '43, as orator, explained the history of Lilac Day and gave the keynote of the pageant.:

"When the war is over, it will be the task of enlightened youth to create order in a world full of hate and unreason. There will be a painstaking search for bridges to cross the great gaps of misunderstanding that made this war inevitable. There will be a need for a universal language."

The dancers of the Primitive Ritual created steps and pattern of their dance making an effective appearance with their masks, stringy black wigs, and short black garments.

Varied Peasant Dances

Then followed peasant dances of Europe and Asia, skillfully portrayed in bright colored costumes. To the piano accompaniment of Robert McKee '41, and Stanley Pike '42, and the lively fiddling of Effie E. Winn, a special student, dancers presented the Cachuca, Spanish dance of courtship; the Highland Schottische, a Scottish social dance; Gathering Peascod, English harvest dance; Irish Jig; Swedish Schottische, a social dance; Komari, Hindu dance of a wedding celebration; Komarinskaia, Russian peasant dance; and the Viennese Hop Waltz.

Prof. Youngert Has New Position

Will Be Principal Of Chicago High School

Eugene Youngert, Assistant Professor of Education in the Education Department of the University, will leave the Vermont campus early in June to accept a new position as principal of the Oak Park and River Forest Townships High School. Oak Park and River Forest are suburbs of western Chicago. Professor Youngert was recommended for the position by Columbia University and was singled out and accepted from a long list of candidates.

The high school of which Professor Youngert will be principal has an enrollment of 3,600 pupils and maintains a teaching staff of 160. The school is well equipped for instruction in a wide variety of subjects. Its equipment consists of five buildings; a general classroom building, a building for the teaching of commercial subjects and manual arts, a boys' gymnasium, a girls' gymnasium, and a field house; and a complete visual education library of sound and silent films for the enrichment of classroom work.

The administration set-up includes two deans for each class who attend to the immediate matters of registration, discipline, and attendance. Professor Youngert's duties will include supervision and improvement of instruction with emphasis on meeting needs of each individual pupil in the school, guidance and control of public relations, the recommendation of school policy, and general executive control.

Professor Youngert received his A.B. degree from Augustana College at Rock Island, Ill., and his Master's degree from Columbia. He has done graduate work at the Universities of Chicago and Iowa. He came to the University of Vermont several years ago to join the staff of the Education Department, and in that short time he has come to be one of the best-liked and respected of the Education faculty. Students and faculty have both found him to be not only a teacher but a scholar and a Christian gentleman as well. When Professor Youngert leaves the Vermont campus next week, he will carry with him the admiration and respect of all who know him.

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College

VOL. 59 MAY 27, 1941 NO. 60

The Round-Up

With this issue the CYNIC suspends publication until after exams, when the commencement issue will wind up publication for this year. We would like to use this editorial, therefore, to summarize our editorial policy and emphasize once again certain points that we have been harping on all the past semester.

In the first place, we have been stressing the need for a revival in student spirit and interest in problems and issues affecting them. We have pointed out that in the light of the University's present condition and the gravity of the situation in the world beyond academic walls, Vermont students, more than ever before, must give up their lethargic unconcern and get into the thick of things. As a possible arouser of student activity and interest we suggested an active student council. We also suggested greater activity on the part of such organizations as the International Relations Club.

As a secondary value of the student council, we have pointed out its possible function as a coordinating agency between faculty, administration and students. If these three groups could be brought into closer contact many difficulties could be avoided. Too often in the past there has been an utter lack of coordinated effort on common problems.

Throughout the year we have tried to suggest necessary changes such as the institution of a reading period. We have often hesitated to suggest further changes due to the indifference of many students. Often enough the reforming zeal was brought up short by the oft-quoted "What can we do about it?" As a campus newspaper the CYNIC should be interested in changes which will benefit the student body. But if these changes are to be brought about the student body must take more than a passive attitude toward them. The columns of the newspaper are open to student suggestions. Why not take advantage of this medium for expressing your ideas?

Two or three times during the year we have had an outburst of student communications. These outbursts clearly indicated that when sufficiently aroused the student body will get out its pen and dash off communications of opinion. If this were true of all problems that came up, we wouldn't have to yell for a student revival. If the students can get aroused over military dances and the lease-lend act, they can certainly get aroused over tuition raises, proposed academic changes, the entry of the United States into World War II, and so on, ad infinitum.

In the larger field of world problems, we have tried constantly to stress the importance to democracy of a wide-awake body of citizens. Today as we march the bitter road to participation in another armed conflict, let us not forget our ideals of freedom and let us not take our opinions ready-made from the press and the politicians. When we make a decision, let that decision be based on our inward convictions, on conclusions that will not compromise with intolerance and force.

Today when it is becoming more and more evident that every individual is being forced into an attitude adopted by those in power, it is up to the press to give expression to all expressions of opinion, to present the facts as they are not as some faction would like them to be. The campus newspaper in its own limited field must never give up the struggle for academic freedom, for truth in the classroom and the lecture hall, for the right to an independent opinion based on reflection and well-grounded convictions. At no time must we hedge or backtrack because we find ourselves opposed, because on certain issues we find vast numbers headed in the opposite direction. That's the easy way out. The comforts of conformity are always tasteless, if bought at the expense of personal integrity and unreasoning acceptance of glib slogans and hollow rhetoric.

Goldsmith Likes Variety In Work

The unemployment problem does not exist—at any rate not for George Goldsmith, freshman chem major, whose motto in job finding seems to be variety. George has held all sorts of jobs from a radio repair man to a stand-in for a housemaid. He has worked as a barker in a carnival, driver of a bakery truck, photographer, gardner, and used car salesman. This summer he is planning to work in a shoe factory. Said George, after reeling off this list, "that's about all. I haven't lived very long."

Cool and sell-possessed, George proceeded to relate in a lively manner the inside stories behind this imposing inventory of jobs.

As a radio fan and "ham," he became quite adept at taking apart radio apparatus, and what is more, he learned how to put them back together again. His fame spread, and soon be found himself conducting a thriving business repairing the neighbors' radios and once paid off a Y. M. C. A. membership by building them a phonograph out of an old radio. During the New England flood several years ago, when the telephone lines fell, George assisted the regular wireless operator in sending out messages.

George must also have the distinction of holding one of the most unique jobs with which anyone has ever earned his living expenses at college. Working as a housemaid or houseman, to be exact, for a family of five is certainly a new one for the statistician. His duties start at 6.30 in the morning, just one hour before military, when George gets up to prepare breakfast. They continue throughout the day in spare hours between classes and through the afternoon and evening until 8 o'clock when the three children are put to bed. His chores consist of all the heavy housework, certain daily duties such as making breakfast and feeding the dogs, and for extra-curricular activity, George has taken upon himself the responsibility of entertaining the children. This he does by reading them fairy stories and playing records of nursery rhymes. Quite often he listens with them to some exciting serials that frequent the radio around supper time.

But the most interesting job by far was working as a barker at a carnival by means of which George earned his tuition for his freshman year at college. The attraction for which George barked was a horse racing game of the same type as Beano called "The King of Sports." At first he started as a collector and worked his way up to a steward. The steward's job was to explain the game to the uninitiated and to weed out the dead "fish" from the line. (All customers are fish.)

But finally George's chance arrived to attain the highest honor that an uneducated employee can reach in a carnival. The chief barker became sick all of a sudden and the assistant barker had a sore throat; so George stepped in. His line ran something like this:

"Step right up here. Come in and play 'The King of Sports,' the sport of kings. Come in and sit down where it is cool and comfortable in our new air-conditioned, red-leathered upholstered, chromium finished chairs and play the sport of kings, 'The King of Sports,' the first and only one of its kind in New England, etc., ad inf."

And it worked. People would come flocking to spend dime after dime on their favorite horse. Many regular customers became so skilled at rolling the balls in the right holes that the management frequently had to ask them to change horses to avoid suspicion. Others customers, men more than women, got so keyed-up and tense that their aim became wild and once someone cracked under the strain and threw his ball at his horse on the scoreboard instead of the hole.

The barker's job was to increase and hold this suspense and tenseness by every means in his power. He started off like this:

"Hold your horses. Don't move. The game is about to start. Wait for the starting bell. (Dramatic pause) Gong! They're off!" Then followed in the typical, short, clipped, keyed-up speech of the sports announcer's race lingo the progress of the rest of the race. This diatribe had to be continued without a break until the race was ended. And even then there was no stopping; otherwise the people would have a chance to get up and leave.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

The members of the R. O. T. C. battalion may be interested in the following remarks which are quoted from letters addressed to the Military Department following the Federal Inspection ceremonies.

One of the alumni writes:

"May I extend my heartiest congratulations on a most efficient and impressive inspection.

"In the 13 years I have been watching, and 4 years as participant, I have seen no better parade than the one your battalion produced this morning."

A second letter from a prominent Burlington man is as follows:

"Our family were deeply and favorably impressed by the exhibition drill of the R. O. T. C. on Wednesday evening and appreciate being included on your guest list."

The names of the writers of these letters are withheld as a matter of courtesy.

Frosh Tracksters Lose In Dual Meet

Friday afternoon at Centennial Field, the freshman track team closed what had been a previously successful season by dropping its final meet, 66-21, to the combined forces of St. Johnsbury Academy and Lyndon Institute.

One of the few U. V. M. silver linings in a cloudy sky was Bob Pulleyn's record-tying victory in the 440-yard dash. Assuming a commanding-fifteen yard lead at the beginning of the race, Pulleyn was never forced and finished against a driving rain in 52.5 seconds. This race was one of the best track events of the frosh season.

The closest field event of the day was the shot put. In this event Glenn McDonald, the St. Johnsbury start, sent the iron ball 43 feet, 6 inches, to defeat U. V. M.'s Herb Sedlis by one-half inch.

All in all there was plenty of excitement.

So if ever anyone is looking for an interesting and lively summer, just get a job as a barker in a carnival. He may not be able to play the game, but it certainly is fun watching the players. After a summer of this type of amusement, George is convinced of one thing—Barnum was right.

tern were created by the Workshop and the stately minuet.

In the American Scene appeared an Indian Hunting Dance, a Negro soft shoe dance, a quadrille (Americatn country dance), a Jazz interlude whose intricate steps and movements were expertly done; and the climax performance, the Rhythm of Eleven, described as "distortion of movement to blend with musical dissonance" displaying the fine coordination and natural grace of the advanced dancers.

In the finale, called the "Melting Pot," all performers appeared on the stage in their various costumes and executed all the dances in order, from the Primitive Ritual, through the Peasant dances, Minuet, Indian Hunting Dance, Jazz Study and Rhythm of Eleven. The musical arrangement for this part of the program was done by Robert McKee '41.

"Uncle Sam" appeared to the tune of "Stars and Stripes Forever" played by the University orchestra and the performance closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the audience.

The spirited dancing, colorful costumes, attractive setting and appropriate accompaniment made Lilac Day a real achievement and an enjoyable presentation.

Both the track and tennis teams closed their season Saturday with impressive wins over Trinity College of Hartford, Conn. Both teams began their seasons on the wrong ends of lop-sided scores, the track team losing to a potent Williams aggregation and the tennis team suffering a shut-out at the hands of the Lord Jeffs of Amherst, but both have shown very definite improvement throughout the season. The track team rose to within a point of victory over Colby, pulled an upset to snatch the state title from Middlebury, placed fourth in the Easterns and submerged a Trinity team (one-third of whose men were left home to compete with a final exam schedule).

Coach Carpenter's netmen came back after their Amherst humiliation to slap down their next three opponents with precision, decision, and derision. Then they settled into a win-one, lose-one streak and so finished the season with seven victories and five defeats, a great improvement over the record of the last two years.

Northward to Maine

The baseball charges of Coach Larry Gardner carried the green and gold of Vermont into the north woods over the week-end, and defended it gallantly but not successfully against the woodsmen of Bowdoin and Bates. The Bowdoin lads with true northern hospitality took the Cats to camp 11-8, while Bates barely eked out a 6-5 decision. Clar Akley started against Bates but was removed in the fifth inning when his pitching hand was bruised by a liner through the box. Roy Alberghini came in with an insufficient warm-up and yielded two extra-base hits to the first two batters to whom he pitched. He then settled down and didn't yield another hit. The game went thirteen innings. Bob Carlson relieved Alberghini in the thirteenth when he weakened and walked two men in succession. The score was tied at the time. Bob, however, yielded two singles and the ball game.

Bob Doherty continued his effectiveness at the plate by collecting three hits in five trips. Bob has hit in every game to date, and we have heard rumors that he has received offers to play in the Northern League this summer.

The "Ver-Mott" Track Team

Bert Mott continued his individual performance against the Episcopalians Saturday by annexing four firsts and a third for a total of 21 points, thus bringing his total for the year to 82 points. Bert also won the title of Eastern 220-yard champion by beating Ed Dugger of Tufts at Worcester two weeks ago. A week before that he had established a new 15.8 state record in the high hurdles. We can't remember whether the wind that was blowing that Saturday nullified the officiality of that record or not. Bert, who was the ace of last year's freshman team, has assumed a similar position on the varsity team. He has come up to every expectation. During the year he competed successfully in the 100- and 220-yard dashes, the 120-yard high hurdles, the 220-yard low hurdles, the high jump and the broad jump. Competing in five events in a single meet is no easy job and Bert Mott deserves all the praises that can be heaped upon him.

Cindermen Dunk Trinity As Mott Scores 21 Points

Winning Score Is 76½-49½; Cats Lead All the Way

That it takes more than all of old Jupe Pluvius' spite to stop Archie and his fighting tracksters was amply proven Saturday afternoon. It was hardly a contest, for the Cats led all the way, and at the final tallying the score stood 74½-49½.

The first event run off was the high jump, in which the Cats took 8 out of 9 points, by virtue of Becker and Grosvenor tying for first with the bar at 5 feet, 4 inches. Peticord annexed Trinity's sole point in this event.

Bert Mott, Vermont's big gun, proved to be the bane of the Hartford lads taking four firsts and a third, the latter in the broad jump. Bert topped the 120 high hurdles in 16.8 for his first five-pointer, allowing Trinity's Hodgkins a second. Goss of Vermont placed third in this event.

Alex Warden made short work of the shot put, slinging the old apple 41 feet, 8.5 inches. Tyler of Trinity took second, while Parker came through with the point for third.

Mott churned up the soggy track in the hundred, going the distance in 10.3. Trinity again took a second, while Goss and Donahue of Trinity tied for third.

Trinity took one of its few firsts in the one mile jaunt, Caffrey going around in 4:40.3. Norm Stoddard and Fred Webster of Vermont placed second and third respectively.

In the javelin the Cats took another first with Daly tossing the birch shaft 157.1. Wallace and Burningham, both of Trinity, took the other points in this event.

Elrick of the Nutmeggers placed first in the 440 with a time of 53.7, with Eaton and O'Connell of Vermont copping the other two places.

Charlie Webster of Vermont hit his cross-country stride, and ground the two-mile marathon out in 10.18, Rosen of Trinity took second, and Vermont's Livak placed third.

The 220 low hurdles, a reasonable facsimile of the 120 high, Mott again taking first, Trinity's Hodgkins again taking second, and Goss again taking third, ad infinitum.

Bennett of Trinity captured the 880 in 2:06.5, beating out Crown and Stoddard of U. V. M.

H. Long hurled the discus 117.8 for a first in this event for the Cats, Squires taking second, and Molumphy of Trinity garnering one point.

The 220 was Mott all the way, Emory and Donahue of Trinity annexing second and third.

A three-way tie for first was the net result of the pole valut, Brown and Cunningham of Trinity and O'Connell of Vermont sharing the nine points of this event, with the bar set at 10 feet, 6 inches.

Goss of Vermont placed first in the broad jump with a leap of 20 feet, 2.5 inches, followed by Neil of Trinity and the ever-present Mott.

They don't toss the hammer in the league Trinity travels in, so the boys just had a little practice.

for the first time to gain first place in the 120 high hurdles. Glenn McDonald won this event in 15.8 seconds. In second and third place came Barry and McGill, the frosh timber-topping twins.

Cats To Entertain Big Green Friday

Memorial Day will find another good baseball game on the fire as the Catamounts clash with the Dartmouth Indians at Centennial Field. The Cats, after winning seven straight, dropped a thirteen-inning thriller to Bates, but hope to begin on a new winning streak after they polish off Dartmouth.

At their most critical stage of the game, where they find the championship almost in sight, the Cats find themselves beset with injuries. The Bates game found Clarence Akley with one of the fingers of his pitching arm lacerated, Charlie Smith also with an injured finger, and Johnny Spasyk with a charley-horse. Although Coach Gardner hasn't yet decided who is to pitch against Dartmouth, there is a great possibility that Clarence will get the nod.

Dartmouth has been going great guns so far this season. Although they lost to Yale this past Saturday, they still are near the top for leadership in the Ivy League. They have an excellent pitching staff with Lendo and Gray doing fine at that post. Behind this fine pitching they have just as equally fine batters with Gus Broberg, of basketball fame, leading them. They are very dangerous, especially in the clutches where timely hitting counts the most, and the Vermont hurlers will do an excellent job if they hold them down.

Larry will probably start the same men he used against Bates with Smith catching, Wood, Sullivan, Spasyk and Beauchemin comprising the infield, and Doherty, Taylor and Sysko in the outfield. The pitching assignment will be decided later.

Although the odds are against Vermont, it will not be an easy game for the Hanovers, as, during the past few games, the Catamounts have found the range and are belting the ball at a good steady clip. Frankie Taylor has begun to hit more consistently than he has previously, Beauchemin and Sysko have also found the range. Most consistent of all is sophomore Bob Doherty, who still leads the sluggers and who still continues to hit in the clean-up slot.

Because the game is to be played on Memorial Day, it is expected that the biggest crowd of the year will be on hand to witness the rivalry between the two teams. The rivalry began in 1889 and since then Dartmouth teams have won 41 games, Vermont has won 23, and 1 ended in a tie.

Catamounts Lose To Bates And Bowdoin As Pitching Slumps

Akley Injures Hand; 13 Inning Thriller Feature of Trip

Last Friday in a game marked by lusty hitting, Bowdoin College set back the Cat ball chasers by a score of 11 to 8.

The Catamounts went on a six-run scoring spree in the third to go out in front 6 to 1 but Bowdoin came back to tie the game up in the fourth and put across 3 more runs in the sixth to clinch the game.

Al Shaw worked the first eight innings for the Catamounts and was relieved by Clarence Akley in the ninth. Sysko, Spasyk and Beauchemin led the Cat batters garnering two hits apiece.

Bates—6; Cats—5

Trying desperately to salvage an even split on their latest trip into the Maine country, the University of Vermont ball team went down to a bitter thirteen-inning defeat at the hands of Bates, 6-5.

With Clarence Akley doing the pitching chores the Cats started off with a bang, scoring three runs in the first inning as a result of Spasyk's being hit by a pitched ball, Taylor's walk, Doherty's single, which drove in Spasyk, Beauchemin's grounder, advancing both runners, and Charlie Smith's clutch single which drove in two more runs.

The Cats increased their lead in the third inning when Taylor's single rolled through Thompson's legs and Frankie came all the way home.

Bates started their hitting in the third, getting one run as a result of a batter hit by Akley, a passed ball, and a single by Witly. Two more runs crossed the plate for Bates in the fourth, a homer by Josselyn and a triple by Hervey featuring this inning.

In the fifth inning catastrophe struck. Akley was forced to retire from the game as a result of a smashing single by Bob Thomson which hit his pitching hand. Rushed into the game with no chance to warm up, Lefty Roy Alberghini was greeted by a double and a triple before retiring the side. The Green and Gold at this point were one run behind, 4-5.

Alberghini then went on to pitch a beautiful ball game, giving no hits for seven full innings while the Cats picked up one run to tie the score.

In the fateful thirteenth, after the Cats had failed to make good a scoring chance, Roy weakened and issued two walks with one down. At this juncture Bob Carlson took over the pitching duties and was greeted by Jameson's single to short center field. Taylor's quick fielding kept all the runners to one base. With the bases loaded, it remained for Webster, Bates' hurler, to win the ball game with a single into right field which scored Josselyn from third with the winning run.

Vermont outhit Bates 12-9, Doherty getting three for five, while Sysko, Taylor and Alberghini got two hits each.

Johnny Spasyk took fielding honors with ten chances handled flawlessly.

U.V.M. Netmen Win 7-2 Over Trinity

One of the most successful tennis seasons in years came to a close at the University of Vermont Saturday afternoon as the Catamounts halted Trinity College's sextet 7 to 2 in matches which did not get under way until 4.30, although scheduled to start three hours earlier. The team won seven matches and lost five.

Vermont dropped the number one and six singles, and took all other matches played. Bill Cleveland gave Trinity one of its points by halting Ed Simpson, Vermont captain, 6-3, 6-1, and in the number six spot Otto Staehr turned back Bill West of the Cats, 6-1, 6-1.

L. Simpson squeezed by Chet Siems of the invaders, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3. Seims' serve bothered Simpson in the first two sets, but he broke through it twice in the final set to win.

Art Wolk was hard pressed by Dick Bestor to squeeze out a 6-4, 9-7 decision, but Dick Lynch had little trouble defeat-

Vermont Writers League To Conduct Ballad Contest

Will Meet August 23 At Vermont Junior College in Montpelier

The date for the annual summer meeting of the League of Vermont Writers has been set for Saturday, August 23, at Vermont Junior College in Montpelier.

One of the features of the meeting will be the reading of several historical ballads for which prizes of $10, $5, $3 and $2 have been set up. These ballads are to be short, not exceeding 1,000 words, and are to deal preferably but not necessarily with Vermont themes. The closing date for the contest is July 15. Winning manuscripts are to become available for League use. Entries are to be sent to Prof. Leon W. Dean of the University of Vermont, president of the League, at 308 S. Prospect Street, Burlington.

Other parts of the program as arranged by a local committee, consisting of Walter J. Coates, former League president, Mrs. Lillian M. Ainsworth, and Mrs. Corinne E. Davis, will also have a Sesquicentennial flavor, with an historical speaker in the afternoon, and an original Sesquicentennial play in the evening under the direction of Maude Wheeler Pierce of Montpelier.

Registration will open at 10 o'clock in the morning and it is hoped that members will make a special effort this year to provide a large morning attendance. The principal speaker of the morning will be Fred O. Copeland of Randolph, who has made a success of writing from the Vermont highways and byways and will give some suggestions on how to discover material in one's own dooryard and make it acceptable to others. There will be a box luncheon on the college grounds at noon, with plenty of opportunity to exchange trade gossip, and a banquet in the evening with music.

Attention Military Students

The Military Science Department has been requested to furnish a firing squad of three men and a bugler for Memorial Day exercises in South Hero. Any R. O. T. C. student who volunteers for this service will be excused from the local parade on that day.

The exercises will take place at South Hero at 10.00 a.m., May 30. Volunteers should contact Lieutenant Schofield immediately.

Eat The Right Food

Cutting Food Costs

Prepared by LYDIA TARRANT

Food from home helps many students live much cheaper while attending the University than if they had to board out or buy all the foods which they prepare in their rooms. The kinds of food you eat help to determine whether you have pep to carry on the school year with few or no colds or without undue nervous strain and tiredness.

In the rush of college life, it may seem easier to go home to a meal of a sandwich and cake or pie, but opening jars of home-canned vegetables, fruit, and meat won't take much longer and will give you pep and good health not provided by the other meal.

The cost to you and your family is apt to be less if you start a canning budget now so that you will have an adequate supply of home-canned foods for the next college year. This budget will provide for buying milk and occasionally fresh fruit or vegetable, meat, or eggs to go with the foods brought from home.

If you plan to use home-canned vegetables and meat for about six months of the year, you will want a canning budget to include at least 48 pints of tomatoes (1 cup four times a week), 48 pints of a green or yellow vegetables such as spinach Swiss chard, string beans, peas, or carrots (1 serving daily), and 30 pints of meat and poultry (3 times a week). Other canned fruits, vegetables, and meat will help add variety to your meals. If possible, you will want to plan to buy some fresh foods as cabbage, chicory, oranges, meat, or fish each week.

Varsity Tennis

ing John Pearson, 6-2, 6-3. Sam Foti proved the most consistent singles winner of the season by taking 11 of his 12 matches. He ran through Cappy Jones of Trinity 6-2, 6-3.

In doubles, Vermont swept through. Ed Simpson and Foti beat Cleveland and Siems 5-7, 6-3, 7-5; Larry Simpson and Lynch defeated Jones and Pearson 8-6, 6-1; Wolk and Bill Pratt halted Staehr and Russ Collins 6-3, 6-4.

University Players Hold Banquet

Next Year's President To Be Jeanne Woolley

An unusually successful year was brought to a close Sunday evening when the University Players, honorary dramatic society of the University, met for their annual spring banquet at Oakledge Manor.

Preceding the banquet, a business meeting was held, presided over by Louise Mann '41. Officers were elected for next years as follows: President, Jeanne Woolley '41; Secretary, Patty Pike '43; Property Manager, Bibi Deming '43; Stage Manager, Clark Miller '42; Business Manager, Copeland Marks '42; Assistant Business Manager, Joseph Alpert '43.

By vote of the Society, the group plays, which are presented early in the fall, will be given over to the Dramatic Club; and the activities of the Dramatic Club will be open to both men and women instead of to women alone as has been the custom during the past years.

Out-going President Louise Mann '41 presided over the banquet table in her usual pleasing manner and presented the guests of the evening, Mrs. Wilnetta Sproul Taggart and Professor Metcalf. Mrs. Taggart's remarks were words of appreciation and praise very sincerely expressed. Professor Metcalf complimented the cast of the Junior Week play very highly for their unusually outstanding presentation of "You Can't Take It With You."

Nine new members were elected to the Society. They are: Alfred Amee '43, Carolyn Brown '44, Gerald Didinsky '44, Helaine Goldberg '43, Wendell Harvey '43, Harold Kennedy '43, Donald Morgan '44, Stanley Sirkin '42, and Abram Swartz '42.

Due to circumstances over which we have no control, the Senior Boatride and Song Fest, originally scheduled for next Saturday night, May 31, has been cancelled.

Send Your Packages By Railway Express

Commencement time will soon be here, followed by the vacation period at which time students will be returning to their homes and at this time of uncertainty in our history, one thing that can be depended upon is the prompt, efficient, and economical handling of your baggage and personal effects by Railway Express.

Just see that it is packed, addressed and a phone call is all that is needed and you can rest assured your belongings will be delivered to your home in perfect shape. Some timely suggestions to be followed are that all old marks be removed; that addresses be legible in all respects and that no money or jewelry are packed with your personal belongings. If these are to be shipped see that they are packed separately, that same may be handled through our Money Department.

In case of radios or other fragile articles, see that they are packed with sufficient padding that they will arrive safely with ordinary care.

Any packages containing glass should be plainly marked "Glass," that the proper labels can be affixed thereto.

Proper tags and address labels have been supplied to all dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses and if any shipping problems arise, this office will be only too glad to send a special representative by phoning either 313 or 896.

On May 30, Decoration Day, the Billings Library will be open from 9.00 a.m. to 12.00 m.

Says University Must Tap Loyalty Of Its Alumni

So Alger Declares In Accepting $3,600 From Class of '16

More than 900 alumni, guests and friends of the University of Vermont attended the alumni luncheon in the gymnasium annex Saturday. Thomas J. Mulcare '09, of Cambridge, Mass., retiring president of the Alumni Council, presided.

The 1916 class, celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of its graduation, announced through its spokesman, Prof. Robert M. Pease of Princeton, a $3,600 gift to the University. Life insurance taken out by class members at graduation with the University as beneficiary provided the fund. The money will be used as a student loan fund available to descendant members of the class.

Acceptance of this gift was by George W. Alger of New York, University trustee, who said "We must tap one of the great resources of the University, one of the intangibles, the loyalty of its alumni."

Spokesman for the fifty-year class was Thomas C. Cheney '91 of Morrisville, another trustee, who appealed to the alumni body to do its share in the purchase of $675,000 bonds to be issued soon to finance the University.

Dr. R. L. Maynard '11, Burlington, speaking for his class, announced a gift of "between $150 and $200" to U. V. M.'s General Fund.

William I. Pye '41, president of his class, responded when his class was accepted into the alumni body.

Portrait Presented To ATO By Alumni

Active Chapter Receives Late President's Portrait

A large carbon brown portrait of the late President Guy W. Bailey in black walnut frame hangs in the main living room of the Alpha Tau Omega house on Williams St., the gift of the ATO alumni to the active chapter, in memory of its most distinguished alumnus.

The presentation was made at a memorial service in the ATO chapter house Saturday morning. Prof. Frederick Tupper, a member of ATO, presented the portrait.

"In President Bailey," he said, in part, "the heart gave a useful lesson to the head. He was a man of strong feeling and deep affection. This showed itself in his love of the University—bone of bone, blood of his blood. In every visit to him during the last year, one was aware of the presence of the blueprints of the Waterman building that enabled him to visualize the finished structure without and within.

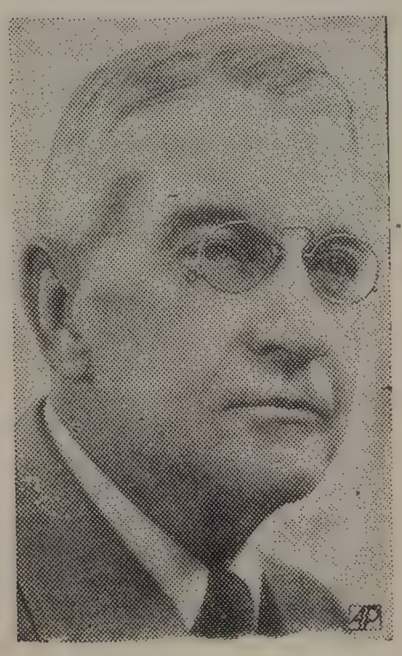
"As with Aladdin's palace in 'The Arabian Nights,' the massive building reared its shape in his fancy even before it took outward and visible form. And every hall and room and stairway were prophecies of rich life within. We who loved and honored him may well grieve that it was not granted to him to enter the promised land of his academic hopes. And yet the reality, no matter how complete, would not have given him all that his lively fancy cherished."

Other Fraternities Represented

Howard Abbott, son of Lee Abbott of Newton, Mass., a classmate of President Bailey, unveiled the portrait, Robert C. Sayre '42, of Wadhams, N. Y., worthy master of the active chapter, accepted the gift.

George C. Stanley of Burlington, head of the alumni association, presided. Harry Dorian of Springfield, headed the alumni committee in charge of arrangements. Representatives of other fraternities and sororities were present.

The gift represents the beginning of a movement that is hoped will spread beyond fraternity limits and become University-wide to perpetuate the memory of President Bailey.



Heath Initiated To Phi Beta Kappa

S. Burton Heath became a member of the University of Vermont Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa fifteen years after his graduation from the University in 1926, when the chapter voted him into special alumnus membership last Friday. He was initiated Saturday into the national organization, which gives recognition to students who have high scholastic standing and to unusual achievement after graduation.

Mr. Heath won the Pulitzer Prize in journalism for his work in exposing, in a series of newspaper articles, the fraud and corruption in New York's judicial system. This year his book, "A Yankee Reporter," telling of his life and career in journalism, was published. It contains many reminiscences of his course at the University of Vermont, where he worked his way through.

Mr. Heath now is editor of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Phi Beta Kappa Adds $500 To Fund

Alpha of Vermont Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at its annual meeting Saturday transferred $500 to the Phi Beta Kappa Student Loan Fund to be administered by the University of Vermont and lent to students of high scholastic standing. This brings to $600 the total set aside for use of deserving students by the U. V. M. chapter of the honorary scholastic society. An initial contribution of $100 was made a year ago.

Newly-elected members of Phi Beta Kappa were initiated at this meeting. Officers were also elected. They are: Dr. Bennett C. Douglas, president; Prof. H. F. Perkins, vice-president; Prof. George V. Kidder, register; Miss Irene Allen, corresponding secretary, and Prof. James A. Bullard, treasurer.

Dr. William Lyon Phelps Addresses 238 Graduates

Famed Yale Critic, Speaking Extemporaneously, Urges Graduates to Seek Ideal of Individual

The University of Vermont's 137th Commencement exercises were marked by the presence of Dr. William Lyon Phelps of Yale, who delivered the address "Truth and Poetry."

Doctor Phelps, famous as a literary critic, author and teacher, was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters.

Doctor Phelps, in his address, said that "poetry contains more truth than science, for though science supposedly deals with facts and truth, it is not, like poetry, eternally and always true."

"This is shown by the fact," he continued, "that the latest editions of science books are sought after because all preceding editions are obsolete or untrue to a degree, while the earliest editions of poetry are always of most value.

"Poetry is about human nature, and the works of Greek poets on the subject are as true today as the day they were written. Poets reach into the deepest and dark recesses of the human heart and transfigure what they find into something noble and shining."

He urged the graduates to seek after the ideal of the individual, "the heart of a boy and the mind of a man," and to attempt to grow up intellectually all of their lives.

Supporting his statements with quotations from memory, Doctor Phelps kept the attention of the audience throughout his extemporaneous address. He won the hearts of all in the audience by his ease and naturalness on the platform and by his ready wit.

"The greatest poetry is that of transfiguration, he said, "but we must not ignore the lesser treasures. Narrative poetry, although second rate because it is on one plane, can be used to develop the poetical taste of our children, who will read for the story but will unconsciously absorb the music."

In his inimitable style, Doctor Phelps digressed to many interesting recollections associated with various points in his speech, often recalling himself to the subject of the address abruptly. These digressions in no way hurt the effectiveness of the speech in which the chief value for the listener lay in the contact with a great mind and its convictions and ideals about life, literature and poetry, and the subsequent enriching of the listener for that contact.

Fifteen Elected To Phi Beta Kappa

S. Burton Heath Receives Alumnus Membership

Vermont students demonstrated superior scholarship to those from out of state at the University of Vermont when it was announced that all but one of the fifteen seniors elected to Phi Beta Kappa at a meeting of Alpha of Vermont Chapter Friday, June 13 come from homes within the state. The proportion of Vermonters to out of staters enrolled at the University is approximately sixty to forty.

In addition to the graduating class group, S. Burton Heath '26 of New York, also Vermont born and raised, was elected to alumnus membership and was initiated into the society recognizing high scholastic standards along with the others at an adjourned session of the annual meeting Saturday, June 14. Heath, recent recipient of a Pulitzer prize in newspaper reporting and author of "A Yankee Reporter," is now editor of the McClure Syndicate.

The new Phi Beta Kappa members are: George H. Bailey, agriculture, Rochester; Martha L. Baker, classical, Milton; Bernard B. Barney, medicine, Bennington; Margaret M. Beattie, classical, St. Johnsbury; Arnold H. Becker, medicine, Burlington; Harold G. Carlson, electrical engineering, Brattleboro; T. Frank Crimmin, Jr., business, Windsor; George B. Dunn, Jr., electrical engineering, Craftsbury Common; Kenneth J. Estey, agriculture, Hinesburg; Harriet L. Kieslich, secretarial, Burlington; William R. Lyman, chemistry, South Londonderry; Armstrong Maltbie, secondary education, Brant Lake, N. Y.; Gerald I. Palmer, civil engineering, Williamstown; Helen T. Sault, literary scientific, Randolph; Mrs. Kathleen LeBaron Strassburg, home economics, Waterbury.

President of the chapter is Dr. Bennett C. Douglas; register, Prof. G. V. Kidder.

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College

VOL. 59 JUNE 23, 1941 NO. 61

The shouting is over. Alumni have come and departed. They're taking the lanterns down out on the front campus. The gym is deserted—in one corner a bare stage still dangles heavy drapes. Not even the ghost of a laugh or a rustle of conversation. The class of 1941 is gone—out to join all those other graduates of the past. Commencement—nostalgia has a field day. Then the long summer of deserted campus, of long walks and wind. It's a strange feeling—like "Good-bye Mr. Chips"—to walk about—past deserted buildings. It's terrifying to stop and hear in them: The stamping feet, the voices, the cries of the departed. Thousands of them—a world has swallowed them up. And the ivy runs along stone walls unchanging. The chapel spire still points upward. '00, '06, '36, '39, '41. As the earth turns.

They have gone—bearing with them something of youth, something of hope, something of determined endeavor. They will be shaped and they will be moulded. They will be shoved and beaten. The class of '41.

Quote, "it's a hard world you're going into," unquote. Quote, "it's a world that will call for the best in you," unquote. "Fear not. Welcome the struggle. Be glad of this eventful crisis. Meet with a song on your lips the call to battle."

A hundred baccalaureate speakers; a thousand commencement speakers from Seattle to Key West have uttered their pronouncements. So glibly they have laid the burden on your shoulders. So lightly have they committed you to strife and struggle. To you, youth, the chaos—take it away. They've been handing it to you that way for a long time. The cross and the thorns—gladly they pass them on to you. Never fear, never fear. Never doubt, never doubt.

Tell them you'll take what they're handing you. Tell them you're not afraid. There's not much chance of evading it—war, poverty, tyranny. Those who have gone before you had to contend with it. And the smooth tongues were handing it to them then as now, as they left the academic walls.

Quote, "Welcome the struggle, out of it will come a better world," unquote.

Yes, class of '41, welcome to the struggle. You didn't start it. But neither did others before you.

But remember this. Beat the cross into a spear shaft and the thorns into a sharp point. Keep it handy. That's for the bigger battles that come with the end of warfare. Don't let the glib tongues forget their promise—"a better world." Don't forget the tragedy that befell your predecessors. Don't forget to demand that reward. And if after the blood and the dying: The pompous voices, the silvery tongues, the inspired leaders behind the front line, the movers of pins on a map, the solons in the legislative halls—start the old rigamarole again—take your spear and give it to them. Where it will do the most good.

"Strife—we'll take it. Chaos—we'll master it. Wars—we'll fight them. But remember—we've waited a long time. We're getting tired—tired of seeing hate grow out of hate and bloodshed out of bloodshed. We want the new world, not just the cross and thorns."

And that chapel light there, this green grass, those whispering leaves—those we want as symbols of the world beyond, not as a temporary haven before entrance into Gotterdammerung. And to those who come after us we want to hand a life after four years of academic search that offers permanent values and the chance to enjoy them. And keep that spear handy.

U.V.M. Boys To Be Laborers, Salesmen, Guides, For Summer

Over the blue waves to Rio on a fruit boat will go two University of Vermont men this summer, while two others will go south of the Mason and Dixon Line to sell Southerners Vermont maple syrup and sugar. Another college boy will go underground and learn how to mine nickel in Canada, while an oil field in Oklahoma and guide work in Yellowstone National Park will claim still others. All of the men are members of one fraternity, Sigma Phi, and they are of all four classes. They appear to be following a trend currently becoming popular among college students, in seeking the experience of physical labor as a valuable part of their education.

Jean M. Evans, Burlington, and Norman D. Tucker, Leominster, Mass., will board a United Fruit boat, setting out in late June for Rio de Janeiro, and making port in the United States again late in September. Midway through the summer, the two have an opportunity to put aboard a lumber ship and sail to the West Coast, which they both are considering, since it would give them an opportunity to renew old fraternity acquaintances in the far western section.

John S. Burgess and Richard W. Page, both of Burlington, have mapped out an intensive itinerary through the southern United States, and with their sample kits of Vermont maple syrup and sugar, are preparing to try to sell these Green Mountain State products there. Laying the groundwork for their selling foray, they have already communicated with several Chambers of Commerce in various southern cities and from these contacts they believe that they will stand a good chance of establishing a ready market.

James H. Stephen, Copper Cliff, Ont., Canada, will go first to summer military camp with other students in the advanced military science and training course of the Reserve Officers Training Corps at the University. When he finishes at Fort Devens, Mass., he will go to Sudbury, Canada, where he has a job with the International Nickel Mines, and will do underground work for the balance of the summer vacation.

Clifford A. Pease, Burlington, is heading for the Oklahoma oil fields, and in one of them, starting July 1, he has a job which will give him employment up to the first of September. Pease says he hopes "to return to school next fall a bag of muscles."

Several vacations spent in Yellowstone National Park were not without profit to Richard W. Pope, Wellesley Hills, Mass., for this summer, he has a job as a student guide there. The job lasts for two months, July 1—Sept. 1.

Civil War Items Feature Of Index

Now complete and covering the period of the Civil War through 1865 is the sixth volume of the Free Press Index compiled by a staff headed by the Hon. T. Stearns at the University of Vermont. This index includes items, a majority of which have to do with the Civil War and events connected with it.

Here are recorded the last struggles of the Civil War, the victory of the Northern forces, and the peace conference. Local celebrations of the return of the Vermont regiments and the listing of Vermonters who died fighting for the cause are told herein. On almost every page are indications of the bitter struggle between the North and South. Three pages alone of the index are devoted to the last years and assassination of Lincoln. In here may be read a speech by Lincoln concerning his earnest desire to rebuild the South. Not only the Civil War but also the domestic life of Vermont is portrayed in the index. A prominent place is given to sheep-raising, then a leading Vermont industry, and the beginning of the maple sugar industry may be read here. Along with the Civil War and Vermont life one may also follow the rapid changes that were going on throughout the country at that time, as well as such odd and ordinary human happenings as appear in 1941 newspapers.

The newspaper indexing project is now at work on further volumes of the Free Press Index, whcih will be published regularly and in which research workers will find an easily accessible and valuable source of material on many varied subjects.

Artist Miller To Teach Three In One

Has Summer Sessions in Vt., Penn., and N. Mexico

How can one artist teach in three summer schools in one summer?

Summer time may be vacation time for some people, but Barse Miller, who teaches advanced painting in the University of Vermont Summer Session, manages to pack into an extended summer lasting about four months and stretching over most of the breadth of the United States three teaching assignments at as many summer schools of art. A number of Mr. Miller's students in the University Summer Session Department of Fine Arts have learned of his triple summer art teaching program and have inquired whether he would be able this year to teach the full six weeks at the University of Vermont Summer Session. The answer is yes. Mr. Miller has been teaching this threefold schedule of summer sessions, besides his winter work in California where he teaches at the Art Center of Los Angeles, for several years. He begins in June at the Taos Field School of Art of the University of New Mexico. He journeys east to Burlington, Vt., for the University of Vermont Summer Session, remaining here this year from July 7 to August 15. After the session closes, he has time to travel to Chester Springs, Pa., where he instructs in the Summer Art School of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, during late August and September. When that Summer Session is at an end, he goes back across the continent to California for his winter's teaching. During all this instructional work carried on by Mr. Miller, he paints and his pictures are constantly exhibited throughout the country and reproduced in leading art and general magazines. This summer, a collection of his paintings will be exhibited at the Ferargil Galleries in New York City.

Salt Lake City, Utah—(ACP)—University of Utah is gaining international recognition with publication by the Oxford University press of "Shakespeare's Documents," two huge volumes consisting of 296 documents.

Work of compiling and editing the documents was done by Prof. B. Roland Lewis of the university's English department and Shakespeare laboratory.

Pre-publication carbon copies of the original volumes were sent upon request to the British museum and the Folger Shakespeare library in Washington, D. C., largest and most complete library of its kind in the world.

World critics have acclaimed the massive work as among the greatest ever published. Professor Lewis is now at work on a biography of Shakespeare based upon the two volumes.

Dr. Chalmers Speaks At Baccalaureate

Spirit, Not Force is What Wins, He Tells Graduates

Hitler and Mussolini will lose in the end because they use force to gain their ends, Rev. Dr. Allen Knight Chalmers of the

Dr. Allen K. Chalmers

Broadway Tabernacle Congregational Church, New York, told the University of Vermont graduating class at the baccalaureate service in the Ira Allen Chapel. Governor and Mrs. Wills were among those in the audience that filled the chapel to overflowing.

Force always loses in the long run, he added. "It is the spirit that wins in the end."

"Signs of Recognition" was Doctor Chalmers' sermon topic. "One sign by which I can tell if a person is a good Christian is his reaction to the expression —what's the use of it all?"

The good Christian hates injustice more than the desire to live, he asserted, concluding with the statement that "man's value on this earth depends on his understanding of, hope for and allegiance to the way of life Christ personified."

In addition to the preacher, others participating in the baccalaureate program were Prof. Raymond A. Hall, chaplain; Prof. H. G. Bennett, director of Music; Miss Miriam Natilee Marston, organist; Prof. Lyman S. Rowell, marshal; Prof. George G. Groat, faculty marshal; Harry A. MacMillan '41M and John F. Ivy Oration

By Maywood Metcalf

For forty-seven years graduating classe of the University of Vermont have, o Class Day, planted sprigs of ivy next th buildings on our campus. The member of our class during the past four year have seen the old college buildings take o new beauty each spring as the leaves o the many vines have become green. Bu as we casually observed the growing vine we gave little thought to their symboli meanings.

To some classes the ivy stood for edu cation; to others, tradition, power, o friendship. I would like to have the iv of the Class of '41 be a three-fold symbo of our faith, our respect, and our love fo the University of Vermont. Our Alma Mater has given to us much of our edu cation. She has generously contributed t the development of our personalities and characters and she has made possible the establishment of the many friendships which mean so much to us. Through her we have acquired a willingness to find and face the truth, a tolerance toward other persons, races, religions, and ideas and a determination to play our part in making the inevitable changes that are ahead.

We, of '41, are particularly fortunate because we are to be the first class to plant ivy next the new Waterman Building whose facilities will offer so many advantages to the administration, the faculty, and the students of Vermont. This building represents a new step in the growth of our University and gives us another reason for being proud of her.

Through one hundred and fifty years Vermont has given to many thousands of students, like us, the opportunity to participate in four of the most constructive and happiest years of their lives. One hundred and fifty years of invaluable service is a record of which we all are justly proud.

The ivy is a hardy plant which grows higher and higher each year. Therefore, let us, the Class of '41, pledge that, like our ivy, our faith, our respect, and our love for the University of Vermont will grow higher and higher in the years to come!

Ira Allen Oration

By Jean M. Evans

It is with no small amount of trepidation that I undertake to deliver an oration on the Founder of this University, Ira Allen, for this has been done in the past by far more able predecessors and especially eminent speakers at Founder's Day. Do not be surprised then if some of the inspiration drawn from this great figure is not totally new—it is none the less valid on that account; in fact, it particularly behooves our class of 1941 to bear in mind the qualities of our famous Founder, whose virtues of 1791 are very much needed at this present time.

However, let us not imagine that Ira Allen was a superhuman saint. I wish I could quote here a few snatches of the language he used when surveying—suffice it to say that it would make even a Brooklyn taxi driver turn green with envy. Perhaps you are acquainted with the story of his business practice which runs something like this: Once, wanting to buy an especially valuable bit of property at a reasonable price, Ira was worried by the prospect of high bids from competitors at an auction. He whispered to the auctioneer whom he knew well; the latter announced to the public that circumstances entirely above and beyond control, etc., made it necessary to postpone the auction till Wednesday at two o'clock at a certain place, and that all those interested in the property should be present without fail. Early Wednesday morning several lanterns approaching broke the inky darkness at that designated place; the auctioneer and Ira and one of his followers met and concluded their business in rapid order. Unfortunately we were unable to obtain the comments of the would-be purchasers who assembled that afternoon, twelve hours too late.

Many people vied for the honor of being the Founder of this University, but it went to Ira Allen; who made the most generous of all offers. Under the charter granted in 1791, our University opened its doors in 1800 to four students who received instruction from a one-man faculty. Perhaps Ira Allen's vision saw the growth of this University to the point where our sesquicentennial class of 1941 numbers 235 students and the total enrollment of the University is listed as 1,472, including young ladies, as compared with the four men of 1800. Even now you see beside you the Waterman Building which is to be the largest educational building in the state of Vermont.

Certainly Ira Allen had vision which far surpassed that of his contemporaries, who, ignoring the pleasure of baseball, saw no possible use or future in the "worthless" sand-lots purchased by Ira—these sandlots were located right here, ladies and gentlemen.

After endless kidding about this land, Ira once retored that:

. . . that dry Pine plain was easy digging and good burying ground, and if as suggested by some, the spirits of the deceased conversed with each other and viewed the conduct of posterity it would be convenient passing from Tomb to Tomb through that light dry earth and to see from the high sand bank the multitude carry on commerce in Burlington Bay &c.

Yes, Ira Allen had foresight, but besides this he had determination and courage. Once when suffering from a fever, he had to care for some hogs; he was so weak he could hardly walk on level ground, then he came to a hill. He did not halt and falter—he crawled up on hands and knees!

Too often we think of Ira Allen as an old man, matured in experience, but let us not forget that he was only twenty years young when he first came to Vermont. Of approximately the same age, we are supposed to be among the leaders of our generation; in these internationally, nationally, and locally troubled times our institutions can not long survive if the leaders of our generation despair and leave all problems to be solved by more experienced elders—we must do our part. And if it should come to pass that some of us boys of this generation follow the example of 1917-18, let us pray that those who are left will not allow that sacrifice to have been made in vain by repeating the mistakes of the nineteen twenties.

Yes, Ira Allen, our University campus honors you in effigy of bronze, and our lovely chapel is dedicated to your memory. It is altogether proper that we should pay tribute in this manner, yet there is one more homage greater than these earthly monuments; it is the inspiration and example we keep in our hearts of this man's vision, and of the persistence in the face of obstacles of the man who, rather than admit defeat, crawled up the hill on all fours.

President's Address

By William Pye

Today is the first in a series of events which climax four years of effort on our part. We have been looking forward to this graduation for a long time, but now that the occasion is here we feel somewhat sad. The good times we have had here together will soon come to an end, and Monday we will go our separate ways. However we will always be united by the common bond of loyalty to the University of Vermont.

We do not leave with an overconfident air, but with a sober realization that there are difficult days ahead. But no matter what eventuality may occur we are sure the associations we have enjoyed here, in the classroom, on the campus and athletic fields, will stand us in good stead. We are deeply grateful to the faculty for their untiring effort and encouragement. Our class will carry with us the inspiring memory of the late President Guy Bailey.

This year is a banner year in state and University history as it commemorates the completion of 150 years of existence. During this time other classes have graduated into a world full of strife and uncertainty. They overcame the obstacles facing them and were able to achieve success. We the 150th class to graduate from Vermont hope to do likewise.

We realize that our diploma does not open the door to success but is merely the first rung in a long ladder. We feel confident that whatever we may become in the world—whether it be a clerk in a store, a farmer in the field, a soldier in the army, our teaching here will not be forgotten. We will try to the best of our ability to live up to the standards set by the University and will do all in our power to preserve democracy in this country.

Ariel Will Not Appear Until After Graduation

C. G. Miller '42, Business Manager of the Ariel, announces that the publication will not be ready for the student body until after graduation. The Ariel staff is very sorry for the unfortunate delay, but promises that the quality of the Ariel will more than make up for any delay.

Lafayette Oration

By Shirley Gray

No great ideal arises merely as an impulse. Rather it is a result of a long incubation in the mind in which past experiences, events and the innate equipment of the individual are integrated into the final expression of that ideal. So it was with Lafayette.

Lafayette was not born with the idea that he would be a champion of liberty. Instead the circumstances of his life brought on this ideal. Lafayette was left an orphan at the age of thirteen. At the same time he became heir to a great fortune. Lafayette soon became bored with the life of the nobility in which his family had been classed for only three generations. He lived the life of a typical young courtier of the Old Regime in France. It was an artificial life and did not satisfy his desire for glory. A sense of inferiority, a lack of poise and a lack of social grace in youth increased his desire for fame.

Then there entered into his life a fresh interest, the possibility of a grand adventure, the opening of a new avenue to glory. At first this appealed to him only as a means of escape from an existence in which he was beginning to feel frustrated. Then slowly—but only slowly—he developed an enthusiasm for the cause and became a crusader for freedom and the rights of man. The champion of liberty was born out of his interest in America. Contrary to the popular misconception it was not because he was already a champion of liberty that Lafayette espoused the American cause.

Lafayette became an immediate hero and a myth has grown up around his character. People remember him because he was the two-fold emblem, even during his life time, of the embodiment of Franco-American cooperation and the personification of liberalism in an absolutist world.

Little did the boy of sixteen, who was unhappy because he belonged to a decaying French nobility, who was unhappy in the slowness of his progress in military service and who was unhappy because his own accomplishments seemed so trivial, little did he realize he would become one of the most worshipped American heroes.

Lafayette's greatness was the result of a gradual evolution working within him. It was a consummation of various qualities some of which will guide our lives as we leave the University. These qualities belonging to Lafayette and to which we should adhere are a sense of public responsibility, a disinterest in one's self, a constancy of purpose and most of all a love for the greatest American virtue—freedom.

Address To The Undergraduates

By Laura Hawley

The few words I have to say this afternoon are summed up in former Dean Pearl Randall Wasson's creed:

"Vision to see the right our world demands;
Enthusiasm not content with dreams;
Reserve to guard foundations with firm hands;
Mentality to judge between extremes;
Opportunity for those who do not shirk;
Normality to guide real honest work;
Tradition—all you mean to us—Vermont."

"Vision to see the right our world demands;"

College is a background and an inspiration. It is just a beginning to learning not an end.

"Enthusiasm not content with dreams;"

An intelligent interest in all fields of activity is an inspiration and a stimulation to everyone.

"Reserve to guard foundations with firm hands;"

Determine what you want out of your four years of college. Endeavor to lead a well-rounded life being careful not to lose sight of your goal.

"Mentality to judge between extremes;"

We have learned to think independently and carefully. If we have found a true and worthy perspective, then we shall know that we came to college to graduate as finer individuals, more capable through this understanding and tolerance of taking a truer idealism into the real world which we now enter.

"Opportunity for those who do not shirk;"

Think of your undergraduate days as a reservoir, storing up potentialities of service and wider influence for life. "As ye sow so shall ye reap."

"Normality to guide real honest work;"

Take stock of yourself. Survey your field. Determine what you want out of college. Bring into harmony these three suggestions and above all be honest with yourself.

"Tradition—all you mean to us—Vermont."

Be friends with each other, with the faculty, and with the spirit and tradition of the University of Vermont.

After four years of college we should be able to see the whole aspect of a thing and act with tolerance and understanding. We should go about things in a quieter yet firmer way.

A word or two more about the traditions of Vermont. What do we mean when we say tradition? College customs—yes—but is that all? No, a great deal more than that. In the words of one of our professors, who has been at the University for a long time, it consists of "courage, determination, persistence, and resourcefulness." The life of every undergraduate can be greatly enriched by the acceptance and incorporating these qualities into one's way of living. That tradition if it wills it can be made a means of saving the individual craft from shipwreck. This tradition of courage, determination, resourcefulness, and ingenuity has been used in years past by the President, the faculty, and the students and are needed today in these times of stress and the undergraduates will have to draw on these traditional virtues next year and years following.

Boulder Oration

By John R. Royer

"Everything that shakes does not fall." These were the words of Montaigne, the famous French philosopher.

The Boulder is symbolic of the University of Vermont. Through thousands of years of geological evolution, its structure has withstood all the mighty upheavals of nature. The effects of time have only succeeded in molding a more compact body, better enabled to withstand the forces which may be brought to bear upon it in the future. The Boulder stands today an impregnable structure—no truer emblem of the University.

The University of Vermont has been in existence for one hundred and fifty years, and is one of the oldest institutions of higher learning in the United States. It too, like the Boulder, has had a stormy career, withstanding many violent upheavals. Its life has been filled with numerous dark periods—times which made its continued existence very questionable. In spite of all these difficulties, it has continued and has grown in size and reputation. Its value has been realized by the hundreds of students who have departed from its portals, better prepared to meet the hardships of a turbulent world. Problems have arisen and will continue to rise to confront this institution, but all will be favorably met and handled, as they have been in the past. The character of rock strength which is embodied in the Boulder is also deeply rooted in the University of Vermont.

So Stands the Boulder, So Stands Our University.

Class History

By D. F. Gearing

Came the September of 1937 and with it a group of people to this University who were known thereafter as the Class of 1941.

And such a group of people! Four hundred and two strong they stormed Mr. Bruce's office and the Wilbur Fund window—at which place they learned their first college lesson—"they are also served who only stand and wait."

After three days of signing names and filling in blanks we were finally admitted as bona fide freshmen—the Class of '41.

Upon one week's contact with his new charges Dean Swift sailed for Europe and Professor Gifford took up the poor man's burden.

In the unbelievably short time of one week this class established itself firmly in the minds of the rest of the college, as a class that would bear watching, by doing the impossible—we lost the fountain fight!

And then just to banish any remaining doubts concerning our unconventionality, we went on to elect class officers—and though the vote was recounted seven times, the fact remained—only two Burlington students held offices.

It then behooved this illustrious body to settle down to the inevitable process of "getting collegiate." We did a good job here and in spite of the scoffing of the upperclassmen we emerged at the end of our freshman year a Coffee Corner-ful of collegian's collegians. Who would have guessed that from this class would rise five superior students? None the less it happened. Thanks to these industrious and brilliant students the Class of '41 claims another record. Never before had five freshmen attained a straight A average.

So we all went home in June, to rest after the strain of that year and we made some resolutions about more diligent application to studies.

Yea verily—we knew not but we knew not that we knew not!

Came September—went the resolutions. We were amazed at the decrease in the size of the class. It seems a goodly number of our members chose other walks of life.

Not a class to remember easily, we promptly forgot our previous ways and this time true to school tradition we held a tremendously successful Sophomore Hop.

It was in our second year that the class received national acclaim. This was through the success of our athletes. Once again Vermont thrilled to see her football team in action. That team, the best in many years, was almost entirely sophomore.

Somehow or other most of us were still here for mid-year exams. Again there were fewer of us following that two weeks' period of sleepless nights. Once more we decided to study and this time we must have meant it for little was heard from us for quite a while.

Finals in June only served to remind us that we had not learned to study.

Indeed—we knew not and we knew that we knew not.

With another September came the beginning of our first big year. Up until this time we had lost only 134 of our original 402 members.

The first few weeks found us eyeing disdainfully the underclassmen. We were beginning to feel the weight of our years.

We knew we had come a long way when the various deans began to call us by our correct names.

Indeed we were making our mark! That year it took us only six hours to enroll.

So we shivered through the winter. Underclassmen were coming to us occasionally for advice on how to stay in college. Exams loomed dark on the horizon and we went to the seniors for some advice—on how to stay in college.

We were doing fairly well. The business students knew the difference between a bond and a mortgage, the "home-ecers" could spot an incorrectly set silver service from either door of the Practice House dining room. The pre-meds had already learned to keep one eye open when using their microscopes. The engineers were learning how to write a good English sentence. Language professors reported that their juniors had stopped declining verbs.

All in all we were feeling our intellectual oats. Junior Week was a festive occasion. A fine play, a colorful peerade, an excellent band for the Prom and traditional U. V. M. friendliness prevailing throughout "open house" night, all combined to make our Junior Week a pleasant one.

Iz Goodman Has Been Four Years In R.O.T.C. Band

There are some who take four years of military because they are in the advanced course; and there are some who take four years because they are unable to pass it in the usual two. But rare is the one who goes through four years of military science just because he enjoys the work. Such a person is Iz Goodman, a senior who has just completed his fourth year of service in the R. O. T. C. Band. During this time he has risen to technical sergeant which is the highest rank that a basic student may attain in the R. O. T. C. course. Iz also played solo trumpet in the band for the past two years and assistant solo trumpet in his sophomore year.

But Iz is not an ordinary bandsman. He has been Joe Lechnyr's indispensable right-hand man for the past two years, serving in the capacity of assistant band leader. As such, his duties have been to take care of attendance and music, notify band members of important rehearsals, see to it that the band is prepared for all of their appearances and officiate during Kake Walk and band trips so that everything should go off according to schedule.

Said Joe Lechnyr of Iz: "He will be a hard man to replace. Iz has been a great help to the morale of the band and has distinguished himself by his willingness to work and cooperate."

What's in a name? Not much says Shakespeare. But as a freshman in the band puts it, "Iz Goodman is good man."

John B. Waite, professor of criminal law at the University of Michigan, is a bow tie addict. The other day 100 of 130 freshmen in one of his classes showed up wearing bows.

A collection of some 500 land and marine shells from all parts of the world is the latest gift to Harvard University's museum of comparative zoology.

Two of our number became famous that year. Maywood Metcalf became the first woman editor of the Cynic and Frank Taylor earned four major letters in Vermont athletics.

To Ransom Slack we owe a debt of gratitude for the fine job he did on the 1941 Ariel—giving us a lasting reminder of the pleasant days we spent together here in college.

So we came again to finals and this time our mortality rate was infinitesimal. In recognition of that the University finally put in a good road behind the Old Mill.

At this point it may be truly said—we knew but we knew not that we knew.

We came back in the fall well-qualified to assume our newly-acquired prestige.

The Class of '41 admits complete responsibility for the increased tuition. The whole administration had to work overtime to keep ahead of us, and after three years of that killing pace who could deny them the increase?

In October of our senior year most of the men of the class placed their names on the draft lists and in return for same were given classification cards which were to prove their worth on many subsequent occasions.

First semester we did little other than enjoy being seniors, answering the awe-stricken gazes of the freshmen with kindly and benevolent smiles.

We spent long hours in the Coffee Corner—longer hours away from class.

Mid-years came and went causing little excitement to the seniors.

Second semester we elected some courses that we liked and enjoyed studying for a change.

Some of us realizing that June exams were rapidly approaching, chose to remain in Burlington during Easter vacation and take an exam—just for practice.

These last few weeks have seen most of the class making definite plans for next year.

The most interesting history of this class is yet to be written.

Business, medicine, law, teaching, soldiering, marriage, research, the trades, farming and a hundred other callings will embrace members of our class.

We have had a grand and memorable time in college. If we can all look back on our personal lives and find them as happy as was our life as a class we can surely wish no more.

This we know and we know that we know.

Pipe Oration

By William Kenney

This year perhaps more than ever, the symbol of the pipe as an emblem of peace has become practically extinct. No longer may warring nations sit around the council fire and smoke away their difficulties, no longer may warriors settle their problems, by drawing on their long clay pipes, instead peace today has become a weapon of war in which nations force it on other nations in the realization of gaining more conquest and more spoils.

The pipe of peace and the pipe of friendship still burn on this continent, let us not extinguish it, let us on the other hand not allow it to burn to the extent of charring our own defense and ambitions.

To come closer to home the pipe should provide us the means by which in the future we may look back on college days with that undefinable satisfaction, derived only from a pipe, a comfortable chair by a fire and unforgettable memories. In the four years of our stay here we have accumulated a reservoir of these remembrances which we may call upon for the rest of our lives. In the dark days ahead let us call upon this reservoir to give us hope and faith, to cause us to see that there are still existing, methods by which we may gaze on the lighter side of life. Let us then use our pipes to bring forth these memories and remembrances.

Quoting from William Thackery:

"It is an old saying that we forget nothing. As people in fever begin suddenly to talk the language of their infancy, so we are stricken by memory sometimes, and old affections rush back on us as in the time when they were our daily talk, when their presence gladdened our eyes, when their accents thrilled in our ears, when with passionate tears and grief, we flung ourselves on their hopeless corpses. Parting is death, at least as far as this life is concerned. A passion comes to an end; it is carried off in a coffin, or weeping in a post chaise it drops out of life one way or another, and the earth-clods close over it, and we see it no more. But it has been part of our souls, and it is eternal."

While the pipe of peace is slowly going out the pipe of friendship still glows like a lighthouse in a storm. It will not burn out, because the supply of fuel is too great and the flame is embedded deep within the soul.

Sesquicentennial Oration

By Margaret P. Crowley

This sesquicentennial anniversary should be an occasion for enthusiastic celebration in the heart of every student and alumnus. To the graduate, it conveys a double meaning—the vital significance of the position it enjoys among the events of life and the great import that it constitutes a true landmark in the history of the University. To the visiting alumnus, it must be an occasion of more than customary interest, suggesting to him the manifold changes wrought since his college days and to go still farther, since the first feeble opening of the University, a century and a half ago.

So—to every friend of the University, this Commencement of 1941 should prompt a critical retrospect and an equally candid prophecy—a retrospect stirring sentiments of unmixed gratitude for the comparatively uniform advance of the past, and a prophecy abounding in all the hope and faith which the critical situation of the day demands.

Environment moulds institutions as well as individuals and few places in America are richer in elements of strength, tradition and natural beauty than the Champlain Valley in which the University of Vermont is located.

So, too, does the solid competency of the faculty affect the character and tenor of the institution—and throughout its life U. V. M. has been served by able men answering to high standards of conduct and unselfishness.

Outstanding for their years of service and their fine contributions—are the names of such professors as Petty of the mathematics department; Goodrich, a true Latin scholar; Merrill of the chemistry department, who achieved more than average fame in his chosen field of endeavor and Professor Perkins, former Dean of the Arts College, a most respected figure, a much beloved teacher and a rare friend.

In this place the intellectual life of 17,000 graduates has been formed. Upon this college, the eminent achievements of many of them have reflected fame and glory. They were once here. They went out to large and earnest service in all the world. That U. V. M. has existed to interpret the possibilities of great and noble living is proven by such men as John Dewey of the Class of '75, famed educator and world renowned philosopher; Darwin P. Kingsley of the Class of '81, a poor boy, who through energy and industry rose to the ranks of the titans of finance. Charles Waterman of the Class of '85, a statesman and senator who has so recently bestowed upon us the almost completed administration building. And Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, the former Grace Goodhue of the Class of '02, whose charm and culture as First Lady graced the national capital and brought honor and distinction to the University.

Nor do we mean to forget the rank and file of our alumni, solid, substantial citizens who have rendered a greater service to the nation by assuming important places in the communities they have chosen for their homes.

So, like Patrick Henry who judged the future by the past—we must judge the future of this institution by its product and as Daniel Webster said of Dartmouth in the "Great Debate," "It is a small college but there are those who love it."

Women students at Wayne University are just a bit more conservative than men students, according to recent tests.

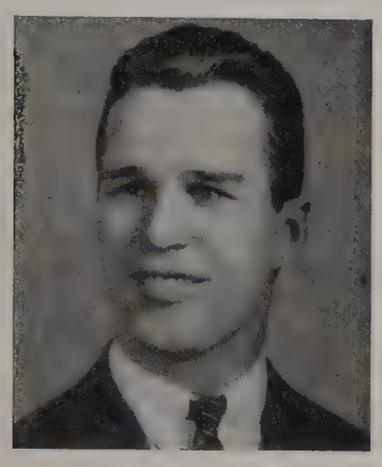
Urges Postgraduate Activity For Athletes

Philadelphia, Pa. — (ACP) — Postgraduate athletic activity should be the goal of all American college athletes, particularly at this critical period, according to Lawson Robertson, Penn and Olympic track and field coach.



"From the standpoint of physical condition it is wrong for a young man who has been competing for eight years through high or prep school and college, upon his graduation from college, suddenly to stop all athletic activity," said Robertson, who in April observes his twenty-fifth anniversary as University of Pennsylvania track coach.

"Most athletes are graduated when they are 21 or 22. That is an age when they haven't yet reached their physical majority. They should participate in some form of athletics until they are at least 25, the age of full physical maturity.

Logan To Be Manager; Seventeen Letters Given

Johnny Spasyk, University of Vermont football quarterback and baseball second baseman, was elected captain of the 1942 diamond aggregation following Saturday's game with the University of Virginia, it was announced by Graduate Manager Sabin C. Abell. Fred P. Logan of Springfield, Mass., was elected manager. Spasyk, from Pittsfield, Mass., succeeds Frankie Taylor, and Logan succeeds Ransom Slack.

JOHN SPASYK

Elected manager of next year's freshman team was Bob Paterson of Barre, while E. H. Blakely of Burlington and R. O. Estey, Jr., of Springfield, were elected assistant managers.

Reno Conti of Barre, shortstop on this spring's freshman team, was elected honorary captain of Kittens, Abell said.

Seventeen were awarded varsity letters as follows:

Clarence Akley, Roy Alberghini, Hank Beauchemin, Bob Carlson, Bob Doherty, Al Shaw, Charles Smith, Johnny Spasyk, Randy Sullivan, Sig Sysko, Frankie Taylor, Hazen Wood, Al Caldwell, Dick Healy, Don Maley and Ransom Slack, varsity manager and H. A. Durfee, freshman manager.

Freshman numerals were awarded to twelve, as follows:

W. C. Bister, R. J. Conti, E. N. Craige, R. E. Deso, D. K. Eddy, J. W. Goodrich, L. N. Hazen, L. F. Killick, Jr., J. Levine, R. C. Lunna, R. W. Thomas and C. A. Urie.

Report Marked Increase In Latin, Greek Courses

Geneva, N. Y.—(ACP)—Interesting effects of recent world developments on the choice of courses by college students are noted at Hobart and William Smith colleges.

Language departments report sudden decreases in enrollment in German, French, and Italian, with increases in Spanish, Greek, and Latin.

Both faculty members and students were hard put to interpret the phenomenal increase in Greek and Latin enrollments.

Adding to the mystery is the fact that, while girls have heretofore made up at least half of the Latin classes, there are almost none in this year's classes. The greater decrease in popularity of Italian as against French and German was explained as a representation of continued respect for French culture and a still high demand for German in scientific fields.

Foti Elected To Captain '42 Tennis

Rynowecer To Manage Team; Letters Awarded

Samuel J. Foti of Rutland, who will enter his senior year at the University of Vermont in the fall, was announced yesterday as captain-elect of the 1942 U. V. M. tennis team. Named manager of the team was B. F. Rynowecer '42 of New York, while Sanford Savin of Bridgeport, Conn., was named freshman manager for 1942. Victor A. Manjoney of Bridgeport, Conn., was named honorary frosh captain. Assistant 1942 managers named were: W. M. Eddy, Burlington; and S. Ziskind, Brockton, Mass.

Varsity tennis letters were awarded to Dick Lynch, Bill Pratt, Capt. J. Edward Simpson, Lawrence A. Simpson, William A. West, Arthur D. Wolk, Samuel J. Foti and Donald W. Thayer, manager.

Many Fine Seniors Leave Vt. Athletics

By WHITEY KILLICK

(Burlington Free Press Feature)

The University of Vermont graduated another class. Today winds up another athletic program of inter-collegiate competition. Pigskin, horsehide and moleskins, all will be relegated to mothballs and memories, in favor of the coveted sheepskin.

But back to the subject. We've been watching Vermont athletic teams for some time. We've seen the Bowmans, Gooches, Yarnalls, Caywards, Beckleys, and all the rest. There were many more. All fine.

Collectively, however, the bunch of athletes that is leaving Vermont's citadels of culture this year, strikes us as one of the finest groups to represent the institution in a long time.

Go Many Ways

They are scattering in many directions and into many lines of endeavor. Some of them, by the grace of gods and the forbearance of the stork, will be able to go on with advanced study or into jobs for which they are trained, others are headed for their year's tour of military duty. A number of the latter group, are already qualified as reserve officers. Those who are not, have had enough basic training in two years, so that they will undoubtedly advance in rapid fashion from the ranks.

Swede Carlson

This lad takes his place along with Johnny Beckley and the Delfausse boys. He made Phi Beta Kappa hands down, and an electrical engineer at that. Three years of smashing tackle play to this lad's credit. He's going to land in an engineering job.

Jim Corbett

Another three-year footballer. Had a year of baseball, too. He'll be out of military reach, inasmuch as he has a job in Rochester, N. Y., with an outfit that makes bombsights, which comes under vital industry.

Hank Beauchemin

Three years of baseball and basketball, as well as one of football. A real basketball stylist and quite a guy. Hank is planning to enter business. There will be no military for the time being, at any rate. May play ball this summer at Windsor.

Paul E. Corley

Basketball captain and three-year veteran. Has a high draft number. Plans on a banking career.

Dick Healy

Three years of varsity baseball and basketball, although a conked knee knocked him out of some baseball competition this year. Dick plans on a business connection, possibly here in Burlington. Volunteers in his home town of Lynbrook, L. I., have kept the draft quotas down and he expects no immediate call.

Don Maley

Three years of basketball and two of baseball for Pop. He is all set for a teaching opportunity, but figures that he'll do a chore for Uncle Sam first.

Boots Lawrence

A slam-bang lineman with three years' experience, along with two more at baseball. Boots took a crack at the Air Service exams, but, we are told, a football injury was responsible for his being turned down. We still think he's got what it takes. He can fight on our side any time.

Bill "Apple" Pye

Played three years of football and two of basketball. Married Jean Butler '40 of Burlington and has a son, Bill "Applesauce" Jr. Bill is headed for the insurance business.

Norm Strassburg

Another veteran football lineman of three seasons. Norm had a crack at base-

Closes College Athletic Career

FRANKIE TAYLOR

Mott To Captain 1942 Track Team

Scored 84 5/6 Points In Five Dual Meets

Sophomore E. Bertrand Mott, Jr., who came to the University of Vermont via Morristown, N. J., and who never participated in track until his freshman year at the University here, was yesterday announced as captain of the 1942 Vermont track team, the first sophomore since Ross and Trudeau were elected co-captains in 1936.

Scores 84 5-6 Points

Mott, a natural born competitor who was at his best when the season was toughest, finished his year by scoring 84⅚ points in five dual meets and the Eastern Intercollegiate A. A. meet at Worcester, Mass. He had two big days—the E. I. C. A. A. when he defeated Tufts' Ed Dugger in the 220-yard dash finals, and the final meet here against Trinity when he took four first places and a third to total 21 points, something no trackman has accomplished at Vermont in a good many years.

Mott participated in the high and low hurdles, the 220-yard dash, and the high and broad jump. He was at his best going over the timbers, although he reached a 220 peak in defeating Dugger at the Easterns. He topped his work off by winning the 100 in addition to his specialties the day Trinity visited here.

Elected manager was Peter S. Czachor of Center Rutland, with Waino W. Suojanen of Ludlow named freshman manager. The assistant managers elected were Harry J. Winchell, Jr., of South Royalton and Ollie F. Swift of Burlington.

Letters Awarded

Varsity letters were awarded to the following:

Al Becker, Burlington; Walt Gage, Burlington; Elmer Nichols, Westminster; Bill Pratt, Rutland; Frankie Taylor, Brattleboro; Herb Long, Oakfield, N. Y.; Norm Stoddard, Groton; Charles Webster, Orleans; Frederick Webster, Orleans; George Daly, Hyde Park; Red Goss, Burlington; Dick Grosvenor, Winchester, Mass.; Bert Mott, Ed O'Connell, Springfield, Mass.; Herbert Parker, Johnson; Ernie St. Mary, Springfield; Hugo Squire, Waterbury; Hal Vreeland, Rutherford, N. J.; Alex Warden, West Barnet; George Bailey Rochester, varsity manager, and L. C. Hunt, Jr., Burlington, freshman manager.

Cats Down Virginia 4-3 In Last Game of Season

Taylor Closes Career in Blaze of Glory; Team Loses Game to Visitors Friday, 10-8

Frankie Taylor brought his great University of Vermont sports career to a close in proper fashion as he "heroed" the Catamounts to a smooth 4 to 3 win over Virginia at Centennial Field Saturday afternoon before a crowd of about 2,000 Commencement week-end guests.

A Story Book Finish

With the score tied at three-all and Bob Carlson tied up in a tight mound duel with Alex Cave of the Cavaliers, Taylor opened the eighth inning by blasting the first pitch across the running track in front of the flag pole for a triple, and moments later scampered home after the catch of Hank Beauchemin's towering fly to right field.

12 Wins and 12 Losses

It seemed proper that these two seniors, the only graduates on the club, provide the spark that brought the win and evened up the two-day series with the Virginians. This game brought the Cats' season to a finish with a .500 percentage, twelve wins stacked up against twelve losses.

Cave started the game off as wild as a hawk. He walked Sig Sysko and Johnny Spasyk without throwing a strike, then tossed three more balls to Frankie Taylor before he got one across the plate. But he eventually walked Frankie, and the sacks were loaded.

Bob Doherty, who had another field day at the plate with three blows in four trips, pounded out a double down the right field line, and Sysko and Spasyk scampered home, Taylor holding third. Beauchmin grounded out and Charlie Smith got a life when the pitcher's throw of his hopper brought first sacker Dick Wiltshire off the bag.

This loaded the sacks again. Hazen Wood grounded to Ted Gillette, who forced Smith at second but failed by a step to get Wood at first to complete the double. Taylor scored on the play, and Randy Sullivan looked at a third strike to end the frame.

Carlson Had Bad Inning

Carlson sailed along on a three-hitter until the sixth when four straight blows shot three runs across for the Cavaliers and tied the game all up. Walsh singled to start it off, and Wiltshire doubled to right. Red Kendall, clean-up hitter, cleaned up with a booming triple to the football stands in left center, and he scored a moment later on Sam Marshall's single.

Then Taylor

That was all the scoring until Taylor tripled to open the eighth and crossed with the winning run. Carlson was touched for two hits in the seventh with one down but got out of trouble, and kept the Cavaliers away from scoring territory after this.

Lose Friday's Game

Battered and befuddled by a series of base hits, errors, free tickets to first and mental lapses, the University of Vermont baseball nine tossed away its first game of its two-day series with the University of Virginia, the invading Cavaliers taking a 10 to 8 decision in a hectic contest.

Something to Yell About

The game did give the fans something to yell about, but the Vermonters' fielding was nothing short of terrible. It was their worst exhibition of the spring as far as defensive play, although inability of Clarence Akley and Lefty Roy Alberghini to find the plate in crucial moments helped the visitors no end.

It started out as if Scotty Scafure, the Cavaliers' stubby right-hander with the looping knuckler, wouldn't be around long, but he was still serving them up at the end and was in possession of the long end of score.

Akley Is Removed

Akley departed in the sixth inning, and Alberghini came in, as usual, in the toughest situation imaginable. Virginia had the sacks loaded, nobody was down, and the score was 5 to 5. Before Lefty could get the side out the three runners on the sacks had crossed and another added, to give Scafure a 9 to 5 lead, to which he clung doggedly the rest of the way.

Vermont slammed through twice in the first frame on hits by Sig Sysko and Hank Beauchemin, and a free ticket to Frankie Taylor, and Bob Doherty, the hitting star of the afternoon, poled a home run to the far recesses of center field with no one on board.

Cavaliers Take Over Lead

This 3 to 0 lead disappeared in two minutes during the top of the fifth, as the Cavaliers suddenly found the range of Akley's deliveries and the Vermont infield fell apart at the seams.

With one down, Bobby Haden, short and broad catcher, booped one into left field. Tad Gillette drew a walk, and when Scafure laid down a sacrifice bunt, Hazen Wood fired high and far over first base, Haden scoring, Gillette going to third and the pitcher ending up at second. Judson Burns smashed a hot liner into left field on which Doherty tried for a shoestring catch, but missed, and the visiting center fielder collected a triple to send two runs across and tie the game up at 3-all.

Burns scored a moment later on Chuck Walsh's double, another ball on which a shoestring catch was made, this time by Taylor. A pop-up and an infield out ended this scoring.

The Cats got back in the lead in the bottom of the fifth on Akley's single, Sysko's sacrifice fielder's choice on which an error was made, a force play at third base, and successive singles by Taylor and Doherty. This made the score 5 to 4, but when the top half of the sixth ended it was 9 to 5, Virginia, and from there on the Cavaliers remained in the lead, although Vermont punched three across in the seventh and went down with the tying run on second base.

Cats Won 12, Lost 12 For .500 Average

Last Saturday's 4 to 3 victory over a strong University of Virginia nine wrote a fitting finis to the Catamount 1941 baseball season, bringing the tally of wins and losses to read 12 victories and 12 defeats, a remarkable record considering the calibre of the teams met on this year's schedule.

The spring jaunt into the South saw the Cats losing a heartbreaker to the powerful University of Pennsylvania aggregate by the score of 5 to 4, but then bounced back to set down George Washington 10 to 3. Then hampered by bad weather, injuries and what not, the Cats dropped five in a row, but scored a 4 to 2 win over Yale in the final encounter of the Southern trip.

Back in the North again, Vermont blasted out a 7 to 4 victory over Wesleyan, dropped two to Trinity and Williams and then humbled the Princeton Tigers 6 to 2.

After losing to Amherst and setting down Colby, the Cats launched into the state series and won four straight victories defeating Middlebury and Norwich twice. Bowdoin and Bates eked out wins but Vermont made up for these by clinching the state title with two victories over St. Mike's and then wound up the season by splitting a two-day stand with the University of Virginia, Prospects are bright for next year's club with only two regulars, Capt. Frankie Taylor and Hank Beauchemin, lost by graduation; although Dick Healy who saw little action this year because of an injury received in the first game and Don Maley who was in the starting lineup for some time but was forced to quit the team late in season.

Several newcomers, notably Sullivan and Doherty worked well this year and with the addition of a number of fine prospects from the frosh team all indications point for an excellent 1942 season.

William E. Jackson, son of the attorney general, recently won a $100 award at Yale University for "superiority in English composition and declamation."

The recipients are Melvin C. Blodgett of Waterford; Vincent J. Cassel of Cuttingsville; Gordon Cochrane of Chelmsford, Mass.; Winston R. Jacobs of Guilford; William M. Mahar of Fair Haven; Robert J. Pratt of Clarendon.

Scholarship, which is the most important consideration in the selection of candidates, is counted at about 50 per cent, with personality and character figured at about 30 per cent, health and physical fitness 25 per cent.

The committee in charge of selections is composed of George F. Eckhard, dean of the college of engineering; Prof. William R. Adams of the college of agriculture; Prof. George Dykhuizen of the department of philosophy; Prof. Rex M. Collier of the department of psychology; Prof. Howard A. About twenty candidates made application this year and were personally interviewed.

No Doubt They'll Crash Through

Now they're going. Life, at times, has a way of being harsh to youthful charm and ability. We think these kids are going to crash through in the more serious game, just as they have in their college years. That extra-curricular training gives 'em an added something when the chips are down, that helps them see things through.

So long, youse guys. We like to think that the old place is just a little better for having had you with us.

Emotion tests given men and women students at Kent State University reveal that men are much more easily stirred by swing music than co-eds.

Illiterates Outnumber College Grads in U. S.

Boston, Mass. (ACP).—Illiterates outnumber college graduates in the United States, according to the Modern Language Association of America.

The association's recent meeting here brought out the following facts:

Among 75,000,000 adults in the United States there are one and two-thirds times as many complete illiterates as college graduates;

One in every seven persons, or 14 per cent, has a high school education;

Approximately half have not reached the eighth grade in school and a majority have such a low general reading ability that it "is not sufficient to provide them with a basis for thinking independently on many matters of importance."

Joseph F. Lechnyr Is Musician of Varied Experience

Mr. Joseph F. Lechnyr, conductor of the University of Vermont R. O. T. C. band, is a musician of varied musical experience who is respected by all professional musicians of the State. After an honorary discharge at the end of the war, from the U. S.
